Executive Summary

Background. In 2017, the Oregon State Bar (OSB or Bar) Futures Task Force recommended the establishment of a limited-scope license for paralegals as one tool to help address an intractable and widening access-to-justice gap among low and moderate-income individuals.1 The OSB Futures Task Force Report urged that:

“We must broaden the options available for persons seeking to obtain legal services, while continuing to strive for full funding of legal aid and championing pro bono representation by lawyers.”

After over a year of discussion among themselves and with other lawyers, judges and community members, the OSB Board of Governors (BOG or Board) was persuaded to move forward with the Task Force recommendation. During this time, the 2018 Barriers to Justice Report2 was released, finding that among legal aid eligible Oregonians, 84 percent of those with a civil legal problem are unable to access legal help, with persons of color disproportionately impacted. Oregon Judicial Department (OJD) data showed that the vast majority of litigants in Oregon dissolution and landlord-tenant proceedings continue to be unrepresented. And many expressed concern that the lack of affordable, accessible legal help is putting substantial strain on the courts, contributing to inequitable outcomes, and eroding public trust in the legal system.

Thus, to further its public service mission to advance a fair, inclusive, and accessible justice system, the BOG voted unanimously in September 2019 to establish the Paraprofessional Licensing Implementation Committee (“PLIC” or “Committee”). The Committee was charged with developing a program for licensing paralegals to perform limited-scope legal services in family law and landlord-tenant law cases, areas of high need where the vast majority of litigants are self-represented. In February 2020, the Board appointed Senior Judge Kirsten Thompson to chair the Committee and established the following charge for the Committee:

Engage stakeholders to develop a regulatory framework for licensing paralegals consistent with the recommendations of the OSB Futures Task Force Report in order to increase access to the justice system while ensuring the competence and integrity of the licensed paralegals and improving the quality of their legal services.

1 The OSB Futures Task Force cited a number of authorities as proof of the access to justice gap in the United States and Oregon, including the 2016 American Bar Association Commission on the Future of Legal Services Report, which found that “[d]espite sustained efforts to expand the public’s access to legal services [over the past century], significant unmet needs persist” and that “[m]ost people living in poverty, and the majority of moderate-income individuals, do not receive the legal help they need.” The OSB Futures Task Force Executive Summary and full report can be found on the OSB website.

PLIC Workgroup Structure and Timeline. The Committee divided its work among three workgroups: the Regulation Workgroup (focused on scope of practice and other post-licensure requirements), the Admissions and Education Workgroup (focused on pre-licensure requirements), and the Stakeholders Workgroup (focused on stakeholder engagement). In developing its recommendations, the Committee sought to balance the Board’s interests in increasing access to justice and in ensuring competent and quality legal services. It was mindful throughout not to create barriers to entry or service that would not necessarily result in increased competence or quality of legal services. In addition, in keeping with Goal 1 of the OSB 2021-2023 Diversity Action Plan, the Committee thoughtfully considered impacts on diversity and equity in developing its recommendations.

The Committee and its workgroups met regularly from the fall of 2020 through the spring of 2022, engaging throughout with a broad range of stakeholders. The Committee itself was made up of two judges, two paralegals, two attorneys that practice family law, two attorneys that practice landlord-tenant law, a representative of the New Lawyers Division and a Public Member. Judge Thompson chaired the Committee. An advisory group was created to provide the Committee with additional input, which included representatives from the OSB House of Delegates, Oregon’s law schools, Oregon legal aid providers, the Oregon Trial Lawyers Association, the Oregon Association of Defense Counsel, the Oregon Circuit Court Judges Association, Oregon Community Colleges and other interested persons.3 Agendas, minutes, and other resources informing the work have been updated regularly on the OSB website and widely disseminated. Judge Dan Harris reached out personally to a number of groups, including the Circuit Court Judges Association, the State Family Law Advisory Committee, the Tribal Court – State Court Forum, and numerous Bar sections and committees. The July Bar Bulletin included an article about the program, and Judge Thompson has given the Oregon Supreme Court updates about the Committee’s work at the Court’s public meetings in December 2020, March 2021, July 2021, and December 2021.

Summary. The Committee’s goal was to craft a program that would increase opportunities for low and moderate income Oregonians to receive legal assistance, especially when they otherwise would have gone without assistance. Two key principles guided the Committee throughout its deliberations: consumer protection and equity.

Generally, the Committee’s recommendations relate to the scope of practice allowed by the license, educational and other requirements to obtain a license, and regulatory requirements post-licensure. The recommendations largely follow those outlined by the OSB Futures Task Force, with notations where they deviate. This report also seeks to respond to specific questions and feedback raised by the Court, the BOG, and others during the public comment process.

To summarize, the Committee recommends that licensed paralegals (LPs) be permitted to provide a broad range of legal advice and assistance in the areas of family law and landlord-tenant law. LPs should be prohibited from providing certain types of assistance and in specific types of cases, where concerns about client protection outweigh any increase in access to legal help.

3 Rosters are available on the OSB website.
To encourage a diversity of applicants, the Committee recommends that a broad range of educational backgrounds be accepted as a prerequisite for licensure. To ensure the requisite skills and knowledge, all should be required to have a minimum of 1500 hours of experience working under attorney supervision prior to licensure\(^4\), as well as 20 hours of coursework in topics directly relevant to their practice (e.g. ethics, civil procedure, family law, landlord-tenant law). In addition, applicants should be evaluated for character, fitness, and competence prior to receiving a license.

Finally, the Committee recommends that licensed paralegals be subject to the same regulatory requirements post-licensure as attorneys, including mandatory malpractice coverage, the use of IOLTA accounts, contributions to the Client Security Fund, and compliance with Rules of Professional Conduct specifically for LPs. These regulatory requirements are not unduly burdensome, and serve important consumer protection functions. The Committee also recommends that licensed paralegals be subject to the same restrictions on fee sharing and firm ownership as currently apply to attorneys.

The Committee would like to thank the Board of Governors for its leadership in moving this initiative forward and for its trust in and support of the Committee’s work. The Committee would also like to thank the dozens of advisory members and interested parties who have contributed their time and effort throughout this process, and without whose contributions this report would not be possible.

Legal Paraprofessional Programs in Other States

The Committee considered the experiences of other states that have implemented or are considering implementing various types of limited scope licenses to provide legal services. Washington, Arizona, Utah, and the Province of Ontario currently have legal paraprofessional programs. Other jurisdictions are in various stages of developing programs.\(^5\) \(^4\) The one exception is those with a JD, who would be required to have 750 hours of supervised practice.

\(^5\) Minnesota is in the second year of a pilot project that will run through 2023. Minnesota’s temporary licensure program was one of the inspirations for the temporary licensure rules in this report. California is moving forward with a proposal that has been undergoing a public comment period. Several other states are developing programs, including Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, New Mexico, Nevada and both North and South Carolina. In Canada, Ontario has a longstanding paraprofessional program with thousands of license paralegals and Saskatchewan is exploring creating one.

Washington’s Limited License Legal Technician (LLLT) Program

The experience in Washington is particularly instructive and worth discussion because it was the first state in the nation to consider the use of licensed paralegals and because it recently sunset its program.

In 2021, the Stanford Center on the Legal Profession released a report entitled “The Surprising Success of Washington State’s Limited License Legal Technician Program (report).” The report lays out the reasons the program was terminated, and how those reasons may differ from the conventional wisdom that the program was unsuccessful.

According to the report, Washington LLLTs successfully provided high quality legal services to clients who otherwise would likely have appeared in court without representation. In fact, many LLLTs continue to provide such services to this day, as those already licensed have been permitted to continue practicing even after the program’s termination. LLLTs improved outcomes for these clients and, importantly, brought legal services to diverse communities throughout Washington that have traditionally struggled to find representation at all.

Two often cited reasons for the program’s termination are cost and lack of interest, but the report argues that these explanations are inadequate.

According to the report, at the time the program was terminated, there were over 200 students on track to become LLLTs, and interest in the program was increasing rather than decreasing. For example, about twice as many applicants sat for the February 2021 exam as had for recent prior exams.

As to the issue of cost, the report noted the program cost $1.3 million over a period of seven years, which is less than $200,000 per year. This comes out to about $7 per Washington attorney per year. While reasonable people can disagree on whether it is appropriate for attorneys to subsidize the program, the actual cost imposed on attorneys was modest. It is also worth considering that the amount of time the program ran was likely not sufficient for the program to become self-funding, as was Washington’s intention.

While Washington’s program did manage to license many LLLTs, it is also worth noting that the program suffered from structural deficiencies that likely reduced the number of applicants. For example, the requirement for 3000 hours experience created practical and financial barriers to applicants who would have otherwise been well suited to become LLLTs. Washington LLLTs were also required to take courses offered only by law schools as a prerequisite to licensure. Law school proved expensive, and applicants were unable to secure student loans for such courses because they were not candidates for a law degree. Proposals were in place to reduce many of these barriers at the time the program was terminated.

The Committee learned from the Washington experience. The Committee’s proposal reduces the number of experiential hours by half, aligning with the requirements of the Province of Ontario and other US states. Course requirements can be met through any institution willing to provide the courses. Allowing an immediate temporary license for highly experienced paralegals and those licensed by other jurisdictions provides a way to quickly scale up while details of the program (e.g. testing and portfolio requirements) are developed and newly interested applicants populate the pipeline.

There will be costs associated with an Oregon LP program, particularly with respect to the admissions components. In order to keep such costs to a minimum, the Committee originally recommended (in line with that of the Futures Task Force) not to conduct an independent assessment of the applicants’ competence. Feedback received during the comment process resulted in the Committee changing its recommendation to require an independent assessment through either an exam or portfolio of work. Application and license fees will undoubtedly help to offset those costs, but it is unknown when or if the program will ultimately be self-sustaining. It is worth noting, however, that an Oregon LP program was never intended as a revenue source, or even as a revenue neutral program, but as a necessary step in advancing the OSB’s access to justice mission.

Admissions and Education Workgroup Recommendations

The Admissions and Education Workgroup was charged with recommending specific requirements for licensure. These include experiential and educational requirements, creation of multiple pathways to licensure, evaluation of applicant competency, and continuing legal education requirements.

Recommendation 1.2 of the OSB Futures Task Force provided that:

An applicant should have an associate’s degree or higher and should graduate from an ABA-approved or institutionally accredited paralegal studies program, including approved coursework in the subject matter of the license. Highly experienced paralegals and applicants with a J.D. degree should be exempt from the requirement to graduate from a paralegal studies program.

The Committee agrees with this recommendation, including the exception for highly experienced paralegals and the exception for applicants with a J.D.

The Admissions and Education Workgroup was guided by the same two principles of competence and equity as was the Regulatory Workgroup and the entire PLIC. To that end, the workgroup focused on what education and training was necessary to demonstrate that an LP was competent to represent a client. It carefully considered what might be needed to expand the pool of competent LPs, paying special attention to diversity and equity, and encouraging the participation of those working in law or law-adjacent jobs in rural communities throughout Oregon. In reviewing existing and proposed paraprofessional licensing programs within the US and Canada, it asked whether those programs met these principles for an Oregon program.

The recommendations of the workgroup and the full Committee reflect the dual goals of public protection and increasing access to justice by ensuring licensure is available to Oregonians of diverse backgrounds and experience. The Committee recommends numerous methods of satisfying the education requirements in particular in an effort to ensure that the program is open to all well qualified applicants, and to avoid some of the barriers to entry that have been cited in Washington and other states.

The Committee recommends that a board of volunteer lawyers, members of the public, and ultimately licensed paralegals, be charged with reviewing and evaluating LP applicant competence, character, and fitness. The Committee also recommends a number of requirements for licensure that would apply to all applicants. Many of these general standards were discussed by both the Regulation Workgroup and Admissions and Education Workgroup.
General Standards for Licensure

The Committee recommends that LPs meet character and fitness requirements that are developed specifically for LPs and that are substantially the same as those that currently apply to lawyers. An LP should have a record of conduct that demonstrates a level of judgment and diligence likely to result in competent representation in the best interests of their clients and that justifies the trust of those clients, adversaries, courts, and the public concerning the professional duties and obligations owed to each group.

The following chart briefly summarizes the Committee’s recommendation for education and experience requirements for licensed paralegals. Details of each of these pathways are in the sections that follow.

- All applicants must have 500 hours of experience in family law and/or 250 hours of experience in landlord-tenant law for endorsement in those areas.
- All applicants must complete 20 hours of designated pre-licensure coursework.
- All applicants will be required to demonstrate competence in skills and knowledge necessary to engage in the activities within the scope of license, through either an exam or portfolio of work, or some combination of the two.

<sup>9</sup> This pathway could mirror attorney reciprocity rules currently in use, but will require evaluation of LP-type programs in other states to determine which closely enough mirror the Oregon program to be applicable.
Educational Requirements

The Committee recommends that an applicant be required to possess one of the following educational backgrounds in order to qualify for licensure:

- An associate’s degree or higher in paralegal studies, from an accredited institution;\(^{10}\)
- A juris doctor from an ABA accredited law school; or
- A bachelor’s degree or higher in any course of study.\(^{11}\)

The first of these two options were recommended specifically by the Futures Task Force. The third is a recommended change from the Futures Task Force Recommendations. The goal of this recommendation is to encourage a larger and more diverse cross-section of Oregonians to seek licensure, including those who do not have a traditional legal education.

Experiential Requirements

One of the cornerstone goals of the Committee was to create a system that would license LPs who are qualified and competent to represent clients. The Committee believed that requiring substantial experience working as a paralegal under attorney supervision was a critical component to obtaining that level of competency. Experiential learning is widely recognized as an important method of developing and retaining skills and knowledge.

As was recommended by the Futures Task Force, the Committee recommends a minimum of 1,500 hours of “substantive paralegal experience” obtained under the supervision of an Oregon licensed attorney. Completion of the required minimum experience must be certified by the supervising attorney. Attorney certification of the required experience is a key component of ensuring that LPs have the minimum core competencies to practice independently in the future.

The 1,500 hours recommended by the Committee is equivalent to the required experience under Utah’s program and half the hours originally required by Washington. The relatively high number of hours required in Washington has been considered a significant barrier to entry to some otherwise qualified candidates, and has been cited as one of several reasons that Washington had fewer LLLT’s than might

\(^{10}\) The Futures Task Force originally recommended that licensure require a degree from an ABA-approved program. The Admissions and Education Workgroup, with the assistance and advise of the educators on the advisory committee, noted that restricting applicants to ABA-approved programs would limit the education options to only one community college in Oregon that currently has ABA-approval. Additionally, the workgroup noted that there are a number of important reasons a community college may choose not to seek ABA-approval for its paralegal program, the greatest of which are costs and administration.

\(^{11}\) Some members of the Committee and advisory group have expressed disagreement with this third option, arguing that the program should not go this far beyond the educational waivers explicitly referenced in the Futures Task Force Report. They argue that, with the exception of the highly experienced paralegals who are able to substitute additional experience or certifications for the required education, some amount of legal education should be required of all applicants, and that a bachelor’s degree in an unrelated subject ought not to be treated as equivalent to an associate’s degree in paralegal studies. have been hoped. Ensuring that Oregon’s program is open and accessible to a diverse pool of applicants is one of the reasons the Committee chose to go with the number of hours required in Utah.

The Committee also recommends that individual LPs could be licensed to practice in family law, landlord-tenant law, or both. To that end, the Committee recommends that all applicants have a minimum of 500 hours in family law and/or 250 hours in landlord-tenant law for licensure in those areas.

Additionally, the Committee recommends that applicants who have a JD from an ABA accredited law school be permitted to satisfy the experience requirement with 750 hours of experience rather than the full 1,500. However, these applicants should still be required to meet the minimum 500 hours in family law and/or 250 in landlord-tenant law in order to be licensed in those areas. The Committee originally considered waiving the 500/250-hour requirements for JDs, but was persuaded by public feedback that law school was not an adequate substitute for the substantive subject area experience gained through working as a paralegal in those areas.

Education Waivers

The Committee recommends waiver of the standard education requirements for several categories of existing paralegals.

First, as recommended by the Futures Task Force, the Committee recommends a waiver of the educational requirements listed above for individuals who demonstrate either five years or 7,500 hours of substantive experience, with at least 1,500 hours of substantive experience in the last three years. These applicants would still be subject to other admissions requirements discussed below.

In addition, the Committee recommends education waivers be provided to three groups of practicing paralegals who may not have any specific college degree, but who also have demonstrated substantial experience in the practice areas:

- an applicant who possesses paralegal credentials from a nationally recognized paralegal association; 12
- an applicant who is an active-duty, retired, former, or reserve member of a component of any branch of the US Armed Forces, qualified in a military operation specialty with a minimum rank of E6 or above in a paralegal specialty rate as a Staff Sergeant (Army and Marines), Petty Officer First Class (Navy), Technical Sergeant (Air Force), or higher as a supervisory paralegal within the noted branch of service; and
- an applicant with an equivalent license in another jurisdiction. This process could be modeled after reciprocity rules for attorneys, and would require an evaluation of which other states have programs that are sufficiently comparable to the Oregon program to be appropriate. 13

12 The Committee recommends that qualifying paralegal credentials would include one of the following: The National Association of Legal Assistants (NALA) Certified Paralegal Exam® (CP) with current CP® Credentials; The National Federation of Paralegal Associations’ (NFPA) Paralegal Advanced Competency Exam® (PACE) with current RP® Credentials; or Paralegal Core Competency Exam® (PCCE) with current CRP™ credentials; or The NALS Professional Paralegal (PP) Exam with current PP™ Credentials.
These later groups would be required to demonstrate the normal 1,500 hours of substantive experience required for applicants who meet the standard educational requirements.

Allowing these education waivers was seen by the Committee as an important step in recruiting a diverse pool of well qualified applicants to the program. Allowing for appropriate reciprocity rules in particular was seen as removing a barrier to entry that would otherwise discourage applicants who might have considered coming to Oregon.

Pre-Licensure Coursework Requirements

The Committee recommends that all applicants have completed 20 hours\(^{14}\) of specifically designated courses specified by the Oregon State Bar. These courses could be offered either by the Bar directly or through Oregon Community Colleges working in consultation with the Bar. The Committee recommends that these courses include:

1. two hours on legal ethics for paralegals;
2. one hour on IOLTA account administration;
3. two hours on Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure to include:
   a. Oregon State Specific Court Practice for Trial Court Rules,
   b. Supplementary Local Rules; and
   c. Uniform Trial Court Rules;
4. one hour on identifying scope-of-license issues and practical identification of mandatory referral scenarios;
5. one hour on limited scope law practice management skills for newly licensed paraprofessionals;
6. one hour on mental health/substance abuse in the legal profession; and
7. the remaining hours on the practice areas in which the applicant seeks endorsement.

All courses must be accredited by the Oregon State Bar, which should include continuing legal education (CLE) programs approved for attorneys or paralegals.

\(^{13}\) The Committee recommends that for reciprocity purposes, the 1,500 hours of required paralegal experience could be satisfied while working under the supervision of an attorney licensed in another jurisdiction.

\(^{14}\) The term “hours” refers to actual hours, as are used for OSB CLE requirements, and not to “credit hours” as used in some educational settings. Thus, 20 hours of pre-licensure coursework is intended to take approximately 20 actual hours to complete.
Evaluation of Core Competencies – Applicant Testing and Portfolio Submissions

The Committee spent considerable time discussing how to evaluate the competency of a potential LP. As with attorneys, identifying specific skill sets or attributes is difficult, and thus often not explicitly required as part of licensure. However, the Committee concluded it was important to set explicit expectations regarding LPs’ core competencies.

The Committee recommends that a board or committee of volunteer lawyers, members of the public, and eventually LPs be authorized to assess whether applicants meet core competencies and make admissions recommendations to the Oregon Supreme Court. While some applicants will have gone through an Oregon-based paralegal studies program that may have considered these core competencies, many will have taken other pathways. The Committee makes no recommendation regarding curricula of educational institutions and does not recommend that the Bar approve individual paralegal programs.

The Committee recommends the Bar develop at least two methods for verifying an applicant’s competency in both ethics and scope of practice, with strong emphasis on the need for flexibility in how to verify those competencies, and with the intention that an applicant could eventually use either method, or a combination of both, to satisfy licensure requirements:

1. The first method would be for the applicant to pass a written examination focused on legal ethics and scope of practice issues.
2. The second method would be the presentation of a portfolio of work to the licensure board that demonstrates competency to engage in activities within the scope of practice, as determined by the board.

The Committee understands that for logistical reasons, a testing option is a more straightforward assessment that could verify the applicant’s competency through an examination. The Bar could choose to create and administer such an exam or rely on an existing assessment such as the Multistate Professional Responsibility Examination as the first option for verifying competency.

The portfolio, while a more equitable option than a standardized test, is more complicated in nature and will take time for the Bar to develop. The portfolio could include either sample work product or verification of the completion of various assessments to the licensure board that demonstrate the applicant’s competency to engage in activities within the scope of practice, as outlined by the board. One possible example for verifying ethics may be providing proof of completing an ethics course offered by a law school or paralegal program.

The Committee notes that there are similarities between these recommendations and the recommendation of the Alternatives to the Bar Exam Committee with regard to the possible use of a portfolio requirement for attorney licensure. It is possible that efficiencies could be found in developing both of these programs simultaneously.
An example of core competencies, as applied to attorneys, was set out in the Institute for the Advancement of the American Legal System report Building a Better Bar\textsuperscript{15}. In the report, the author lays out the following twelve core competencies:

- the ability to act professionally and in accordance with the rules of professional conduct;
- an understanding of legal processes and sources of law;
- an understanding of threshold concepts in many subjects;
- the ability to interpret legal materials;
- the ability to interact effectively with clients;
- the ability to identify legal issues;
- the ability to conduct research;
- the ability to communicate as a lawyer;
- the ability to see the “big picture” of client matters;
- the ability to manage a law-related workload responsibly;
- the ability to cope with the stresses of legal practice; and
- the ability to pursue self-directed learning.

While these are intended for lawyers, the Committee recommends that the Bar adopt a similar list of competencies for LPs.

Competencies a portfolio or a test might address could include:

1. knowledge and application of legal ethics;
2. knowledge and application of the scope in the specific practice area in which the candidate seeks endorsement;
3. knowledge and application of requirements to refer clients outside of that scope;
4. knowledge of and ability to competently apply the fundamental principles of law;
5. ability to competently undertake fundamental legal skills commensurate with being a licensed paralegal, such as legal reasoning and analysis, recollection of complex factual information and integration of such information with complex legal theories, problem-solving, and recognition and resolution of ethical dilemmas;
6. ability to:
   a) communicate honestly, candidly, and civilly with clients, licensed paraprofessionals, attorneys, courts, and others;
   b) conduct financial dealings in a reasonable, honest, and trustworthy manner;
   c) conduct oneself with respect for and in accordance with the law;
   d) demonstrate regard for the rights, safety, and welfare of others;

e) demonstrate good judgment on behalf of clients and in conducting one’s professional business;

f) act ethically, diligently, reliably, and punctually in fulfilling obligations to clients, adversaries, courts, and others;

g) comply with deadlines and time constraints;

h) maintain confidentiality of client information and client data.

Temporary Practice Rules

To facilitate the program implementation, the Committee recommends that the Bar establish temporary practice rules analogous to those that currently exist for certified law students\textsuperscript{16}. As with certified law students, applicants admitted to temporary practice would be permitted to practice only under the supervision of an attorney. In addition to the normal benefits of temporary practice rules; these rules would permit the Bar to begin licensing some LPs on a temporary basis while the program is developed.

To qualify for temporary licensure, an applicant should have to demonstrate:

- their intention to become a licensed LP in Oregon;
- that they currently meet the educational requirements, or qualify for an education waiver;
- that they have 1,500 hours of “substantive paralegal experience” under the supervision of an Oregon licensed attorney, including 500 hours in family law and/or 250 hours in landlord tenant law; and
- that they have completed five of the required 20 hours of pre-licensure coursework. These 5 hours must include 2 hours in ethics, 1 hour on IOLTA compliance, 1 hour on scope of practice, and 1 hour on mental health and substance abuse.

Applicants who meet those criteria would be permitted to practice for up to one year, under attorney supervision, without meeting testing requirements or submitting a portfolio, and without completing the remaining 15 required hours of pre-licensure coursework.

The Committee considered inclusion of temporary practice rules to be another important step in removing barriers to entry to the program – especially for low and moderate income applicants. By allowing individuals with substantial experience and who meet most requirements for licensure to begin their practice while completing licensure requirements, Oregon will make entry into the program both more desirable and more feasible for many well qualified applicants.

\textsuperscript{16} Section 13 of the Admissions Rules of the Oregon State Bar outlines the Law Student Appearance Program, which would be the model for this proposal.
Regulation Workgroup Recommendations

The Regulation Workgroup was charged with recommending a state-level regulatory framework for implementing paraprofessional licensing. This framework, as defined by the Futures Task Force, includes defining the scope of practice\(^{17}\) for LPs in two specific subject-matter areas (family law and landlord-tenant law), recommending appropriate tasks for LPs within that scope of practice, and identifying current or new regulations and rules to be revised or added to address LP licensing.

Scope of Practice – Family Law\(^{18}\)

The Committee recommends that LPs be authorized to provide legal advice and assistance in family law matters within the parameters listed below. The list includes specific actions within family law matters that LPs should be allowed to engage in, as well as specific subject areas in which LP participation should be allowed. Finally, specific types of family law cases that the workgroup recommends should be outside the scope of an LP’s practice (that LPs should not be allowed to engage in) are also provided. These recommendations were based on the experience of workgroup members, input from the Committee as a whole, advisory members, and interested outside parties, and a review of the work of other states addressing similar issues. In particular, the workgroup considered whether a subject area or procedure is typically considered especially difficult or complex, and what might benefit the greatest number of family law or landlord-tenant litigants who might otherwise be self-represented and could benefit from the assistance of an LP.

1. Family Law Tasks within the Scope of LP License

The Committee recommends that LPs be allowed to engage in the following tasks in the course of a family law case (within the subject-matter limitations listed below):

- Meet with potential clients to evaluate and determine needs and goals, and provide legal advice. As part of such a meeting, the LP would make an initial determination whether the potential client’s concerns are within the scope of the LP’s practice or whether a referral to an attorney would be appropriate.

- Enter a contractual relationship to represent a natural person (not including a business entity). Most family law litigants are “natural persons.” Very few family law litigants are business entities, and those that are business entities usually come into family law cases through more complex procedural mechanisms such as intervention or interpleading. Allowing LPs to represent only natural persons in family law cases would not unduly limit... the kinds of cases they could engage in and is consistent with the workgroup’s recommendation that LPs not engage in cases involving interpleading or intervenors.

- Select and complete pattern forms; draft and serve pleadings and documents, including orders and judgments. In many basic cases, standard documents and pleadings are already available through the OJD or local courts. In such situations, LPs would be able to assist litigants in form selection and completion, much as family law courthouse facilitators do currently. Unfortunately, not all counties have courthouse facilitators, and even those that do may not be able to assist all self-represented litigants, particularly those who are not fluent in English. LPs would be able to explain the purpose of documents to litigants, help determine the appropriate document to use, help customize the information provided in the documents or pleadings to the litigants’ benefit, and provide clarity and accuracy in filling out the documents consistent with the requirements of case law, Oregon Revised Statutes, Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure, Uniform Trial Court Rules, and Supplementary Local Rules. LP assistance with pleadings would also presumably help to clarify the nature of a litigant’s position for the opposing party and the court and enable the court to proceed more efficiently.

- File documents and pleadings with the court. Many documents are now required to be filed with the court electronically. While some courts provide access to self-represented litigants for electronic filing, it may be difficult or confusing, especially for those not used to doing so, who are not fluent in English, or who need to file after physical access to the court is closed. LPs could assist such litigants, presumably at a lower cost than most attorneys.

- Draft, serve, and complete discovery and issue subpoenas. Family law discovery practice often includes such procedures and pleadings as requests for production of documents; responses to requests for production of documents; protective orders; drafting and advising on motions to compel; conferring with the opposing party or their representative; subpoenas, uniform support declarations, requests for admissions; and motions for and responses to motions for custody and parenting-time evaluations, drug and alcohol assessments, psychological evaluations, inspection of property, real and personal property appraisals, and vocational assessments. Requesting or responding to such requests are often crucial for the just determination of family law matters. Competent and comprehensive discovery practice can be time-consuming and require substantial follow-up. The rules and requirements related to discovery practice may also be complex and confusing for those not familiar with them. LPs would be familiar with discovery requirements and procedures and be able to assist litigants in this crucial aspect of the process.

- Attend depositions, but not take or defend them. The Committee recommends that LPs be permitted to assist with scheduling and compelling deposition appearances and preparing clients for being deposed and for taking a deposition, but that they not be allowed to take depositions or defend them. This restriction is based on depositions being a form of testimony under oath that requires knowledge and application of the rules of evidence to preserve objections or other evidentiary issues for possible later use in court. Knowledge and application of the Evidence Code is a basic skill required for taking and defending a deposition that is beyond the scope of LP practice.
• Prepare for, participate in, and represent a party in settlement discussions, including mediation and settlement meetings. LPs would help enforce the requirement that litigants attend alternative dispute resolution, advise clients in advance on what to expect, and help them prepare so that such sessions might be more efficient and effective.

• Prepare parties for judicial settlement conferences. LPs would help prepare clients regarding what to expect and help them prepare so that such sessions will be more efficient and effective. LPs could attend these sessions to advise clients on their options and discuss various proposals.

• Participate in and assist with hearing, trial, and arbitration preparation. LPs would prepare clients for court appearances (e.g., prepare clients for direct-examination, cross-examination, and oral argument; issue subpoenas; prepare witnesses; prepare and submit exhibits; draft asset and liability statements; write memoranda to provide to the court).

• Attend court appearances to provide support and assistance in procedural and ex parte matters. LPs would be allowed to sit at counsel table during court appearances and respond to questions by the court in standard procedural family law appearances, ex parte matters, evidentiary proceedings, and informal domestic relations trials. LPs would not affirmatively represent a client directly during evidentiary hearings or other similar court appearances. For example, an LP would not be allowed to make evidentiary objections, offer exhibits, or question witnesses. An LP would be able to assist a client to organize, mark, and submit exhibits that the client would offer.

• Review and provide legal advice to clients regarding a variety of documents, including pleadings, notices, opinion letters, court orders, and judgments. Informing litigants about the significance of a court’s determination and the right to appeal and the related timing would be an important service, even if LPs are restricted from assisting in the appeals process. LPs could also provide referrals if a client is considering an appeal.

• Refer clients to attorneys for tasks or subject matter outside the scope of LP representation. This ongoing obligation would be a requirement throughout an LP’s representation, especially if the case came to include something beyond the LP’s original expectation during the initial assessment.¹⁹

2. Family Law Practice outside the Scope of LP License

The Committee recommends that the following types of cases, sometimes broadly considered part of or related to family law, be outside an LP’s scope of practice:

• Appeals (administrative, trial court, and court of appeals), except de novo appeals to the circuit court of administrative determinations to establish or modify child support. Appeals have their own procedural rules and deadlines and can be quite complicated. This is especially true of appeals from trial court determinations and decisions of the Oregon Court of Appeals. While some self-represented family law litigants manage to navigate the process on their own, the small volume of such parties makes this complicated area less compelling for inclusion as a part of LP practice at this time, especially when balancing the potential benefit compared to the additional training LP candidates would require to be proficient. In the future, if there is substantial demand from self-represented litigants for LP assistance with appeals, expansion into this substantive area (with the requirement of additional education) could be considered.

There is, however, a situation in which LP assistance in an “appeal” should be permitted. In certain circumstances, appeals of administrative child support judgments may be taken to the circuit court for a hearing de novo. ORS 25.513(6). When such appeals concern the establishment or modification of child support, they involve a circumscribed and limited subject matter area that primarily covers information an LP would be expected to know already as part of a circuit court trial-level practice. If LPs are permitted to assist in the preparation of cases before a trial court to establish or modify child support, they should be permitted to assist in the preparation of de novo appeals from administrative child support determinations in these specific instances as well.

- Stalking protective orders. This area of the law often involves unrelated parties, falls under a separate chapter of the Oregon Revised Statutes, and is not customarily seen as falling within the area of family law (or landlord-tenant law).

- Juvenile court cases (dependency or delinquency). Both dependency and delinquency law are complex, fall under an entirely different statutory framework than family law cases, and involve multiple parties. Delinquency cases are similar to adult criminal cases and require an understanding of criminal law. Dependency cases almost always involve Child Protective Services and can lead to a termination of parental rights. Financially qualified trial-level litigants are generally entitled to court-appointed counsel in both types of juvenile court proceedings. These factors mitigate against allowing LPs to represent litigants if juvenile court cases are involved.

However, there are some juvenile dependency situations where limited LP assistance might be appropriate. In family law cases with consolidated or related associated juvenile court proceedings where juvenile court involvement may not be initiated or may be dismissed if a divorce, separation, custody case, or modification is initiated (and child custody therefore secured for a protective parent), limited LP assistance in the family law case may be appropriate. This is especially true since court-appointed counsel in juvenile dependency cases often refuse to assist clients in their family law action because it would be outside the terms of their appointment contract. Allowing an LP to assist in a divorce related to a juvenile court proceeding would, of course, apply only if the associated divorce proceedings were also otherwise within the LP’s scope of practice.

- Modifications of custody, parenting time, or child support when the initial court order originates outside Oregon. When the initial court order originated outside Oregon, modifications of custody and parenting time may require application of the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA). Modifying a child-support order when the initial court order originated outside Oregon may require application of the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act (UIFSA). Both statutes are complex and may require contact and working with officials from other jurisdictions. It is not likely that restricting LP practice in this more complicated area would dramatically limit the number of possible cases available for LPs.

- Premarital or postnuptial agreements (drafting, reviewing, or litigating). Premarital and postnuptial agreements often involve substantial or complicated assets and may have significant consequences if not properly drafted or implemented. If significant assets are in play and something is found to have “gone wrong” with the drafting, there may be substantial malpractice liability. Such agreements may also be considered contracts, with contract law applied to their interpretation and enforcement. As such, including these agreements in LP practice would require extensive additional education in contract law, outside the normal scope of family law. Additionally, in the experience of the family law practitioners on the workgroup, premarital and postnuptial agreements do not comprise a large portion of family law practice, and restricting LPs from this type of work would not substantially impact the number of litigants likely to seek LP assistance.

- Cohabitation agreements (drafting, reviewing, or litigating). As with premarital and postnuptial agreements, cohabitation agreements involve primarily contract law and are not within traditional family law practice. Including these agreements in LP practice would require extensive additional education in contract law, outside the normal scope of family law.

- Qualified domestic relations orders (QDROs) and domestic relations orders (DROs) (drafting, reviewing, or litigating). Drafting DROs can be complex with substantial monetary consequences if mistakes are made. As a result, many attorneys who practice primarily or even exclusively in family law often get assistance from specialized attorneys for QDROs and DROs. While prohibited from drafting such provisions themselves, LPs should be allowed to use language for QDROs and DROs provided by these specialized attorneys.

- Third-party custody and visitation cases (ORS 109.119). The statute involved in third-party custody and visitation cases is quite complex. Multiple parties may be involved. Specific detailed and necessary facts must be alleged. Other forms of relief, such as those involving guardianship of a minor, may also be implicated. The subject area is best left to attorneys.

- Unregistered domestic partnerships (“Beal v. Beal cases”). Litigation involving unregistered domestic partnerships (as opposed to registered domestic partnerships) can be contract cases or de facto spouse cases involving complicated issues, case law, and the application of facts to the law, including contract law. Including this area of law in LP practice would require extensive additional education in contract law, outside the normal scope of family law.

- Cases with third-party intervenors. Specific facts must be alleged to intervene, resulting often in more complicated procedural requirements.

- Military divorces unless stipulated. These cases often involve the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (SCRA) and military retirement benefits and requirements that can be extremely complex. Even with this complexity, when both parties agree on the dissolution terms, it seems reasonable to allow LPs to assist in finalizing the divorce. A note of caution is warranted: while an LP should be allowed to work on military divorces when the parties agree to all dissolution terms, it would be wise in such situations for a litigant to consult with an attorney well versed in military divorces to understand the impact of what they are agreeing to and for the LP to insist that such a consultation occur before helping to memorialize the divorce terms.

- Remedial contempt when confinement is requested. Contempt can be punitive or remedial. Punitive contempt can be initiated only by a district attorney, may result in confinement, and is therefore more like a criminal proceeding, which is outside the scope of family law practice. Remedial contempt, when there is a request for confinement, is similar in that regard and therefore should be outside the scope of LP practice as well. LPs should be able to assist with remedial contempt only when confinement is not before the court.

- Stand-alone Family Abuse Prevention Act (FAPA) cases (ORS 107.700–107.735). Petitioners in FAPA cases can often access no-cost assistance from outside advocates available in many courthouses. Respondents seldom have that option. For many respondents, FAPA cases can raise the prospect of additional significant related legal actions being filed against them, including criminal complaints or juvenile court petitions. The decisions made in responding to a FAPA order may also implicate such things as access to the party’s child or the ability to possess a firearm. While the consequences of the FAPA case alone may have a huge impact on the litigants, these possible additional major legal repercussions make the situation even more complex. Competent advice to a respondent in a FAPA case should always include consideration of other possible legal implications, which LPs would not be educated in. Therefore, LPs should not represent litigants in FAPA cases.

However, concern has also been expressed that if LPs are prohibited from representing litigants if a FAPA claim is raised, then an opposing party may raise a baseless FAPA claim in order to disqualify an otherwise competent LP from a divorce case. Therefore, the Committee recommends that if an LP represents a party in an already-existing family law matter, that LP should not be disqualified from continuing such representation if the opposing party files a FAPA petition. In that scenario, the LP should be allowed to continue representing the FAPA respondent or petitioner, with the strong recommendation to have their client consult with an appropriate attorney regarding possible related legal consequences.

- Elderly Persons and Persons with Disabilities Abuse Prevention Act (EPPDAPA) cases, Sexual Abuse Protection Order (SAPO) cases, guardianships, and adoptions. All of these listed areas of law are outside the standard area of family law practice. Guardianships and adoptions in particular are complex and have their own specific procedural requirements. EPPDAPA and SAPO cases have concerns similar to those for FAPA cases, as cited above. Therefore, cases that involve EPPDAPA, SAPO, guardianships, or adoptions should be excluded from LP practice.
Scope of Practice – Landlord-Tenant Law

The Committee recommends that LPs be authorized to provide legal advice and offer guidance, document preparation services, and courtroom representation on landlord-tenant matters as outlined below. It is anticipated that granting LPs authority to serve in this capacity will increase the availability of legal services to both landlords and tenants and help close the access-to-justice gap. The consequences of not having access to legal assistance in landlord-tenant matters can be severe. Tenants may be evicted despite having meritorious defenses, and they may be unable to obtain basic housing rights guaranteed by the Oregon Residential Landlord and Tenant Act (ORLTA, ORS chapter 90), including freedom from illegal treatment and access to decent, safe, and sanitary housing. Landlords may need guidance in following the law and may not understand their rights or responsibilities, which may have substantial financial consequences. For example, errors in a required written notice may cause the notice to be defective, delay a meritorious eviction, or cause the loss of an eviction lawsuit resulting in the potential for attorney fees against the landlord even when their claim is well founded.

Landlords already enjoy the option of representation in circuit court forcible eviction and detainer actions (FEDs) by a nonlawyer agent (ORS 105.130(4)). Such non-lawyer agents, however, are likely to represent those landlords that have a large number of residential tenants and are in court often. Landlords with a small number of residential rental units and who are not in court often are less likely to have access to the services of nonlawyer agents already allowed in FED actions. Tenants do not enjoy a reciprocal right to nonlawyer assistance. Authorizing LPs in landlord-tenant cases would help balance this disparity by providing both tenants and “small number” landlords the option of working with a knowledgeable LP. Landlords who currently rely on nonlawyer agents would also have the additional choice of representation by an LP who is trained, licensed, and covered by the Professional Liability Fund (PLF).

The Committee recommends that LPs’ scope of practice on landlord-tenant issues be limited to those concerning residential rental agreements under ORLTA and the FED provisions found at ORS 105.126–105.168. The scope of practice would be limited to only residential tenancies. The specific types of cases that the Committee recommends should be outside the scope of an LP’s practice in landlord-tenant cases (that LPs should not be allowed to engage in) are clarified below. These recommendations were based on the experience of Committee advisory members experienced in landlord-tenant law, (including both private practitioners and those who provide representation through legal aid organizations), input from the Committee as a whole, and input from interested outside parties. In particular, in deciding whether a specific case should be outside the scope of LP representation, the Committee considered whether a subject area or procedure is typically especially difficult or complex, and what might benefit the greatest number of landlord-tenant litigants who might otherwise be self-represented and could benefit from the assistance of an LP.

1. Landlord-Tenant Law Tasks within the Scope of LP License

The Committee recommends that LPs be allowed to engage in the following tasks in the course of a landlord-tenant case (within the subject-matter limitations listed below):
 Enter into a contractual relationship to represent a natural person or a business entity. LPs should be available to assist tenants or landlords, especially those who might not otherwise have access to legal advice. While tenants are likely to be natural persons, landlords in need of such assistance may also be proceeding as a business entity. LPs, therefore, should be able to contract with both natural persons and business entities on landlord-tenant matters.

 Meet with potential clients to evaluate and determine needs and goals, and provide legal advice, including on claims or defenses (e.g., notices of intent to terminate tenancy, inspection of premises, rent increase). Prospective clients should be able to meet with LPs regarding landlord-tenant matters whenever needed to determine the best way to proceed and to start whatever process might be necessary. LPs may be an especially important source of legal information for litigants with limited financial resources (e.g., those who are not able to obtain representation from legal aid organizations) or from geographic areas of the state where there are few attorneys who practice landlord-tenant law. In addition, LPs who are fluent in languages other than English may provide essential services especially to non-English speaking tenants. As part of such a meeting, the LP would make an initial determination whether the potential client’s concerns are within the scope of the LP’s practice or whether a referral to an attorney would be appropriate.

 Review, prepare, and provide legal advice to clients regarding a variety of documents, including pleadings, notices, opinion letters, court orders, and judgments. The types of documents LPs would be authorized to review would include but not be limited to residential leases and rental agreements, amendments to rental agreements, eviction notices, notices of intent to enter rental property, rent increase notices, demand letters, notices of violation, and security deposit accountings.

 File documents and pleadings with the court. Litigation regarding residential tenancies can occur through small claims court actions as well as FED litigation. Examples of the types of documents LPs would be authorized to help prepare and file in small claims actions include but are not limited to small claims and notices of small claims, responses, trial exhibits, and memoranda. Examples of the types of documents LPs would be authorized to help prepare and file in FED litigation include but are not limited to complaints, answers (including tenant counterclaims), replies to counterclaims and affirmative defenses, subpoenas, trial exhibits, FED stipulated agreements (ORS 105.145(2)), declarations of noncompliance (ORS 105.146(4)), requests for hearing on declarations of noncompliance (ORS 105.148), notices of restitution, and writs of execution.

 Assist in obtaining continuance requests to allow parties to make discovery requests or obtain other discovery. Expedited FED timelines make most discovery impractical. However, landlords may request continuances, and tenants may request continuances if they pay rent into court (ORS 105.140(2)). LPs could provide this information to litigants and assist in the discovery process if the continuance was allowed.

 Attend depositions, but not take or defend them. While discovery timelines for FED cases can make depositions impractical, they require only “reasonable notice,” which case law has found to be satisfied with two days’ notice. LPs would be able to work with tenants to assist with this expedited timeframe, including scheduling and compelling deposition appearances and preparing clients for being deposed and for taking a deposition.

The Committee recommends that LPs be permitted to assist with depositions, but that they not be allowed to take depositions or defend them. This restriction is based on depositions being a form of testimony under oath that requires knowledge and application of the rules of evidence to preserve objections or other evidentiary issues for possible later use in court. Knowledge and application of the Evidence Code is a basic skill required for taking and defending a deposition that is beyond the scope of LP practice (and likely training).

- Participate, prepare for, and represent a party in settlement discussions, including mediation and settlement meetings. Negotiations in landlord-tenant cases often occur the day of the initial court appearance. Being able to consult with an LP in advance of the initial court appearance would allow a litigant to become informed about what to expect and what the negotiation process would likely entail. It could also help those new to the process understand the strength or weakness of their position ahead of time from an informed perspective, resulting in more reasonable, just, and efficient outcomes.

- Prepare parties for, attend, and participate in judicial settlement conferences. LPs would help prepare clients regarding what to expect and help them prepare so that such sessions will be more efficient and effective. LPs could attend these sessions to advise clients on their options and discuss various proposals.

- Participate and assist with hearing and trial preparation. LPs should be allowed to prepare clients for court appearances (e.g., direct examination and cross-examination, oral argument, exhibit preparation and submission, memoranda to the court).

- Attend court appearances to provide permitted support and assistance in procedural matters. LPs would be allowed to sit at counsel table during court appearances and respond to questions by the court. LPs would not affirmatively represent a client directly during evidentiary hearings or other similar court appearances. For example, an LP would not be permitted to make evidentiary objections, offer exhibits, or question witnesses, but would be able to assist their client in doing so. The Committee recommends that LPs should be permitted to respond to questions from the court.

- Review opinion letters, court orders, and notices with a client and explain how they affect the client, including the right to appeal. Informing litigants about the significance of a court’s determination and the right to appeal and the related timing would be an important service, even if LPs are restricted from assisting in the appeals process. LPs could also provide referrals if a client is considering an appeal.

- Refer clients to attorneys for tasks or subject matter outside the scope of LP representation. This ongoing obligation would be a requirement throughout an LP’s representation, especially if the case came to include something beyond the LP’s original expectation during the initial assessment.
2. Landlord-Tenant Practice outside the Scope of LP License

The Committee recommends that the following types of landlord-tenant cases be outside an LP’s scope of practice:

- Affirmative plaintiff cases in circuit court. Affirmative plaintiff cases often include matters beyond the scope of landlord-tenant practice in general and beyond the scope of what LPs are expected to master. Parties can file in small claims court for relief up to $10,000, which may be an alternative forum for such cases. Excluding these types of cases would not unduly limit cases available for LP practice. These types of cases are not as frequent and urgent as most FED cases and often include counterclaims, depositions, and substantial discovery.

- Agricultural tenancies and leasing. These cases are outside of ORLTA and more similar to tort claims, often requiring specialized knowledge. These cases are not common and often involve significant dollar amounts. Farm worker tenancies often do not fall under ORLTA and often implicate federal laws, which would be beyond expected LP proficiency. There are other specialized resources available for advocacy in these types of cases.

- Affirmative discrimination claims (except if asserted as a counterclaim or defense). This is a complex area of law requiring significant specialized legal knowledge, often implicating other areas of state and federal law. While discrimination cases are important and need to be pursued, this area largely arises outside of ORLTA and requires significant specialized legal knowledge and extensive factual development and discovery. Claims may be raised in state or federal court and if raised in an FED may create preclusion issues. If a tenant wishes to counterclaim for personal injury damages, whether arising under a tort or ORLTA theory of liability, the LP would then need to refer the case to an attorney. There was some discussion that in the future a third practice area or special certification for LPs could be created for discrimination cases.

- Commercial tenancies and leasing. These cases fall outside of ORLTA and require extensive knowledge of complicated business law and contract law.

- Landlord-tenant claims for personal injury. Personal injury and other tort claims may arise during the landlord-tenant relationship and may give rise to liability under ORLTA or the rental agreement. Examples of this include premises liability injuries and mold-related illnesses. This area of law requires significant specialized legal knowledge and can be very complex, requiring extensive factual development and discovery. It may also implicate other areas of law. Such claims may be brought in the circuit court as well, and if raised previously in an FED, may create preclusion issues. These claims may also involve insurance issues. With all of these potential concerns, these personal injury claims are beyond the scope of what LPs can reasonably be expected to become proficient about and advise upon. If a tenant wishes to counterclaim for personal injury damages, whether arising under a tort or ORLTA theory of liability, the LP must refer to an attorney.

- Injunctive relief in affirmative cases.
- Housing provided in relation to employment. This area is generally excluded from ORLTA and implicates significant state and federal law claims. Additionally, these claims can be brought in both state and federal court.

- Affirmative subsidized housing claims. These claims are complex and involve significant overlap with federal laws and regulations. A number of lawyers have expertise with subsidized housing claims and could assist both tenants and landlords with these issues. However, an LP who is familiar with subsidized housing–related issues should not be precluded from advising on defenses to eviction related to the subsidized status of a unit.

Scope of Practice – Future Expansion

Two key principles guided the Committee throughout its deliberations: consumer protection and equity. These two principles should guide any future expansion of the program. In practice, the Committee asked itself a number of questions related to each of these principles:

- Adequate consumer protection. How complex are the legal matters and tasks? Are the education and experience requirements sufficient to teach the complexity? Are the assessments adequate to ensure competency?

- Increase in equity and access to justice. Is there currently a significant lack of affordable legal assistance in the matters and tasks at issue? Would more affordable legal assistance result in more equitable outcomes? Are marginalized and underrepresented communities disproportionately affected by the lack of legal assistance? Do the barriers to entry into the profession preclude a diversity of professionals available to serve the diversity of communities within Oregon?

In discussing these principles, the Committee frequently considered the possibility of future expansion of the program. In many cases, persuasive arguments could be made that licensure in other areas of law could expand access to justice while adhering to these consumer protection and equity principles.

The Committee deliberately chose to limit its formal recommendations to licensure in family law and landlord-tenant cases for two reasons. First, as recommended by the Futures Task Force, the Committee’s charge was limited to those two subject areas. Second, the Committee was deliberately constructed to include attorneys who practice in those areas, and did not necessarily include practitioners in other areas into which some recommended expansion.

The Committee agreed, however, that future expansion into other areas of law should be considered and guided by the principles and questions cited above. One recommended expansion is the licensure of a class of LPs as document preparers. Licensed document prepares would have to meet similar admissions and regulatory requirements as recommended in this report, but would not need specific experience in any particular legal subject area. They would not be permitted to offer substantive legal advice but would be permitted to assist clients with filling out forms and answering questions about court processes and procedures. Several states have a long and successful history of licensing document Document preparers have proven to be a useful resource for many individuals whose primary legal need is assistance navigating the court system.

The more commonly discussed potential area of future expansion is into areas of law beyond family law and landlord-tenant law. The National Center for State Courts Civil Justice Initiative released a report outlining recommendations for improving the civil justice system generally. One set of problems discussed in the report are those experienced in so-called “high-volume dockets”, which the report defines as “typically composed of cases involving consumer debt, landlord-tenant, and other contract claims.” These types of contract claims, which also include mortgage foreclosure, represent almost two thirds of all non-domestic relations cases in civil courts in the United States.

Although these types of cases are extremely numerous, they tend to share many of the same legal and factual issues. Plaintiffs are usually businesses and thus likely to be represented by an attorney or in some case another agent authorized by statute. As the report notes however:

“Defendants, in contrast, are likely to be self-represented individuals, who are often of low or modest income. These defendants often face additional barriers that impede effective navigation of the civil justice system and their ability to present an effective defense. Barriers may include limited literacy; limited English proficiency; cognitive impairments including mental illness; and distrust of the courts based on prior experience or upbringing in a different culture.”

Many of the equity and consumer protection goals that have guided the Committee might also be met by permitting LPs to represent clients in some of these other areas that have been identified as suffering from high rates of self-representation. Utah and Arizona already license paralegals in some consumer debt collection cases; California is recommending licensure in this area as well.

Other areas of law discussed where there is a significant lack of legal representation that results in inequitable outcomes that disproportionately affect marginalized communities include non-criminal traffic citations, criminal record expungements, and small claims. Several other jurisdictions either have approved or are considering licensure of paralegals to provide legal advice and assistance in these areas of law.

Additional Regulatory Requirements

In addition to knowing and following the substantive and procedural aspects of family law and landlord-tenant law, LPs should be required to comply with the same requirements in dealing with clients and the public as apply to attorneys.

This would include:

- Rules of Professional Conduct for LPs. The rules should be nearly identical to those that exist for lawyers, with adjustments only where necessary given the limitations on the scope of practice.
- Interest on Lawyer Trust Accounts (IOLTA), IOLTA-related certification requirements.
- participation in the Client Security Fund.
- Mandatory Continuing Legal Education (MCLE).
- prohibition on sharing fees or from sharing ownership in a firm with individuals not licensed by the Oregon State Bar.
- Mandatory malpractice coverage through the Professional Liability Fund (PLF). The PLF provides valuable assistance to attorneys in best practices, ongoing practice management, liability reduction, and other crucial services. The public would benefit substantially if the same were made available to LPs. The representative from the PLF at the meetings is supportive and the PLF is actively developing a framework for providing insurance for LPs. We understand that it will be a separate parallel fund that would not affect lawyer assessment amounts.

Statutes, Rules, and Regulations to Review or Revise

A large number of current statutes, rules, and regulations will need to be reviewed and revised before LPs are licensed and begin practice. Much of this work has already begun. Draft Rules for Licensing Paralegals, Minimum Continuing Legal Education Rules, and Rules of Professional Conduct for LPs are available in Appendixes G, H and I.

The Committee discussed at least two possible scenarios to accomplish these revisions. The first is to add a simple overarching statement to each of the major statute or rule categories (e.g., an addition to the Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure (ORCPs) that “all rules in the ORCPs applicable to attorneys shall also apply to LPs”), unless specifically noted. Another option would be to change the text of specific rules in each major statute or rule category.

In response to feedback received, the Committee recommends that LPs have the same privileges and responsibilities with regard to signing documents on behalf of clients as apply to attorneys, when acting within the scope of their practice. Additional statutory or rule changes may be required in order to effectuate this recommendation. (e.g., a change to ORCP 17 A to add “licensed paraprofessional” or “licensed paralegal” to the list of who must sign a pleading, motion, or other document).

The Committee recommends changing the text of specific rules or statutes to add LPs to promote clarity with regard to which rules or statutes apply to LPs and which do not. There was some concern over what impact this method might have on statutory interpretation and precedent. There was also concern about the amount of time such detailed revisions might take, as well as what might happen if a revision was missed. Overall, however, the general sense of the Committee was that changes should be made to specific applicable statutes, rules, and regulations subject to Legislative Counsel’s recommendation on how best to proceed.
a. Revisions Applicable to LP Practice in General

The statutes, rules, and regulations identified as pertinent to LP practice in general (rather than to either family law or landlord-tenant law) that would need review or modification include but are not limited to:

- Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure (ORCPs)
- Uniform Trial Court Rules (UTCRs)
- Oregon Code of Judicial Conduct
- various Supplementary Local Rules for each circuit court
- ORS 9.005 et seq. (Oregon State Bar Act)
- ORS 124.060 (elder abuse reporting)
- ORS 419B.005 et seq. (child abuse reporting)\(^{25}\)
- ORS 9.568 (State Lawyers Assistance Committee)

b. Additional Family Law–Related Revisions

Additional specific rules and statutes identified as pertinent to the domestic relations prong of LP practice that would need review or modification include but are not limited to:

- ORS 107.005 et seq. (dissolution, annulment, and separation)
- ORS chapter 109 (parent and child rights and relationships)
- rules related to informal domestic relations trials (IDRTs, UTCR 8.120)
- ORS 20.075 (factors to be considered by a court in awarding attorney fees)
- ORS 40.090 et seq. (Oregon Evidence Code, including rules 202, 503, 503-1, 504-5, 509-2, 511, and 513)
- Supplementary Local Rules (SLRs), including specifically those reserved in chapter 8 for domestic relations proceedings

c. Additional Landlord-Tenant–Related Revisions

Additional specific rules and statutes identified as pertinent to the landlord-tenant prong of LP practice that would need review or modification include but are not limited to:

- ORS chapter 90 (Oregon Residential Landlord and Tenant Act)
- ORS chapter 91 (tenancy)
- ORS chapter 105 (property rights)
- ORS 20.075 (factors to be considered by a court in awarding attorney fees)

\(^{25}\) The Committee has recommended that LPs be made mandatory reporters of child and elder abuse, as attorneys are now. As this would require a statutory change, the Committee decided not to recommend abuse reporting MCLE requirements unless and until the legislature makes LPs mandatory reporters.
- ORS 40.090 et seq. (Oregon Evidence Code, including rules 202, 503, 503-1, 504-5, 509-2, 511, and 513)
- Supplementary Local Rules (SLRs), including specifically those reserved in Chapter 18 for landlord-tenant proceedings

Stakeholders Workgroup Report

The Stakeholders Workgroup worked throughout the past year to inform the legal community and other Oregonians of the paralegal licensure proposal and to solicit input on the proposal prior to its presentation to the Oregon Supreme Court. If the proposal is approved, outreach will likely continue in order to inform decisions on the administration of the program.

In the Committee’s July 2021 Progress Report, the workgroup identified three broad categories of individuals from whom it was important to solicit input:

- OSB and OJD groups
- external legal advocacy groups
- public and community advocacy groups

The workgroup continues to believe that soliciting input from all of these groups is critical.

Opportunities for Input

The OSB created a new web page for the purpose of soliciting public input on the proposal in November of 2021. In addition to providing basic information about the proposal, the web page included a feedback form individuals could fill out to provide input. To date, the Bar has received well over 350 comments through this form.

The OSB took public comments on the proposal at the November 2021 and the February 2022 BOG meetings. Additionally, the OSB has been receiving input on the proposal at the paraprofessionalcommittee@osbar.org email address for the last year. These comments have been compiled by OSB staff and are available in Appendixes B, C and D of this report.

Lara Media Report

The OSB commissioned Lara Media, an Oregon based research company, to conduct research into Oregonians’ interest in a licensed paralegal program. The research and linked report focus especially on the effect such a program would have on BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, and people of color) communities and on low and moderate income Oregonians. Lara Media conducted both surveys and focus groups of Oregonians and provided results of its research to the Bar in February of 2022.

Surveys

In the fall of 2021 the OSB sent out targeted surveys to two specific groups. The first was sent to students and alumni of the two community college paralegal programs in Oregon\textsuperscript{27}. The second was sent to judges and court staff. While both surveys invited broad input, the purpose of the student survey was to gauge interest in becoming an LP. The purpose of the judicial survey was to gauge the level of difficulty courts currently have with unrepresented parties and to what extent those parties would benefit from consulting with LPs prior to appearance. Results of these surveys can be found in Appendixes E and F.

Direct Outreach

Over the past several months, Senior Judge Dan Harris has presented to the Oregon Judicial Conference, the State Family Law Advisory Committee, several OSB sections, and numerous other groups. The purpose of this outreach has been to inform these major stakeholder groups of the proposal and to directly solicit suggestions and input. The comments he has received have been reported back to the Committee and incorporated into the draft proposal. This outreach will continue until the Supreme Court makes its final decision.

Evaluating the Program

The Committee had several discussions on how the OSB or the courts would evaluate the efficacy of an LP program after it is implemented. As has been discussed, there exists a well-documented access to justice gap, in particular in family law and landlord-tenant cases. While attorney representation rates in these cases are low across the board, rates of representation are even lower for persons of color, rural residents, and low-income residents generally. The explicit goal of an LP program is to allow new opportunities to provide legal services to Oregonians who are currently unserved by attorneys. Documenting whether or not this occurs is a critical metric in evaluating the program.

One framework for how this might be accomplished is contained in the report Assessing Improvements in Access to Justice\textsuperscript{28} recently published by the National Center for State Courts.

To paraphrase the report, one important prerequisite to this evaluation is ensuring that Oregon courts are able to collect information in the case management system that will distinguish between attorney-represented, LP-represented, and self-represented parties. Based on initial conversations with the OJD, it appears that the current case management system would be able to accomplish this task. The OJD also has baseline statistics on the number of parties currently appearing in court without an attorney. In the future, with this information it should be possible to measure how many parties use LPs and how many remain self-represented, and to evaluate case outcomes for these different groups.

\textsuperscript{27} Portland Community College and Umpqua Community College currently host the only two paralegal programs in Oregon.

\textsuperscript{28} An Evaluation Framework for Allied Legal Professional Programs: Assessing Improvements in Access to Justice; State Justice Institute and National Center for State Courts; Andrea L Miller Ph.D., J.D., Paula Hannaford-Agor, J.D., Kathryn Genthon, M.S.; May 2021.
Additionally, the report recommends the development of user satisfaction surveys that could be distributed to court users who had retained the services of LPs at some point in the process. This could involve directly soliciting feedback from LPs or taking a random sample of all court users to determine the overall percentage who worked with an LP. The OSB would also have the ability to distribute surveys directly to LPs, to inquire about representation rates, case types, or any other information that would be helpful in evaluating the program.

Regardless of how the forms are distributed, there are certain key pieces of information that should be gathered. One of the most important will be whether the individual using the LP understood the scope of practice limitations that the LP operated under and whether they felt their representation was impacted by that restriction. It could also be informative to inquire into whether the LP ever discussed referral to an attorney with their LP at any point during the representation.

Another method of collecting information on LP usage may be through standard court forms. Currently, when self-represented litigants file certain court forms, they are asked whether they consulted with an attorney prior to filing the form. FAPA forms are one example of this. It may be possible that in the future the OJD could include questions on some family law and landlord-tenant forms that ask whether the individual consulted with either an attorney or an LP prior to filing the form.

While specific recommendations regarding evaluating the program are beyond the scope of this Committee, members generally supported having a formal method of evaluating the success of the program.

Next Steps

When the Futures Task Force recommended that the OSB develop a license for paralegals, the Task Force sought to balance three interests: protecting consumers, increasing access to justice, and cost-efficiency. With respect to cost-efficiency, the Task Force sought to take advantage of existing system-wide efficiencies within the OSB for the administration of a new license. The Committee agrees that cost efficiency should be considered in development and administration of the LP program, that the existing procedure to regulate lawyers be used to regulate LPs, and that fees assessed be used to help fund the program.

SB 768, which passed into law in 2021, expands the OSB’s governing statute to allow for associate membership in the Bar under ORS 9.241. It provides in pertinent part:

> (3) Notwithstanding ORS 9.160, the Supreme Court may adopt rules pursuant to ORS 9.210 to admit individuals with substantial legal education as associate members of the Oregon State Bar without taking the examination required by ORS 9.210. An individual admitted as an associate member under this subsection must meet all character and fitness requirements under ORS 9.220.

This change allows another class of membership administered and regulated by the OSB, pursuant to Supreme Court rules, rather than creating a separate, duplicative licensing entity. This lays the groundwork for developing the program’s next phase.
Once approved by the BOG and submitted to the Oregon Supreme Court, OSB staff will determine how best to organize the program and develop a budget for BOG consideration. A proposed next step includes a request for OSB staff to implement the program, subject to review and approval by the Oregon Supreme Court.

Executive Summary

The Oregon State Bar has inquired Oregonians whether the State is interested in a new legal assistance practitioner through a new program, the Licensed Paraprofessional Program. This new program will provide a new path for people to help communities in need of accessible legal assistance and more options for seeking legal help.

The Oregon State Bar, a judicial arm of the Oregon Supreme Court, hired Lara Media Service to conduct research to answer the question, Should the Oregon State Bar start the Licensed Paraprofessional Program as a means to bridge the gap of legal help accessible for Oregonians in need?

Lara Media Services, a market research firm from Portland, OR, designed a research plan to answer this question by coordinating one conversation with Oregonians who have been historically negatively impacted by the civil legal system (Black, Indigenous, People of Color, and low to moderate individuals). The plan consisted of one conversation with Oregonians who speak predominantly Spanish and a statewide survey of low to moderate earning Oregonians.

The focus group findings concluded that Oregonians want more access to culturally responsive legal assistance professionals and that this program is on the right path to address this gap. The survey results concluded that 97% of Oregonians favor a newly licensed paraprofessional, and 80% would be more open to consulting an attorney after working with this licensed paraprofessional.

Lara Media Services recommends the Oregon State Bar implement this new program with a culturally responsive communication plan as soon as possible. It will be necessary to examine further how these newly licensed paraprofessionals can be leveraged to bridge the gap of legal help accessibility.

Introduction

“Every Oregonian deserves a justice system that is accessible and accountable. The legitimacy of our democracy depends on the premise that injustices can be addressed fairly within the bounds of the law, no matter who you are or where you live. Let us work together in Oregon, to ensure that justice is a right, not a privilege—for everyone.”

– Chief Justice Martha Walters, Oregon Supreme Court.

(Oregon Law Foundation, Portland State University Survey Research Lab, 2019)

In late 2021, the Oregon State Bar reached out to Lara Media Services to help them better understand the accessibility issues faced by low to moderate-income Oregonians when seeking legal help. This is a much-needed effort to make legal services more understandable and equitable. This problem is both national and local. The Oregon State Bar has the opportunity to create programming and services that reach the often underserved communities, and they want to understand how to do it better.

The quote below from Jason Solomon and Noelle Smith highlights the current issue in the US.

“It is a shameful irony that the nation with one of the world’s highest concentrations of lawyers does so poorly in making legal services available to its citizens. The U.S. ranks just 109 out of 128 countries in access to justice and affordability of civil legal services, below Zambia, Nicaragua, and Afghanistan. Two-thirds of American adults reported having a civil legal problem in the past year, but only one-third of those received any help. And the access to justice problem is not limited to low-income Americans; [the] access to justice gap is now enveloping an entirely new class of self-represented party—those who are modest and of moderate means.”

The civil legal system has been challenging to navigate without legal assistance. In the report “Barriers to Justice: A 2018 Study Measuring the civil legal needs of low-income Oregonians,” 52.8% of surveyed participants sought legal help from an experienced legal problem, but 84.2% of people who needed a lawyer could not obtain one. The current level of legal practitioners met only 15% of the civil legal needs of low-income Oregonians (Oregon Law Foundation, Portland State University Survey Research Lab, 2019).

These accessibility issues are not new, however. In the year 2000, The State of Access to Justice in Oregon report found that low and moderate-income people in Oregon had a great need for civil legal services that were not met by the existing legal services delivery network at the time. The report stated that “Lower-income people obtained legal assistance for their problems less than 20% of the time.” It continued by stating, “People obtaining representation have a much more favorable view of the legal system and are satisfied with the outcome of the case 75% of the time when represented by a legal services lawyer.” In contrast, “Most people who experience a legal need and don’t obtain representation feel very negatively about the legal system, and about 75% are dissatisfied with the outcome of the case.” (Dale, 2000)

There is an unmet need. According to the Legal Services Corporation, 86% of low-income American’s civil legal problems in the United States receive inadequate to no legal help in 2017, 71% of low-income households experience at least one civil legal problem, and low-income Americans do not seek professional legal help for 80% of their civil legal problems (Legal Services Corporation, 2017). With hopes of bridging this gap of inaccessibility, the Oregon Supreme Court is considering creating a new type of legal provision, a Licensed Paralegal, to provide some legal services that, until now, only lawyers may provide. Similar to the introduction of Nurse Practitioners to the medical field, a Licensed Paralegal would be allowed to provide limited legal services [only] in family law cases (divorces, custody, parenting time, etc.) and landlord/tenant cases. These are two of the areas of law with the greatest unmet need for legal assistance in Oregon.

A Licensed Paralegal would have specific requirements for education and experience and would be subject to many of the rules and regulatory requirements that currently exist for lawyers. The intent is to provide access to legal help for those who currently cannot afford a lawyer or who otherwise would go to court with no legal assistance. This is one part of the solution to address the lack of equity and access in Oregon’s legal system, especially for the most marginalized communities that lack trust, understanding, and equity in the justice system.
Background

The Oregon State Bar (OSB), a public corporation and an arm of the Oregon Judicial Department, licenses and disciplines lawyers, regulates the practice of law, and provides various services to bar members and the public. OSB does not receive any direct financial support in the form of taxpayer dollars from the General Fund, but is funded entirely by licensing fees and revenue from various member service programs. The Oregon Supreme Court has the authority to appoint the Disciplinary Board and the Board of Bar Examiners members. The OSB values are the integrity of ethics and standards, fairness in the justice system for all, leadership among legal professionals and the community, diversity in the community, justice in the rules of law, accountability of its decisions and action, excellence in its programs and services, sustainability through education and advancement, and the well-being of legal professionals for their professional duties and administrative effectiveness. (Oregon State Bar, n.d.)

Lara Media Services (LMS) values OSB’s commitment and passion for listening and working within all communities to address Oregon residents’ barriers to accessing legal services. We recognize that OSB aims to do so in a just, equitable, inclusive, and culturally responsible manner that reaches and benefits diverse populations, especially those lacking the means of hiring legal assistance providers.

LMS is a certified MBE, WBE, DBE, ESB firm (Certification #7923), and B-Corp. LMS is Latina-owned, and 100% of our team is multicultural and multilingual. Our vision is to create an equitable world where everyone can be seen, heard, and treated as a valuable and necessary member of society. Our ability to listen, respond, develop proven and effective strategies, and design culturally responsible research methods tailored to the underserved and underrepresented communities is unmatched. LMS promotes assertive communication and engagement strategies for organizations aiming to connect with the hearts and minds of communities of color through sustainable and dynamic solutions. We are confident that LMS’s unique approach and expertise on similar past projects and objectives will help OSB see and better understand the thoughts and interests of Oregon residents in OSB’s Licensed Paraprofessional Program.
Research Study

The goal of the OSB is to know whether Oregonians want a new alternative for legal help, a licensed paraprofessional. The licensed paralegal program would offer Oregon residents additional options when they require legal services. In some cases, licensed paralegals may be able to offer assistance to clients at a lower cost than a traditional attorney while still providing high-quality services.

OSB understands that Oregon residents have a high level of unmet legal need. Legal help providers can only serve 15% to 20% of financially eligible clients, and 84% of people with family law cases do not have an attorney. This puts many Oregon residents, especially low-income residents, underrepresented communities, and persons of color, at a disadvantage because they are often forced to represent themselves in court and may be unaware of legal options available to them.

OSB decided to work with an outside expert, LMS, to research two avenues to solicit input from the public, focusing on reaching Oregonians who have traditionally struggled to receive adequate legal representation and whose input may not be adequately captured without this targeted effort. Importantly, this includes Oregonians for whom English is not their native language.

Lara Media Services’ research and findings will inform OSB of the public opinion of a new paraprofessional licensure services proposal through community survey results and focus groups. This will help OSB learn about the programs and services that are most important to often underserved community members. OSB aims to understand why community members do not currently hire professional legal help and the legal needs and priorities of people who don’t hire lawyers for legal counsel.

Through this research, LMS will provide the public’s answer to the question,

“Should Oregon have a new alternative to legal help in the form of a licensed paraprofessional?”
Methodology

LMS gathered qualitative and quantitative data by coordinating and facilitating virtual focus groups and implementing a questionnaire shared via community interceptors and social media links.

The following report synthesizes the quantitative and qualitative results from the survey and the focus groups. The findings have been organized into three main topics.

Experience with the Current Legal System
LMS strives to understand and communicate the current barriers underserved community members face and what channels they use to seek information.

Understanding of the Licensed Paralegal Program
LMS inquired about the current understanding of Paralegal Professionals and the Paralegal Professional Program to gather initial feedback on the potential benefits and challenges.

Spanish Group Specifics
LMS will highlight the critical differences that Spanish-speaking participants shared in the language-specific focus group.

Focus Groups Methodology

Focus groups are an exploratory research method and provide vast amounts of qualitative data. This method is used when there is a need to explore issues in-depth and understand thoughts, feelings, challenges, and aspirations. LMS encourages participants to be fully engaged and empowers them to let their voices be heard. Trust is built throughout the session, as each person’s opinion is vital. LMS aimed to have a diverse group of participants to capture the sentiment of multiple perspectives.
For this project, LMS utilized the following research methodology

1. LMS engaged OSB project personnel to identify priority audiences and essential considerations when developing the discussion guide. The priority population identified was Oregon residents – residing in urban and rural areas – of low income, who were a part of underrepresented communities, or identified as persons of color.

2. Once OSB and LMS identified the priority audiences, LMS developed a discussion guide in collaboration with OSB project personnel to define the number of questions, topics, and expected outcomes.

3. Priority audiences were invited to participate in the discussion. LMS and OSB identified two (2) focus groups to conduct:
   a) Spanish speakers with a household income of $60,000 or less from across the State.
   b) English Speakers with a household income of $60,000 or less from across the State, with priority given to under-represented communities or persons of color.

4. LMS recruited 12 participants for each group through social media and with the help of LMS trusted community advocates that live and work in rural areas. LMS leveraged the relationships developed with community leaders and the database of Oregonians acquired over the 20+ years of existence to gather participants that met the criteria and needs of this research project. LMS contacted approximately 60 people, of which 40 wanted to participate, and after the screening, LMS registered 24 according to the participant profile needed.

5. Focus group participants were required to have access to an electronic device with a camera and microphone in order to engage in the conversations. LMS offered to lend tablets to participants in need of electronic devices; none were requested. LMS also offered Zoom Video conferencing training to all participants who requested assistance; two requested training.

6. LMS virtually hosted, coordinated, and facilitated two discussion groups: One in English and one in Spanish, on December 21, 2021, from 5:30 to 7:30 pm to deeply understand the perceptions, ideas, behaviors, and barriers of the participants with the Oregon legal system.

7. The discussion guide included fourteen questions about participants’ experience with the legal system, their understanding of paralegals, and their interests in having alternatives to lawyers for civil legal counsel.

8. LMS provided a demographic survey to focus group participants in order to capture participants' demographics.

9. A summary of the information gathered is included in this report.
Focus Groups Participants

All participants met the pre-selected criteria, belonging to either low and median-income groups or historically underrepresented communities. Each focus group had residents from multiple counties, including Deschutes, Hood River, Jackson, Lane, Lincoln, Marion, Multnomah, Umatilla, and Washington county. The Spanish group consisted of ten (10) Oregonians who identified as Hispanic or Latino/a/x Oregonians. The English group consisted of eleven (11) Oregonians of diverse racial backgrounds.

All participants were compensated $100 for their time and insights. LMS utilized various methods to compensate focus group participants, including Venmo, Cash App, PayPal, gift cards, and physical checks.

Each participant provided LMS with the following demographic information before the focus group.

Due to rounding, some totals may differ by ±1 from the sum of separate responses or due to participants selecting multiple choices (particularly in the case of races and/or ethnicity).

Survey Methodology

1. LMS engaged OSB project personnel to identify priority audiences and important considerations to develop the questionnaire and identify a priority population to survey. The priority population identified was Oregon residents – residing in urban and rural areas – of low income, who were a part of underrepresented communities, or identified as persons of color.

2. Once OSB and LMS identified the priority audiences, LMS developed a survey in collaboration with OSB project personnel to define the number of questions, topics, and expected outcomes. OSB gave the targets of having a confidence level of 90% and having a margin of error of (+) (-) 5%.

3. With OSB direction, LMS calculated the sample size based on the Oregon population and identified priority audience:
   a) Oregon’s population and median income: 4,246,155 and $62,818 (United States Census Bureau, 2021)
   b) Moderate: $50,254 (Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, 2018)
   c) N=262 unique survey responses.

4. LMS recruited participants through social media and through the support of LMS trusted community advocates who live and work in rural areas.
   a) Two hundred sixty-two (262) unique survey answers were gathered via outreach conducted through the phone, online & social media link and intercepted by community advocates.

5. The survey campaign began December 22, 2021, and closed January 11, 2022, intending to survey 262 unique participants throughout the state while focusing on rural areas.

6. Participants received a $10 compensation after responding to the survey.
Survey Participants

Survey participants were required to live in Oregon, have a low to moderate household income and be over 18 years old. Surveys allowed us to obtain data quantified and compared to other research or community engagement methods. LMS administered surveys to participants in various ways, by phone, social media, and the majority by interceptor using tablets where communities shop, entertain and socialize. OSB and LMS agreed upon the list of questions. The questionnaires were sent via email and administered online and in-person with an interceptor.

Participants could answer the survey in different ways depending on their preference.

Options:

- They clicked on a link texted to them and filled out the survey on phones or tablets.
- They answered questions asked by an interviewer while the interviewer filled out the survey.
- They had an interceptor answer or filled out the survey for them.

The survey averaged five minutes to complete. All survey participants were compensated $10. LMS utilized various methods to compensate participants, including Venmo, Cash App, PayPal, Starbucks, and supermarket gift cards. LMS did not provide OSB with any materials that include the participants’ identity, including video, audio, or transcripts of the round table conversation, surveys, etc. Their anonymity allows them to provide honest answers crucial to the project.

The survey included questions intended to find information about the public’s interest in the program, the unmet legal need in the community, and questions that are likely to come from the public. The surveys distributed also included demographic information to determine the level of support within the surveyed groups. LMS administered the surveys in English and Spanish with diverse communities across the state to obtain 262 surveys.

The survey example is attached in the Appendix. Survey participants provided the following demographic information.

Findings Overview

In the findings section, we take many of the quotes and themes and attempt to weave them into a narrative that helps the Oregon State Bar see and understand the participants’ sentiments, underlying desires, needs, and gaps of legal understanding. Something worth noting is that the line between civil and criminal law was vague, at best, for focus group participants. Many of their comments show they fail to recognize the difference between the two and where this program would fit.

Experience with the Current Legal System

Current Barriers

- Participants feel that racial discrimination is embedded in the country's legal system and Oregon. Many stories were shared that exemplified a lack of equity and inclusion.
- There is an urgent lack of finances and information.
- Culturally responsive and appropriate language resources are not readily available.

Information Channels

Participants use the internet as their first or second source of information. They use social media outlets to look for information. They ask friends and family, and community members they trust. Some have called attorneys advertising on Radio or TV but didn’t have a good experience. Many wished there were more self-guided resources available, and the resources were easy to understand, direct, and without using jargon.

Understanding of the Licensed Paralegal Program

Defining Paralegal Professionals

There was a lack of understanding of what a paralegal does. Most participants did not understand what a licensed paralegal meant, with some of them having worked with public notaries and confusing the terms. Some had heard the term paralegals prior but did not know the difference and needed certifications or job descriptions.

Initial Feedback

- Opportunities – Many see this program as progress to providing more equitable, accessible, inclusive, and it has the opportunity to bring more diverse professionals with diverse backgrounds and languages. This will potentially create relationships between the paralegals and the underserved communities. Participants think these paralegals will be more open and better able to listen and help them in their legal matters.
Challenges

- The limitations of licensed paralegals will mitigate the need for legal counsel. Still, it must establish a new equitable system that takes serious measures to address the disparities the Black, Indigenous, and people of color (BIPOC) communities face when navigating the civil legal system.
- Participants are either unaware of or unsatisfied with lawyers’ current level of oversight, and they worry that licensed paralegals might have a similar problem.

Participant Recommendations

Participants would like to see additional information regarding the program that needs to be distributed so that it’s on the radar of the communities this program will directly impact if it becomes a reality. They also want transparency on the process and vetting to become a licensed paralegal and how they will be held accountable. Lastly, they would like this program to provide gateways for BIPOC and multilingual individuals the opportunity to become paralegals or provide opportunities for them to access the system.

Spanish Group Specifics

Spanish immigrants that participated had a more significant challenge of protecting their rights from expensive attorney charges and abuse treatment. Police and the legal system highly target the Latinx population; even with close to 400,000 Spanish speakers, getting good quality Spanish translators and language access remains a challenge in the courts of Oregon. Spanish speakers want to communicate appropriately with both the court and their attorney. Attorneys have charged them a considerable amount and haven’t resolved their problems or complicated them more. They change the attorney hoping to find a solution but continue to struggle to have their voices heard — and understood — in civil court.

Current Barriers

The Spanish-speaking community was not given the same level of service as proficient English speakers, saying their voices were not being heard from the lawyers they contracted. The community also faces transportation barriers and emphasizes the proximity of lawyers as necessary to the communities needing service.

Initial Feedback

Many Spanish-speaking participants saw this program as a gateway for giving migrant farmworkers affordable legal assistance.
Findings

Experience with the Current Legal System

Current Barriers

Most of the participants have had negative experiences with the legal system, and about half of those have had experience hiring an attorney or lawyer for a legal matter. Many, however, expressed a lack of knowledge of legal matters and difficulty accessing legal assistance as the main reasons they did not seek assistance. Several commented that if they had known where to find assistance or how to hire a good lawyer, they might have been more willing to press charges or go to court. Others said they had sought lawyers recommended to them or had seen online but were told they would not take their cases. Some were charged a lot of money and haven’t resolved their cases.

Quote: “No lawyer wanted to help me with my case because they didn’t see any profit in doing it.”

Many of these participants said they were left with nowhere to turn and that lawyers and law firms’ strict and unknown policies related to case selection made it difficult for many people to access legal assistance. They believe that this applies especially when dealing with courts outside of the normal sphere of family or criminal cases, such as immigration and housing, where good legal help and resources are even harder to find.

Quote: “I need help with my problem, but it has been very difficult finding a good lawyer. The ones I have hired so far are very expensive, and they haven’t helped me at all.”

Language barriers also played a large part in the lack of accessibility. Participants advocated for more accessible multilingual assistance and resources for the BIPOC communities. They stressed that people often have difficulty finding services in their native languages. Navigating the legal system can be especially difficult for those with low English proficiency, especially when trying to understand the large amount of legal jargon that lawyers and legal assistants often use.

Quote: “[Finding a lawyer] that speaks my language [is important] because I will be able to communicate better.”
Many legal services also do not direct their resources towards BIPOC and immigrant communities, leaving many with a lack of information on how the legal system works and their rights. This lack of knowledge and resource availability often leaves them vulnerable in legal situations, unwilling to push for legal assistance, and more likely to accept charges. It can also cause confusion, leading to misinformation and challenging interactions with English-speaking police officers or other authorities.

Quote: “Language can be a huge barrier in terms of access to legal support and advice. In the Asian community, when there is need for legal advice and service, people tend to not want to go that route because they, culturally, do not want to create more trouble and work for themselves, and they end up just paying the ticket or pleading guilty and giving in.”

Money was also a significant barrier for the majority of participants. Many had been reluctant to push legal matters or seek legal help because they could not afford a defense attorney or lawyer. With a lack of pro bono legal assistance, many find it better to fold and accept the charges against them. Participants shared several examples of how they paid large amounts of money to attorneys who never supported them with their cases.

Quote: “Most good layers are expensive for immigrants like me and other people that work for minimum wage. For some with low income, it is difficult to find a good lawyer that can help you with your case.”

Quote: “Growing up in the black community, you are guilty until proven innocent, and you can’t prove yourself innocent unless you have the money. In the court system, they all work for each other. It is about who you know, it is about what you know, and it is about how much money you have. People like us, when we get in trouble, they are looking to get us time to spend in jail. We have nobody to stand for us unless you have money for a lawyer and to fight the case.”

While some participants are aware of and have used public defense attorneys in their past, many participants considered them to be of lower quality and doubted their capabilities. Several participants stated that they would only trust a lawyer when seeking legal assistance, and another commented on the low number of discharges in cases involving public attorneys. Participants did recognize that public attorneys are often overworked and underpaid but ultimately believed that this contributes to a poor defense system for those going to court and that better assistance is needed in many cases.
This negative view of the courts was a continuous theme throughout the first part of the discussion. The type of legal matters that participants had experienced varied vastly, from criminal cases and restraining orders to traffic tickets and eviction notices, as well as cases involving either the immigration or family court of law. But the consensus for most participants was that the court rarely works to represent BIPOC communities’ rights fairly.

Quote: “A lot of people in my community don’t get treated right in the legal system. So many times, if you are not working with a lawyer, you get a differential treatment.”

Several also believe that the court system sets people up for failure, making it difficult to escape the system once someone enters it. One participant stated, “I had to miss days at work in order to get the services of a lawyer, so I am always missing money due to the legal system.” Another commented how the hoops he had to jump through made it difficult to earn money and, therefore, keep a roof over their head after his arrest.

Quote: “I was arrested in 2015, and having the information on my records has affected me in my hunt for a new job.”

Others felt that personal and racial prejudice played a large part in the court system, saying that BIPOC community members were treated more harshly in courts and not afforded the same opportunities as their white counterparts. One Native American participant emphasized that prejudice is a significant barrier for his community in obtaining fair trials and legal assistance throughout the civil legal system. Another participant believed that “the [legal] system was built on putting black people in prison” and that it is “a system built on racial profiling” that needs to be fixed before it could meet the needs of the people it claims to serve.

Quote: “Most Native American usually run into a barrier because most of the time there is more than one person in the line of the system that, because of their bias, ends up complicating things down the line, and I don’t think that that is really understood as an issue because they don’t see their biases as a blanket.”
Information Channels

Many participants currently obtain their information from the internet, books, acquaintances or friends, and family members who know legal matters well or have gone through a similar experience. Two said their employer offered legal services to employees for a small fee as a work benefit. Meanwhile, others rely on community and nonprofit organizations’ services, such as Causa, BLM, churches, PCUN, Mano a Mano, Unete, Next Door, to procure resources, legal advice, legal knowledge, and informational classes. The consensus from both focus groups is that they are very likely to trust a lawyer or other form of legal assistance when they are recommended to them by a person or organization they trust.

When asked what programs they believed would be helpful for them and their communities, many preferred getting in person or over the phone legal assistance and getting legal assistance in preparing and checking forms that they had filed out.

“Everyone should have all of these options,” one participant argued; “It would be good to have paralegal services that had a bit more hand-holding,” another agreed, “... and helped walk people through the process.” Participants want to be provided with more information and be listened to and understood by someone who can connect with someone who looks like them and understand them better to remove barriers and address their needs. Many believe that a hotline or in-person help from knowledgeable lawyers or legal assistants would help people handle the legal system cleanly. People often tend to miss a lot of nuances and inside information when self-educating themselves.

They also stated that it was imperative to provide resources for the diverse legal circumstances in their communities, as it can be challenging to find information about how to obtain assistance in different legal fields.

Several, however, also advocated for more accessible self-education resources, such as a website, online video, and legal training. They believe that these would help give people the baseline information when dealing with legal terms and charges and help them better use the knowledge and experience in-person assistance could provide. One participant put the importance of these resources into perspective, talking about a personal experience in which a manager had abused the rights of their employees because they were not English proficient and did not know their rights.

Quote: “Having a legal advocate in the court system that can help people navigate would be a good starter, and then everything else listed (in the study question) would be a second option; otherwise, by themselves, they are like a black hole that you are stepping into.”

Quote: “I favor some sort of personal interaction to get better answers because by just watching a video or visiting the website, you might miss a lot of nuances of interacting with the court system.”
One participant in the other focus group shared similar thoughts, “[I]f you don’t know your rights, you don’t have them. Something about waiting for someone else to educate you on those rights isn’t sitting well with me. It would be better for people to do their own research so that they can learn how to navigate the system themselves.”

The majority agree that having more than one or all of these options readily available and accessible would provide the best experience and assurance of legal help for the majority of people. Several also recommended spreading these resources in multiple languages or providing multilingual options when talking to a legal assistant over the phone or in person for those with low English proficiency.

Quote: “[I think it would be important to have] a hotline with interpretation services and having information in various languages.”

Another mentioned the importance of having these benefits available to rural communities or those who may not have access to computer technology as many would not be able to access assistance or resources reliant on online services.

Quote: “There are people here in rural communities that don’t have access to [the] internet and don’t have email and are not text savvy to communicate.”
Understanding the Licensed Paraprofessional Program

Defining what are Paralegal Professionals
Before presenting the Oregon State Bar’s plan for the Licensed Paraprofessional Program, participants were asked if they had any previous knowledge of a licensed paralegal. About half of the participants had heard of paralegal professionals before, and these previous understandings defined the lens through which they would view the program. One participant defined paralegals as having had “some legal training about how the law works but not as in-depth as to how lawyers would venture. Their training would help them to be able to prepare documents accurately and understand various legal terms and situations to assist lawyers.” Another participant added, “they can also help people independently to process paperwork when there is no battle and only mutually agreed upon terms, [but they] can't make legal decisions for legal attorneys, rep people in court, or give legal advice.”

Quote: The Spanish group had a slightly different understanding of a paralegal than the English group. They defined a licensed paralegal as “a person that is recognized by the state to provide legal advice,” or “a person that studies but is under supervision of someone with more experience.”

Initial Feedback

Opportunities:

Quote: “Knowing paralegals and attorneys who work through that equality and racial lens, who work for and care for the community, those would be things that I would look for. Will this program give us that?”

Despite earlier reservations, most participants believed that Oregon State Bar’s Licensed Paraprofessional Program was an excellent first step towards helping fill the gap in much-needed legal assistance in their communities and voted for them to implement the program. “I give them credit for the family services,” said one, “but it also needs to reach across the board and help with a lot of further matters.” Many were also eager to see an organization providing more affordable assistance to their communities, with one participant commenting, “if this is low-cost though, I can see it being very accessible to a lot of people.”

Quote: “I think anything they can do to help the minorities is good; it is a step in the right direction.”
Multiple participants saw the program as a chance to strengthen the bond between the regular community and the licensed paralegals. The belief that “the courts don’t care, … they don’t get to know you, [and] don’t take you into account” is prevalent in the BIPOC community. One participant recounted her experience, saying, “I was sent to another city to get my police report, and I didn’t have good service. I felt humiliated… I’m afraid of being ignored again.” They want legal assistance that will obtain results and leave them feeling heard on their issues. Participants hope that Oregon State Bar’s Licensed Paraprofessional Program will help provide the BIPOC community with licensed paralegals who are “more honest and benefit the community” due to their knowledge and previous experience. This program, many argue, could help ease the worry that little to no results would be obtained when getting legal assistance because those providing the legal help don’t care about the people they are helping.

Challenges:

After being presented with Oregon State Bar’s Licensed Paraprofessional Program, participants were skeptical about the feasibility of such a program. Additionally, many did not believe that it would be adequate to provide the pro bono legal service required by the BIPOC community due to the limited help licensed paralegals can provide. In contrast, they said there is a wide variety of cases for which their communities need legal assistance. “That sounds great for family and tenant cases,” commented one participant, “but for a lot of immigration and other cases for communities of color, it won’t help- not enough to fix the disparity.” One participant added, “it’s a good start, but we need more!”

One of the most pressing concerns for these groups was the lack of accountability they perceived inherent in the system. They worried that this would allow these licensed paralegals to abuse the trust of the communities they claimed to serve, making it harder for people to find quality services. “Lawyers,” one participant commented, “have a possibility of losing their license to hold them accountable for their actions. How will these paralegals be held accountable? Will these [restrictions] be provided for by the legal liability law? [Or will they be provided] by the Oregon [State] Bar?”

Quote: “It is better than what we have now. There is a systemic problem with the legal system that needs to be addressed and not just give solutions to these areas, but there need to be more solutions to equity as far as how the system processes people and the accessibility of inaccessibility to our communities.”

Quote: “When we are talking about legal access to minorities and communities of color, I think it should be across the board, and this only touches two pieces. And we talked about fairness in the court system and due process and all those other things, and these don’t even touch that.”
Others worried about the oversight of the educational programs themselves. Many believed that the only way to ensure the quality of a good paralegal was for them to have quality education and prior experience. As stated by one participant; “a class like this would need a lot of structure… if they had a class that taught you a lot of the legal process but not how the legal system works it could make it hard for people to get the help they need or the highest form of representation/help they could receive.” “Lawyers charge what they do due to the cost of their education,” another participant commented. “I think it might be better if we made more accessible lawyer education programs that might help the prices and might encourage more lawyers to exist and help the problem that way.”

Several also expressed concerns that too many new benefits for paralegals could take away from people seeking out professional lawyers. They believed that this might cause a shortage of lawyers and hurt people by giving them less than qualified assistance. “Paralegals,” one woman argued, “are not good for criminal cases, not meant to replace lawyers, and not trained to do that either. Putting them in when people have quick amicable cases is fine. Still, for cases where you need a proper lawyer, you need more than a paralegal.”

The majority agreed, expressing concerns that this program would “turn into more of a welfare option” and provide “legal representation of last resort” rather than filling a gap or seeking to help people get a good and accurate representation. “I think,” said one, “that people might be tricked into thinking that paralegals have the same capability as a lawyer when they really do not. That might cause problems with what people expect and the help they actually get in these cases and might do more harm than good.” Another commented, “if you are representing people who are underrepresented, you have to have a higher quality of help or people will turn their noses up at it and it won’t go anywhere.”

Quote: “In my community, if people don’t get the same results they would with a lawyer, they are not going to trust them in the future.”
Participant Recommendations

Participants believe that a better presentation of the program would be to style it as a first step in the legal assistance package and not the entire product. “I think it would be very helpful to have... a great place to get advice and legal help and then move on from there if you need more help,” said one participant.

The majority also argued that getting a second opinion and preliminary legal advice would make people more open to consulting an attorney and help them get a better understanding of how the legal system works. As stated by one participant, “I think it would be a good thing to help fill the role of legal advice and help in open and shut cases, because people sometimes feel that they pay lawyers for very little. If you find through a paralegal that you need more help, then that could help people feel that they are moving in the right direction and be better about getting more help.”

However, many also stressed the need for transparency about the educational backgrounds and the quality of help that clients would be receiving. “[There] needs to be a strong emphasis on the paralegal who went to school for it vs. someone who has a lot of experience versus someone who has a license.” One participant suggested that a vetting system would be better in helping the community get the reliable assistance they need, saying that “just because [licensed paralegals] are available does not mean they are good. [There] needs to be a system that provides that accountability. If not, it’s a gamble who you get. [I] don’t know how that long-term accountability will be put in place.” Many also felt that when receiving legal assistance, clients should be made aware of the role and capabilities of a licensed paralegal in the legal system.

Quote: “For the trust [of the community], there should be an understanding that if there is something out of the scope of the paralegal, they disclose that and refer you to a regular lawyer.”

Quote: “It is a great access point for those who otherwise may not consider getting legal [help] or support.”

Quote: “If it is not very clear what they can and can’t do, [it] can be misleading for people to believe that a licensed paralegal can do almost the same thing that a lawyer can.”
These two clarifications, they believe, will help their communities better trust and understand the assistance they are receiving from the Oregon State Bar. Several participants also recommended that perhaps it would be best to have a new name for licensed paralegals working under this program due to their previous experiences with licensed paralegals’ limitations, such as “lawyer practitioner.”

Quote: “Making a clear distinction between a paralegal and a licensed paralegal will make a huge difference in understanding what they are.”

Lastly, participants hope Oregon State Bar’s Licensed Paraprofessional Program will provide the community with multilingual services and resources. Having licensed paralegals available for diverse races/ethnicities and developing resources in various languages will make the legal system more accessible for those with limited English proficiency. This is essential to providing more accessible legal help for everyone. One participant who works for a local organization serving the Asian community affirmed, “Representation really matters. I have clients calling all the time calling for Asian lawyers who speak their language.”

Quote: “Racial representation really matters. I have clients calling wanting to talk to lawyers that speak their language. People want to be assured that they are going to get the help they need and be able to help with their particular situations.”

This gap in service is a significant reason why so many people, particularly those with low English proficiency and BIPOC communities, are hesitant to or have trouble seeking legal assistance. Language support will help people trust their legal assistance providers and better understand their services.
Spanish Group Specifics

Current Barriers

One barrier particular to the Spanish Focus Group was the ineffective service provided by Law firms and lawyers in diverse types of law. One participant commented that the service provided to her by one lawyer was inefficient and slow and that the lawyer did not do what she had paid her to do.

Quote: “I have paid two lawyers to obtain my report, and I haven’t gotten it. Lawyers have charged me without serving my needs, and the police didn’t do their jobs. I don’t feel heard.”

Others also agreed that they had had several experiences procuring legal help that left them feeling dissatisfied and unheard.

Quote: “The service tends to be slow. It is a frustrating process. [But] since English is my second language, I feel [that] I need their services. So mostly, I feel that my hands are tied.”

They believe that another step towards making legal assistance more accessible is providing good customer service.

Quote: “Lawyers should have a friendly service and be faster and more effective. It feels like they don’t pay much attention in our cases as clients.”

When lawyers don’t take the necessary time to understand the cases and the challenges of the BIPOC clients and their communities, they are less likely to trust them or seek their help. Lawyers need to be held accountable to the communities they serve, participants advocated. People need a way to voice their concerns and dissatisfaction with the current methods of operation.

Other barriers for this community included the locations of lawyers’ offices. A participant mentioned that a lawyer’s office is usually located in big cities and far away from rural areas. It is harder to find and reach when the office is not near the Latinx community. Another barrier was the challenge of finding good lawyers; “many are simply interested in getting money, not in helping people.”
Participants Responses and Reaction

Most of the Spanish focus groups’ participants’ concerns were listed above in the general Participant Feedback section due to their similarities with the general BIPOC and low-income participants’ feedback. It is worth noting that the following responses were only mentioned in the Spanish focus group.

As a whole, the group was more open to the idea of using a paralegal as an authorized legal assistant and believed that they would be a reliable option for legal assistance, especially if that legal help were provided in a wide range of languages. Participants’ main hopes were that the program would bring farmworkers and other essential workers more opportunities to obtain legal assistance. They often have limited schedules and speak indigenous languages. They also earn low incomes, making it difficult to afford legal assistance. Participants also believed that this program would mutually benefit the community and offer new career opportunities to paralegal participants. The paralegals will help the community find good legal services. While the community helps provide paralegals with more experience in the legal field, which helps paralegals continue their education to become lawyers.

The Spanish focus group defined a licensed paralegal as “a person that is recognized by the state to provide legal advice,” or “a person that studies but is under supervision of someone with more experience.” The general focus group, however, defined licensed paralegals, saying, “they can also help people independently to process paperwork when there is no battle and only mutually agreed upon terms, [but they] can’t make legal decisions for legal attorneys, [represent] people in court, or give legal advice.” Overall, the Spanish focus group’s definitions differed significantly from that of the English-speaking focus groups and seemed to have directly influenced the differences in their views of Oregon State Bar’s Licensed Paraprofessional Program.

Closing Remarks and Recommendations

The Oregon civil system has failed its residents. Our society has been woven with deeply racist policies that directly harm Black, Indigenous, and other people of color. These policies have led to an unequal legal system where marginalized communities have been systematically locked out of opportunities in courts, defense, and other legal procedures.

On top of these inequities, Spanish speakers found that deficits in language access are an additional barrier to getting a fair shot in the legal system. Spanish speakers are linguistically disadvantaged; justice is not just blind but deaf. One of the main concerns of these participants was the attorney’s actions, the lack of accountability that exists, and the racial discrimination they had suffered. Crucial changes are needed to renew OSB’s role of protecting the public. By ensuring competence and integrity by promoting professionalism, understanding, and respect of clients in the legal profession, OSB can reposition itself to protect historically underserved communities.

The OSB Paraprofessional Program can address some of the barriers for low and moderate-income Oregonians, especially for BIPOC and Limited English Proficiency communities. This program can bring access to legal services for diverse communities across Oregon. Providing competent bilingual and bicultural legal services offers the opportunity to increase trust in the legal system in general. It could be a door to justice and equity for all residents.

Beyond serving racially diverse Oregonians, this program will provide expanded legal job opportunities for women and people of color. There are substantial benefits of similar programs in other states, even though these programs have faced intense hostility from many lawyers and various state bars. These programs have provided legal services to many US residents who would have otherwise proceeded without representation, improved legal outcomes for moderate means clients, and empowered them to feel more confident in the courtrooms. Also, it has been proven that the lawyers in states already implementing these programs have expanded their practices by capturing previously untapped and distrustful legal system residents.
In Washington, Limited Licensed Legal Technicians (LLLTs) provided legal services to many Washingtonians who would have otherwise proceeded without representation in their family law cases. LLLTs provided expanded legal services to traditionally underserved communities, including Washington's immigrant communities. The program “provides access for women and people of color, who are also getting better results in their cases.” LLLTs allowed for more efficient proceedings and better decision-making for family law judges and commissioners by reducing procedural errors, submitting high-quality work products, and preparing clients to present their cases effectively. (Solomon & Smith, 2021)

This program may help OSB drive its mission of improving the quality of legal services and increasing access to justice. It will help you advance a fair, inclusive, and accessible Justice system.

LMS recommends OSB of the following:

- Continue reaching, listening, and learning from underserved communities.

- Create and implement a strategic and culturally responsive communication and engagement plan and prioritize underserved audiences. This should include:
  - Awareness and education for OSB resources.
  - The benefits of the OSB Paraprofessional Program.
  - The development and testing of culturally responsive messages before distribution.

- Resist the pressure of not doing the program. This program will not solve all the injustice and lack of equity. Still, it will provide resources and address some of the injustice, lack of inclusivity, and bias in the Oregon Legal System. It is necessary to provide alternatives to Oregonians since the system has not worked and increased the lack of justice.

- Partner with local law schools and technical schools to implement legal resources and programs.

- Advertise and make it easy for Oregonians to report attorneys and their malpractices.

- Commit funds to collect more data on attorney services and do more with the data collected, such as making public and accessible malpractice claims against attorneys.

Background for the respondent: At this stage, give the respondent background on the proposal. Here is some existing language we use on the OSB website:

The Oregon Supreme Court is considering the creation of a new type of legal provider, a Licensed Paralegal, to provide some legal services that, until now, only lawyers may provide. Similar to the introduction of Nurse Practitioners to the medical field, a Licensed Paralegal would be allowed to provide limited legal services [only] in family law cases (divorces, custody, parenting time, etc.) and landlord/tenant cases. These are two of the areas of law with the greatest unmet need for legal assistance in Oregon.

A Licensed Paralegal would have specific requirements for education and experience and would be subject to many of the rules and regulatory requirements that currently exist for lawyers. The intent is to provide access to legal help for those who currently cannot afford a lawyer or who otherwise would go to court with no legal assistance.

Summary of Public Input on Paralegal Licensure Proposal received through the OSB website

In the last week of November 2021, the Oregon State Bar published a new web page at www.osbar.org/LP. This page includes a link to a public comment form that individuals may use to submit comments on the proposal to the OSB. The first comment was received on November 27, 2021, and as of March 23, 2022, 375 responses had been received.

Of these respondents, 153 identified themselves as lawyers. Of those, 83 (54%) indicated they opposed the proposal, while 54 (35%) indicated they supported it. An additional 215 respondents identified themselves as members of the public (not lawyers or judges). Of those, 199 (92%) indicated they supported the concept while 12 (6%) indicated they were opposed to it. Six of the seven respondents who identified themselves as judges indicated they supported the proposal.

The form also asks respondents to provide additional written comments expressing their thoughts or concerns, which many respondents did. The responses are briefly summarized below.

Comments in Opposition

Complexity – The most common objection raised to the proposal is that the areas of law in question are too complex or technical for LPs to provide effective assistance. This objection was more frequently raised with respect to L/T cases, but some respondents raised it with regard to family law cases as well. Commenters often cited to recent changes in the law, including changes made due to COVID, and stressed that keeping up with these changes is extremely difficult even for lawyers.

Some respondents responded more generally that LPs were not qualified to handle these claims, but without discussion of the complexity of the law itself.

Confusing For Clients – Several respondents raised the objection that licensing paralegals would be confusing for consumers because they would not understand the scope of practice limitations, and wouldn’t be able to determine when they needed a lawyer instead. Others expanded on this objection, suggesting that the LPs themselves would have difficulty staying within the scope of their licensure.

Other Options – Many respondents made the argument that the OSB and/or the State of Oregon should focus its efforts on increasing access to attorneys rather than seeking to license paralegals. These respondents often acknowledged the need for additional services, but suggested solutions such as funding increases for legal aid, opening/reopening law school clinics, requiring lawyers to provide pro bono services, and mandatory mediation.

One respondent followed up on this concern by pointing out that a high proportion of self-represented individuals report being unaware of legal services that are currently available. The suggestion was made that if LPs were licensed, considerable effort would need to be expended to make sure the public was aware that this option existed.
Effect on Lawyers – Many respondents also argued that licensing paralegals would be bad for lawyers. Some suggested that the cost of insuring LPs against malpractice would ultimately be borne by attorneys. Others argued that allowing LPs to practice independently would discourage individuals from going to law school, or would be disrespectful to attorneys who put in the time and effort to become licensed. Other objections that were raised in the comments include that the program was tried and failed in Washington, and that it would create a two-tiered system of justice where less wealthy individuals wouldn’t have access to a lawyer.

Comments in Favor

Need For Services – Comments in favor of the proposal were often more general than the comments made in opposition. Numerous commenters expressed their belief that there was a great need for additional legal assistance without going into detail about how it should be addressed. As mentioned above, this belief was also stressed by some who objected to the proposal.

Cost of Legal Services – Most of the substantive comments in favor of the proposal focused on issues related to cost. These usually focused on the high cost of hiring an attorney and the reality that many individuals cannot afford to hire an attorney for most case types. Some respondents discussed experiences attempting to direct those in need to legal services, and that very often services were not available.

Cost of Legal Education – A few commenters also pointed out that the cost of a law degree may be unreasonably high and may itself be an access to justice barrier, in that legal education costs are ultimately passed along to legal consumers. This concern was expressed both by individuals who supported and opposed the proposal.

Training Concerns – Some commenters expressed that they generally supported the proposal but were concerned about training requirements. One commenter suggested that 500 hours was inadequate to demonstrate competence in family law. Others more generally expressed the importance of adequate training, and suggested that LPs needed to have a formal mechanism to seek guidance from attorneys when they run into trouble.

<td>I strongly oppose allowing paralegals to practice law without a license. The public will not understand the difference and won't know why they are not receiving the same services as from a licensed attorney. Paralegals are very important in my practice but I have direct oversight of all their work. This oversight is needed in ensuring a proper representation. I have review the proposed changes and don't believe there will be sufficient oversight for paralegals opting for licensing.</td>

<td>I firmly oppose the creation of a Licensed Paralegal program. The court system in general has gone to great lengths to accommodate self-represented litigants in areas where hiring an attorney is not appropriate. The state bar provides access to attorneys for legal help when cost is prohibitive, and many attorney donate pro bono work. While these programs could be improved and expanded, this is the appropriate way to provide access to legal services - through licensed attorneys only. Accrediting paraprofessionals is confusing to the general public and damaging to the perception of how the practice of law is viewed. Family law and Landlord tenant law are not &quot;lesser&quot; area of law that do not require the formal training of a law license by virtue of simply being the most commonly requested services by low income litigants. I want to fully acknowledge that the status quo is not adequately addressing the needs of all those who seek out the services of court in the areas of family law and landlord tenant issues. However, there is not a single doubt in my mind- not even for one moment- that the creation of a new licensing program for paralegals in the State of Oregon will do anything to ameliorate this issue; indeed I am most certain that it will create new issues and exacerbate existing problems. I strongly urge the board of governors to reject the proposal to form a licensed paralegal program.</td>

<td>Licensing a paralegal to practice law, even to a limited extent, is like licensing a nurse to perform an open heart surgery. The entry price to become a lawyer is very high and may be unreasonable. First, you will have to attend a college and attain at least BS or BA, then prepare and take LSAT; then, if admitted, survive 3-4 years in law school, graduate as a J.D, and at the end study again and pass the bar exam. You will end up with an enormous amount of student debt which, in most circumstances, you would have to pay back for the rest of your legal career. Now, imagine an individual who does not want to go to law school and pass the bar but who wants to tap into a market of legal services and practice of law protected, for now, by the bar license. Regardless of what tests or studies would be required from such individuals to license them, I consider it a cheating on the real lawyers who truly earned their rites of passage into the legal career. It will create an enormous disadvantage and legal market dilution for the Oregon lawyers. The Washington Supreme Court sunset the system last year due to lack of interest and cost. https://www.wsba.org/for-legalexperts/join-the-legalexpert-in-wa/limited-license-legal-technicians/decision-to-sunset-lllt-program</td>

I don’t know how the economics of this could possibly entice any paraprofessional to go through the system, and like Washington State’s program, may be abandoned after time and money spent creating the program.

<th>Speaking to landlord-tenant law in particular, the law is complex and changing. Also, adverse attorney’s fees are provided by law against non-prevailing parties. Attorneys who do not practice regularly in this area should not. Although I am concerned about the lack of representation for many litigants, this isn’t the answer. I think this will just lead to poor service with legal detriment, especially for under represented communities.</th>

<td>The comparison to a nurse practitioner is a false analogy because such nurses are highly trained with masters level credentials. Access to legal help is a problem. The answer is to make lawyers for these areas more affordable and available—not to diminish the fundamental competence of the representation. These cases can quickly demand competence in procedure, constitutional law, and other areas. It would violate our fundamental ethical duties to outsource this practice to someone other than a trained lawyer. This proposal is the wrong answer to an urgent problem.</td>

<td>The definition of the unauthorized practice of law is &quot;The practice of law by a person, typically a nonlawyer, who has not been licensed or admitted to practice law in a given jurisdiction.&quot; Only lawyers may practice law. Permitting paralegals to practice law is illegal! It should remain that way.</td>
<td>I said no because family law issues are so complicated. I am less concerned about the landlord tenant issues representing a tenant in a residence. The statutes governing this area are so detailed and allow less wiggle room for the tenant side representative. I have worked with non attorney mediators in these situations; their training is detailed. Obviously, the mediators had to understand the issues and governing statutes to be a competent mediator. The feedback for the program has been really good.</td>
<td>I am a current practicing attorney. Prior to law school I obtained a bachelor degree in paralegal studies. I would have loved to have this option available to me prior to law school as I would have most likely made my career in that world without having to go through law school. That being said, I have a four-year bachelors degree. My concern is that most paralegals have only a certification that is about a year long. That is not enough education in the legal area to be able to give legal advice and guidance. I think that if you make this a thing, which you should, there needs to be an education requirement (sorry if I missed it in the materials) prior to applying for licensing. One year or a &quot;certificate&quot; is not enough to have a &quot;stepped up&quot; paralegal career without a supervising attorney. I used to teach in a certification program for paralegals and I will say that there were quite a few who I would have grave concerns helping people without the assistance of a lawyer--but there were some who I would feel like that they grasped the material and came to understand it. This can be a wonderful, but potentially dangerous idea if not done correctly, and the ones that will be harmed will be the public with the attorneys to clean up the mess.</td>
<td>Regarding malpractice insurance through the Professional Liability Fund (PLF): It appears the report for the Board of Governors did not contain an analysis regarding the PLF's position on: insuring a new group of professionals; whether lawyers' PLF premiums would increase; what the limits of coverage would be; and whether acts of an LP outside the scope of practice would be covered. Providing this information about the PLF's proposed billing structure is critical for the public, including lawyers, to provide informed input on the proposal.</td>

<td>I strongly disagree that a prior disbarment or resignation Form B should just be a &quot;consideration&quot; in C&amp;F Process. It should prevent individuals from becoming LPs, period. The bar and the court have an obligation to prevent disbarred lawyers from re-victimizing the public. Disbarred lawyers and those who resign while discipline is pending should not just be allowed to form a fiduciary relationship with clients under a different license. In Oregon, disbarment and Form B resignation is permanent; there is no good reason to make standard on this lower for a (likely) more vulnerable population of clients who cannot afford lawyers.</td>

I understand that the lower income population need assistance with legal matters, but to take it out of the hands of lawyers who are trained to see how these issues impact other areas of law and the implications would be irresponsible. When I was in law school, I felt my clinical experience was the best use of my outrageous tuition dollars. But my law school dissolved the legal clinic which obviously left a gaping hole in access to justice for the greater Portland area. To address the opening comment comparing a legal paraprofessional to a nurse practitioner, apples and oranges. A NP first earns a BSN which is a minimum of four years of higher education. Then, a NP continues to earn a Master's in nursing which is usually an 18-month program at a minimum. <td>Oregon already under-values the benefits of educated and tested attorneys and the public pays the price. Not the majority of the public, they either never use an attorney (whether it would help them or not) or are the large group that is unaware of the legal risks they take all the time. Oregon allows real estate brokers to basically practice law in every real estate transaction. In many other states in the US, attorneys are used in a home purchase. In Oregon, consumers routinely forego the attorney and rely upon the real estate brokers and the title company to assist them. Everybody saves about $2,000 per party per transaction. The vast majority skate through unscathed. Many people buy a home with legal problems but are blissfully unaware. They, of course, become angry if the issues are uncovered by the next buyer. Maybe 5% blow up when a legal issue emerges. At this point, the cost of litigation inhibits most to just live with it. Everybody saves $2,000, most others just live with the errors and a few pay a lot to rectify them. The opportunity for preventative maintenance is lost. We just deal with the blown engines. OSB is complicit in this. We ignore the unlawful practice of law by the real estate brokers when we could prevent it. We know what the problems are and we know how to fix them. We choose not to do so. This does not serve the public well. I recently was consulted on a do it yourself divorce. The wife knew it could be done without attorneys so she conditioned her agreement on doing so. She thought that involvement of attorneys would make the process more adversarial. So, the husband wrote up their dissolution order using a fill in the blank form that the court provided. He had to add an addendum cause the specific assets they had did not fit the form. He mistakenly said that a family trust they had could not be changed. Of course, five years later, it needs to be changed and they can't. So, they pay me a lot of money to work around it. If they had understood that attorneys are problem solvers they could have written the addendum properly and saved a lot expense, risk and heartache. There is general attitude in Oregon that experts are not to be trusted. The distrust of attorneys fits into this. This proposal makes it a self fulfilling prophecy. With less educated and trained para-professionals doing family law and landlord tenant work, there will be more train wrecks. Oregonians will see their attitudes re-enforced. We need better educated, more tested professionals, not less. This proposal does not recognize and value the benefits that bar admitted attorneys bring. I think this is worth focusing on. What will it mean to have less educated, tested and trained persons practicing law, but, held to a lesser standard of care? Possibly more claims based on &quot;common senseâ€• . What the law should be instead of what it is. Law school is a great narrowing of thinking and a tremendous concentration on the law and the practice of law. A school to teach you to think like a lawyer. A painful three years of Socratic method. Vocational school, not graduate school. Much less interest and time on one's opinions on things and much more on what the cases say than an academic program. If you miss out on the narrowing and concentration, where are you? The bar exam tests whether you learned your lessons well. Without that, what is the check on the ignorant and the unskilled?</td>

LPs would be able to do more than assist with the mechanical aspects of cases; they could help clients understand court rules and statutes and preserve clients' rights through timely completion of deadlines and attendance and participation at hearings, and their ability to handle less complex/more routine matters may lower costs and expedite matters in the legal system overall. With proper training and oversight, the LP program could aid Oregonians in leveling the playing field vis-a-vis equitable access to quality advocacy.</td>

| Yes | Yes | No | Yes | Right now it is all or nothing if you are poor. Much will be cut and dried but a paralegal will be aware when they are getting into deep water and seek advice from a licensed attorney. It seems like there needs to a provision for this that does not necessarily tie them to one attorney. It should be acceptable to additionally advise on credit/debt issues within a limited area of practice. The whole point is keep people from committing dumb errors for lack of legal knowledge and dig themselves deep holes from which they can not escape. It should level the legal playfield so that those without attorneys are not taken advantage by those with access to attorneys, which happens far too often in divorce and custody cases. |

| Yes | Yes | No | No | There is a real problem with people of modest means not having access to competent representation. I am confident that many of the potential people who would be seeking this license could do good work and help those that would otherwise not get help in many cases. I can tell you how many people that I have worked with in the past decade (court staff, paralegals, legal assistants) that have unique insight and knowledge and competency that could carry out the aims of this program just fine. But remember that the problem is that people don't have access to legal representation. Giving them something less (the question asks about allowing "limited representation" is on point) doesn't seem to cure that problem. I think it could create a David and Goliath problem in many cases. How can you negotiate with a family law attorney if you can not try a case or deposition an opponent? Same in an FED? Sure a licensee could point that out to a client but will they do so at the expense of a potential fee that they could earn by otherwise saying that the settlement proposed by opponents attorney seems fine and I can write it up for my low fee? Not saying that would happen even in most cases but I think it would be fair to say that that conflict exists. Worse problem with an FED case. There are attorney fee statutes that allow lawyers to represent modest clients and they do so if they have a case for free. How does this potential barrier of getting in touch with those attorneys help? If you are a licensee that has been limited in your abilities by not being given all of the tools that your opponent potentially enjoys then does that solve the problem of fairness?
In our culture people are ingrained that when faced with a legal problem, most people will tell them to talk to an attorney. I sympathize with the argument that if people can't afford an attorney then what does this harm. The potential harm is that for some people to skip that step (a client could be thrifty or referred or misinformed) and potentially avoid initially seeking the advice of an attorney or other programs like the bar referral service, legal aid, and other programs that are designed to combat the problem that this is trying to solve. I also think we have to give attention to Washington State's experience with their program. This was tried and this has failed. It ended up being a waste of time and money. Directing resources into this program that could otherwise be directed towards solutions of getting people full representation with all of the tools at hand is a mistake. Donate the money to legal aid and St. Andrews Legal clinic. This program creates the idea of a solution that gives us permission to take 10 years of vacation from finding plausible solutions until this fails to cure and might very well hurt a number of people along the way. This program is full of good intentions. But what do they say the road to hell is paved with? | Lawyer |
| Yes | Yes | No | No | I oppose the creation of a Licensed Paralegal program. The representation and practice of law is very complex and requires years of education in the myriad of issues which may arise in even the simplest of cases. For example, representation of a person in a family law matter requires extensive knowledge of tax law, laws on retirement assets, and other topics that a paralegal with less than a year of &quot;experience&quot; simply won't have. At a bare minimum, there needs to be required education - not just &quot;experience&quot; - related to the topics within the law that a paralegal may face in any given case. Additionally, the State and the Bar have an obligation to the public to ensure that paralegals know and understand these issues. In other words, there needs to be a bar examination. If the Court intends to allow some practice of law without an examination, why require it for any? This proposal places the public - the people that the education and testing requirements to practice law are there to protect - at risk to uneducated and untested practitioners of law. I agree - there is a lack of education and testing related to the topics within the law that a paralegal may face in any given case. Oftentimes, people are robbed by those professing to be able to assist the public with these type of matters, read UPL, and the people not only don't get the help they need but more often than not end up in more trouble due to the lack of correct representation. I whole heartedly support this concept of licensing paralegals to provide limited legal services to the public. Kudos to Oregon! | Member of the public (not a lawyer or judge) |

<td>Comment: I have been a legal assistant in the Rogue Valley for over 20 years. Although I do see how a paraprofessional program can be of great service to the community at large, I don't think it is the right step for Oregon to take at this time. My primary argument is supported by the article published today (November 29, 2021) in the Oregonian titled, “Oregon Bar proposes to let paralegals represent clients in some housing, family law cases”. The seventh paragraph opens with “Of more than 1,000 people surveyed for the study, about half did not know where to look for help and hadn’t heard of legal aid.” How is adding another resource of any help people who don't even know the current resources exist? It seems the better option would be to implement something that would make the current resources more visible. For example, rather than requiring a blip in a termination notice about legal aid, why not assemble a colorful pamphlet that landlords (or their attorneys) are required to provide to tenants that explicitly outlines the type of aid available and how to access it. This seems far more imperative, implementable, and cost effective than providing another, albeit affordable, resource that lower income people would still be unaware of.</td>

<td>Washington State had a similar program - LLLT - which has been closed to new members. The WA State Supreme Court's letter dated June 5, 2020 discontinues the LLLT program. The letter states in part that: &quot;The program was an innovative attempt to increase access to legal services. However, after careful consideration of the overall costs of sustaining the program and the small number of interested individuals, a majority of the court determined that the LLLT program is not an effective way to meet these needs, and voted to sunset the program.&quot; Note that existing LLLTs may continue to provide services in the family law arena, and any individuals in the pipeline as of June 4, 2020 are allowed to complete the requirements for licensing by July 31, 2021. No new LLLTs will be admitted thereafter. The excellent budget analysis over the past several months by WSBA Treasurer Daniel Clark, following a detailed report to the court last year by prior WSBA Treasurer Dan Bridges, helped focus the court's attention on the significant cost to WSBA members since the LLLT program's inception: $1.4 million to license 44 individuals, of which there are currently 38 in active practice. A request from the LLLT Board to spend nearly $1 million more in member dues over the next 8 years to sustain the program, and to allow LLLTs to practice in two more areas - Washington administrative law and eviction and debt assistance, was declined by the court. Just some thoughts to inform your decision. The goal is laudable, but accomplishing it will be challenging. No argument there is a need - but how to best solve it continues to be debated. I wish your association every success in your desire to meet the need. Perhaps you can find a way where others have stumbled.</td>

<th>This is a slippery slope. Paralegals are incredibly valuable and supportive and can be a wonderful way to reduce legal fees, but there should be an attorney to oversee them. Allowing paralegals to practice law will be more confusing to the public and will lead to a situation where attorneys may be seen as unnecessary when they really are for that matter or the related matter. I worry this proposal would be burdensome for both paralegals and clients, especially in the family law context. Paralegals do not have law degrees and it’s a slippery slope to allow them to represent clients in court. I don’t disagree that there should be an expansion of access to legal resources, including attorneys, for individuals with modest means and would fully support state funds towards organizations like SALC or LASO or a new organization. However, any person authorized to give legal advice and represent clients in court should have a legal degree.

I did not have a civil legal need for myself. I work with people who have civil legal needs, please see comment.

I am a domestic violence advocate with a legal advocacy focus. 99% of my clients have ongoing family law cases while I am working with them. One of the biggest challenges I see my clients face is a lack of options for legal representation. There are many ways my clients fall through the gaps: they cannot afford "regular attorneys"; Legal Aid is at full capacity and cannot take on more clients; the client makes too much for Legal Aid, but they are still "poor" and cannot afford other legal help. This challenge is heightened when the abuser has access to money, and can easily afford an attorney. I believe Oregon should start this program for paralegals, because I think it would give more access to justice for people that are living in poverty and that are already...
| Yes | Yes | No | I am a landlord/tenant attorney. I challenge anyone on the OSB panel to spend a day at my firm and try to advise clients regarding landlord/tenant law. Landlord/tenant law has become one of the most technically complex areas of law, thanks to a myriad of hastily enacted, poorly written and internally inconsistent statutes and ordinances.

FED judges see a mere tip of the legal iceberg. There is a whole world of fair housing issues, contract disputes, negligence demands, utility disputes, relocation expense claims, and so much more that FED judges never see.

We have a full team of attorneys working full time on landlord/tenant issues. Neither my firm, nor any other firm specializing in landlord/tenant law, understands all of the laws. Even the authors of the judges will tell you, by their own admissions, that many of the current laws are ambiguous and problematic.

The supposition that tenants lack access to legal advice and attorneys is baseless and misleading. From the time a small group of tenants' attorneys started mailing advertisement letters to all tenants in all local FEDs, through the time that Legal Aid figured out that it can be paid BOTH the grant money it receives PLUS attorney fees pursuant to ORS 90.255 and other statutes/laws, tenants' attorneys have been climbing out of the woodwork and seeking clients.

Finally, the cavalcade of new statutes and ordinances, when coupled with massive rent losses and increased expenses, have driven landlords' expenses through the roof. The massive uptick in tenants' claims and litigation - much of which is frivolous or "innovative" - has likewise increased landlords' expenses.

I've seen an exodus of mom 'n pop landlords from the business of being a landlord, and the expense related to the injection of paralegals looking for something to do into the litigation realm will exacerbate the problems.

I'm a huge proponent of great landlord/tenant relationships. I remember the days when the public liked landlords. Alas, today's political machinations have largely steered the public's perception against landlords. Your proposal will further that rift. Those landlords who survive the current turmoil will adjust. Future tenants will pick up the tab. In other words, your proposal will fiscally harm the very people (tenants) this ill-conceived notion is purportedly intended to protect.

Finally, if anyone took a serious look at the current issues, eliminating bad tenants from rental properties would ultimately benefit good tenants fiscally and in many other ways. Alas, I'd bet bad tenants will do bad things in bad cases.

Respectfully, Jeffrey S. Bennett |

Yes  No  Other: (Comment box will appear below after selecting) I was an attorney at the time so I self-represented. Not sure Yes  There is a continuing need for legal assistance in the areas of family law and landlord tenant law. Licensing paralegals will increase the continuum of resources available to meet those needs. Attorneys will continue to be necessary for many folks, but paralegal with adequate training, licensing, and insurance will be a good way to provide a resource for basic legal services when an attorney is not affordable or available.

Yes  Yes  Yes  Yes  Yes  As a retired attorney who practiced domestic relations law in Bend for 47 years, I believe the OSB proposal for expanded authority of paralegals to advise clients in this area has great merit. I have reviewed the detailed proposal and am in general agreement with the parameters of the proposal. My concern, as obviously is the committee's, would be that paralegals be trained in issues of what the courts normally do in custody cases, ie, who gets custody, what is the usual provision for parenting time and what factors can affect the "normal" parenting time award. Are there other parties who may have rights to parenting time? Property division: what does the court normally do in dividing property? What is the effect of separately held property and was it co-mingled during the marriage. What circumstances justify an unequal distribution? It would be imperative that the paralegal be trained in all of the aspects of the law pertaining to those areas in which he/she is authorized to advise the client. The paralegal should have an attorney or attorneys to which he/she could seek advice where the paralegal is unsure of what the law may be. Paralegals should be required to keep up on current statutes pertinent to domestic relations as well as recent case law which is constantly changing in important ways. If the program is properly managed and controlled I believe it would allow access to many people who now must struggle on their own and without a clue as to what the law is. It will probably be a great boon to the courts by streamlining cases which otherwise get bogged down with the court being required to explain either the law or court procedures. Good luck in your endeavors. Once again Oregon is out in front in providing much needed services to an under served population.

Sincerely, Max Merrill

<td>My name is Valerie Sasaki and I'm an Oregon tax attorney. We have had a variety of paraprofessionals in tax practice for many years without a substantial negative impact to either client service or our business. In fact, licensed tax preparers and enrolled agents serve a valuable niche in helping the majority of individuals who don't have access to attorneys or CPAs to prepare their returns and represent them in simple tax matters. Are all of the paraprofessionals of equal skill or education? No. Some do not do a good job. However, from my perspective, their presence in the marketplace is a net positive. They take complex situations and help clients navigate them at a lower price point than we would, often in geographic areas that are not well served by attorneys. This is appropriate for many situations. Based on this experience, I'd support an increased role for paralegals to help clients in the areas of Family Law and landlord/tenant, provided that the parameters of where they are allowed to act and where they need to involve counsel are very clearly defined and enforced. I'm happy to discuss this further. 503-226-2966</td>

<td>I have done a lot of volunteer advocacy with tenants over the years and my current position is in Fair Housing where we see a desperate need for more legal representation for individuals experiencing both housing discrimination and LLT violations. In my county, Jackson County, the threshold for being able to qualify for nonprofit legal support is very high and it's extremely rare that I've seen low-income tenants receive support. There are also no private attorneys in my area (that I know of) who represent tenants with the exception of one attorney but he also represents the local landlord association so he can often not take cases. As a result landlords are even more emboldened to break the law because they know people don't have access to legal help even if they do know their rights.</td>

<td>I have the following concerns with this concept: 1. Who are going to train these paralegals and continue to train them as the law changes? What type of paralegal training will it require (AA or Certificate)? 2. If attorneys are going to be required to train these paralegals and there are not enough attorneys to provide the underlying services, how are the attorneys going to have the time resources to train these individuals? 3. The scope of representation is not defined. Will the paralegals be able to appear in court? Issue subpoenas? 4. How is liability coverage going to extended? Is the OSB going to be required to license, discipline and review the actions of these paralegals? Are they going to pay dues? 5. How is the cost of the new administration going to be paid? 6. If the need is acute how is this going to address the need? How is the OSB going to ensure that services get to needy communities? It appears that only firms that would be able to train these individuals would be large and in cities. 7. Is there going to be a licensing exam? Please provide the details of your proposal as soon as possible. I am an attorney providing legal services in a small community (Monmouth, Oregon). I see the need every day, but the feasibility is in the details.</td>

<td>We have spent our retirement in family court in Washington county going into our 7th year now for our grandchild. Being able to access a paralegal would have saved us hundreds of thousands of dollars. The system is completely broken and often does not consider the best interest of the child. The child is a commodity in family court for professionals such as therapists, psychologists, attorneys, reunification therapists, parenting coordinators, visitation supervisors, if you are identified as able to pay, you indeed will pay. Also abuse is ignored and we were told not to bring it up or we would possibly lose custody. It is an unregulated system in which a citizens review board at the very least should be implemented. So yes the option of a paralegal would be really helpful.</td>

<td>Legal matters seem to be a game of who has the most money to spend, which puts many at a great disadvantage, especially with the recent economic and other challenges COVID has wrought. A paralegal with experience in your area of focus has observed much and would understand key aspects that can help you win your case: example: how to properly format and write documents and present evidence with any filings, and include relevant statutory and case law references. While they cannot represent us in the courtroom, the wisdom gained during their years of experience can be invaluable to pro se clients at a fraction of the cost of paying an attorney's staff paralegal to write the same documents. This option also offers far more assistance (and hope) to the domestic violence population, who often have to rely upon non-profit resources. Even the best of them cannot afford to retain an in-house attorney, but could afford to hire paralegals to support the victims who desperately need it and perhaps a consulting attorney for more complicated matters. This option could truly even the playing field for those who could not afford justice otherwise.</td>

Just because all people cannot afford legal services, don't dumb down the requirements for providing services. This is a boon for paralegals and nothing more. <td>I will be the first to sign up for this program!! As a young senior citizen who moved to Ashland, OR from norther CA four years ago, I considered taking the OR bar exam, but the expense of it as well as my concern about employment opportunities prompted me to work as a teacher instead. After I practiced as a licensed attorney in MA and CA, I returned to school (as I love learning!) to obtain my teaching credentials in English and Special Education. Teaching is not at all as it was in the past, and I would be excited to return to practicing law as a paralegal rather than as the attorney of record. How would this work? Would training be subsidized by the state at all? Would conference rooms be available for paralegals to meet with clients? If a law office decided to hire me as a specially trained paralegal in family and landlord-tenant practice, would the firm be responsible for my salary? I'm sure that these issues will be resolved after the Supreme Court's consideration of the legality of this new license, but I'm thinking out loud!! To conclude, I believe that such a program can only be helpful to civil litigants who otherwise would have no legal representation or legal advocate to advise them. Also, it would permit judges to remain in their official roles and not obscure their decisions based on a concern for violation to unrepresented parties' rights. I welcome an opportunity to be part and parcel of this new program. Best of Luck Debra Halpern debraslaw@aol.com 415 987-9249</td>

<td>By allowing good paralegals to help this may help the many cases of family law involving domestic violence that are normally exploited by lawyers. The abusers want to stay in control and punish victims and the victim is fighting to keep themselves and the children safe. These cases can drag on for years or until the children age out. They cost the family everything and the lawyers benefit by the prolonged conflict, trauma, and abuse. I hope this program allows for more families to have a quicker closure, more safety, and can start life over again without being financially devastated by the lawyers.</td>

<td>Please more civil legal help especially in rural Oregon. I am in Klamath Falls. I was involved in accident left me disabled. I moved here from Portland. I am quiet simpler life. I have been in current rental for 12 years. I have been harassed, coerced and unable to exercise my rights to equal enjoyment of property. I have been sent multiple notices on termination of tenancy for not letting landlord take more pictures of house to sell. I am survivor domestic violence and a qualified individual with disabilities. I have asserted my rights to peaceful enjoyment of rental. My landlord preysed upon every reasonable accommodation I asked him to consider. His ultimatum was to move out. 27 days leave rental good condition. New rental. Let us list house online and give access to real estate agents when they want to come and go and if I do go along with it I will receive a favorable review. I have multiple messages photos of stranger claiming to have a right to use keys to come in and I haven't had peaceful night sleep since August. My daughter and I have now got our 3rd lease violation notice with no cure and come to find out the landlord is not a landlord he's the executor of will of house. I am facing court possibly or he will just sell and new owner will give me 30 days. I am on hud so anything court related possibly will get me kicked out. I have no legal recourse until or if he takes me to court! I don't deserve to be homeless. I pay my rent on time and good tenant for 12 years. My landlord died from COVID July. As a law student, I have developed an interest in both family law and housing law. I have learned that most tenants do not have protection. ⟹ The need for more is desperate. I know from experience that even mentioning that I have legal support has prompted landlords to back off whatever they are doing (usually harassment), or at least ease up. <td>As a law student, I have developed an interest in both family law and housing law. I have learned that most tenants do not have representation and most landlords do. Usually, in legal matters, landlords win. Those tenants who are able to secure representation are much more likely to prevail than those who do not. Surely this is true even when limited in scope. Paralegals being an option for limited representation would expand the options both in number and cost for accessible representation. Further, in my family law clerking experiences, I have seen a need for low-income families to secure cheaper divorces and more effective mediation. Families who stay married and couple with other people create a complicated web of domestic relationships that hinder the family life. Further, when unhealthy family dynamics are at play, efficiency is of the essence. However, low income family low clinics as things stand are overburdened. I believe the OSB knows all of what I have expressed, but I wanted to reiterate it in order to show my full support for this proposal.</td>

<td>I hired an attorney for a civil lawsuit that he blatantly failed to keep my interest valid when an arbitrator kept delaying a judgement and my attorney failed to inform me of the arbitrators lack of attention to my case and had been disciplined by the Oregon state bar before for dereliction of duty. This I lost my case due to statues of limitations. I contacted the OSBar they disciplined the arbitrator again but never informed me I could use the attorneys malpractice insurance. This cost me $1000’s in attorney fees and 10k’s of 1000’s in lost civil awards. Bc I had never dealt with the legal system before and had no clue of my rights to claim my losses against the attorneys insurance I lost my business and was forced to file bankruptcy costing me 7777. Who knows how much I lost in future income from my successful jewelry business at the time. This still effects me today. It is a paraplegic. I’ve been paralyzed for 30 years. This civil suit happened in 2001-2003. Do I respect lawyers. Dam few. Would I hire another attorney for a civil suit. Highly unlikely. I’ve been hurt by every lawyer I had the misfortune to deal with except one and he lived in the state of Washington 35 years ago. I think the paralegal licensing is a fantastic idea if there’s truth in full disclosure if they screw up your case. This should be required information discussed during the first consult to let the client, plaintiff or defendant, knows if the attorney screws your case up in any way shape or form as to loose the case or parts of there within. The attorney or paralegal is required to help tge client to recover all said losses in the lawsuit the legal help failed to represent the case properly or any other failure and losses by the legal help. If you require this during any consultation with any paralegal or attorney so they know the clients are given full disclosure about their legal rights to be financially made whole. Then just maybe no one will have to go through what I went through and still suffer from my experience. Thank you for listening. Verl McCown, GGJE</td>

<td>I am a paralegal and worked in family law for almost 2 years. In total, I've been in the field for almost 5 years. Prior to joining the legal field, I was part of the medical field. There, we relied heavily on nurse practitioners (NP) and physician assistants (PA), so I can see the correlation. Paralegals are often an extension of their attorney. Moreover, I've heard from other paralegals that they're the ones who have been managing the cases from start to finish; the attorney just reviews the work and signs it off. Attorneys have us do this to (1) save the client money since our hourly rate is less than theirs and (2) save them time so they can focus on the legal strategy. Now, if a paraprofessional can take over some of their duties, such as attending a status check hearing, that would save clients so much money and allow the attorney to focus on more complex cases! Not only that, but it would give more people an accessible legal option. My questions about the program would be (1) how often would paraprofessionals have to renew their license? (2) Do they still need attorney supervision or can they work independently? (3) What is the fine line between giving legal advice in their area v. committing UPL?</td>

Especially in family law, people that go through separation already have financial hardship due to now having two separate households. Attorneys charge upwards of 10 x the amount of minimum wage, which a lot of people just cannot afford at this time in their life. I am certain that a lot of family cases could be resolved by the average person if they had help filling out the forms and get some basic help in their situation at the fraction of the costs!</td>

For this comment, I would like to note a program called Medical-Legal Partnership which serves low-income patients whose legal issues severely impact the patients' health. Prior to the pandemic the program was still in its pilot stage, however it has been in place for years now. I would love to see that program expand so that all medical providers could refer their patients with complex needs. At the very least, I would like to see all low-income clinics have access to this program. Expansion of MLP might be much easier with the supported services of paralegals. As a property manager with The Housing Authority of Portland, I believe this would directly help us to better serve the community if we could effectively do our jobs in a timely manner. Delays in the courts put the community and staff in danger when staff is unable to remove a dangerous tenant from the building, especially coupled with no support from police. It is a major public safety and health issue that is felt throughout the community and is especially harmful given the population we serve. If the costs of practicing as an attorney were reduced, such as PLF, bar dues, etc., or if there was a financial incentive or break from participating in MM, I would continue to participate in the program. Licensing paralegals to practice law creates a problematic risk and potential for numerous problems that attorneys later have to unwind. It also doesn’t make sense to flood the legal market when it was flooded with attorneys and there were no jobs upon graduation. Flooding the legal market with paralegals makes no sense when there are many options available.</td>

<td>I think this is a needed area! I have hired a lawyer many times and usually, each time, I have had to continue on my own due to costs. Because I am very resourceful, I was able to do that. Few can. That said, I believe that additional consideration needs to be given to those with experience and education. The education waiver is a great idea. I believe that current paralegal programs may not like it due to such lowering the number of students that may enroll in an official “paralegal” program. However, without such education waiver, it will lower the number of those available to the public that are indeed capable of performing such paralegal work. I have my bachelor’s degree in education and math. I was a certified teacher. I have a year of graduate work in vocational rehabilitation. All of this would count under the current proposal as far as education. However, the most important and valuable, experience would not appear to count. For 25+ years, I have worked with low income and persons with disabilities. I have owned and managed my own 20 rentals, am using professional property management software, have been a member of a landlord association, paid to attend conferences, filed evictions, written legal briefs (over 5 for LUBA) where I prevailed, look and passed Oregon’s property management exam (but chose not to become licensed for personal reasons), written IEPs and drafted medicated agreements, filed CCB complaints (and prevailed), and sued in small claims court. As an individual with experience in many areas that required me acting as my own lawyer, it appears none of my experiences would count. I have and am a landlord that works mostly with low income individuals and have always sought to protect their rights even as a landlord. Past tenants continue to contact me, asking for advice or help with a new landlord. My experiences (while owning my own property management company since 2004) have given me the skills to help with filling out forms and mediations, look up legal statues, rules, and precedents/cases, apply legal concepts, coach, handle trust funds, etc. and the current proposal as written would exclude my experiences. I, personally, would love to give up/sell my property management practice to be able to help tenants and landlords who need help with tenant-landlord law! Yet, without an easier transition to the field as a licensed paralegal that truly considers one's experience in the licensing process, it is impossible....and the public misses out. This is even more important in rural areas. Please consider this in your planning.</td>

As an organizer for housing justice, it makes a lot of sense to me to reduce the cost of basic legal expertise for dealing with these common issues that are often intertwined with class, wealth, language, culture, and other differences between people.

100% support this program, there is a great need, and legal services should not be exclusionary. This program could assist regular working class people with everyday issues in a manner consistent with Oregon’s equity and equality goals. Please fast track the Licensed Paralegal program.

Thank you.

I was thrilled to see that the Oregon State Bar is moving ahead with the development of a license program for paralegals to assist clients in landlord/tenant and family law cases. It’s my hope that this well thought out and important program comes to fruition, as these types of efforts are key to tackling the current access to justice crisis.

I'm proud to have played a role in Utah’s establishment of a similar program, our licensed legal practitioner program. This program has allowed qualified and competent paralegals to provide legal assistance to clients dealing with certain family law matters, debt collection matters, and forcible entry and unlawful detainer cases. Over two years since its launch, the program has expanded the number of citizens able to access affordable and competent legal assistance. At the same time, I understand, that our Office of Professional Conduct has yet to receive a single complaint related to the conduct of a licensed legal practitioner.

The access to justice crisis affects every state in the nation, and Oregon is no exception. As you’re well aware, data shows that high percentages of Oregonians with civil legal problems are unable to access legal help. This leads to large numbers of unrepresented parties, even in critically important cases such as eviction and family law. I’m so glad to see that the Oregon State Bar is taking such an important step in addressing the problem head on. It will take bold and innovative solutions to narrow the justice gap, and the current proposal is just that. I look forward to following the success of Oregon’s program, and seeing how it inspires even more states to act.

I am a social worker and I help low income pln everyday. It is very hard to find affordable/income lawyers, especially if the pt speaks a language other than English. The few resources that exist are maxed out. So, I fully support having paralegals help with these matters! This is a fabulous idea!

This change is LONG overdue and is very similar to what the medical profession implemented decades ago. Originally, there were doctors and nurses, with all medical procedures requiring the participation and supervision of the doctor. Now we have doctors, nurse practitioners, and nurses. With the nurse practitioners providing care for less complex issues without the supervision of a doctor. It works brilliantly and the original detractors (doctors who wanted to protect their lock on the market) were quickly proven wrong. NPs now provide a substantial portion of primary care services to Oregon residents and are the backbone of our primary care system.

Implementing a licensed paralegal program will result in the same outcome as the medical industry embracing nurse practitioners. If you do license paralegals, make a clear cut line of when the situation must be escalated to an attorney, and out of the hands of the paralegal. Ensure the paralegal acquires a 40 hour certificate in mediation because mediation is useful to resolve family and landlord cases. Require the paralegal certificate to be ABA accredited because there are many bogus paralegal programs. Most people cannot afford lawyers as they charge too much per hour. And putting a cap of attorney fees is unlikely to be passed as a law in USA. So then if people do not hire an attorney due to high cost, then they represent themselves in pro per, and are clueless as to how to navigate the legal system.

I know many people could use an affordable, skilled and licensed alternative to lawyers.

It is difficult to see how this would effectively work in practice. How will the restriction on "limited" advice be enforced in practice? Who will mentor, supervise, teach these paralegals? This will likely drive up costs as a person slightly more knowledgeable than a pro se litigant will be potentially be dealing with an attorney.

Also, given that family law is one of major producers of malpractice actions and bar complaints having less highly trained advisors for a client seems to be a recipe for increasing malpractice claims.

I practiced landlord/tenant law for about one year. During that time, the vast majority of those clients had both rudimentary legal needs which could have been addressed by a program like this and severely limited finances. If our goal is to serve our communities and make Oregon a more equitable legal landscape, this proposal is a no brainer. No individual should have to choose between suffering illegal behavior at their home and being able to put food on the table. I would encourage anyone who is against this proposal to ask someone making minimum wage for their opinion. In my experience, most lawyers are out of touch with the economic realities so many Oregonians face. If people cannot afford legal help, they will continue to suffer. Is there a more disgusting form of injustice than that which harms people who cannot protect themselves? Is it not our duty as stewards of the legal system to promote justice? Not everyone who has a passion for helping people through the law wants to be a lawyer - we should allow anyone who meets these new criteria to assist us in assisting everyone else.
| Yes | No | Not sure | No | I am strongly opposed to OR creating an LP program. As a member of the WSBA and practicing attorney in Washington state, I have first hand witnesses the failure of WA's LLLT program. It has failed to: (1) increase access to basic legal services, especially in underserved or rural areas; (2) it usually is not cheaper then attorneys, especially in underserved or rural areas; (3) it has failed to produce enough LLLTs to change the attorney market; and, (4) it fails to protect the public by giving them access to someone who lacks the basic skills to assist with their case.

For two recent years, I served as the president of my rural county WA bar association. As an underserved and rural area, in desperate need of family law and landlord tenant lawyers, we had exactly one LLLT (and one that recently became an LLLT due to WA waiving the July 2020 bar exam -- they failed the LLLT exam two times before). The one practicing LLLT consistently had serious errors in their pleadings and proposed orders. They didn't understand the complexity of the law, nor other issues such as tax implications. Opposing counsel or our one superior court judge routinely stepped in assist the LLLT. More importantly, the LLLT wasn't cheaper than a local attorney.

Instead of creating another ill fated LP program, you should create ways to assist new small town and solo attorneys. As a new lawyer, I wanted to practice in my rural community. I had the skills and network to start a successful small firm, including landlord tenant and family law practices areas at a low cost. However, my crushing student loan debt has kept me in the public sector, working towards public service loan forgiveness. Instead of opening my own firm, I have consistently taken on pro bono cases through our local legal aid clinic.

In summary, the LP program won't fix the access or cost issue. Fundamentally, states need to do more to allow new attorneys to start their own practice. This comes down to lowering the cost of law school, creating scholarships for law students, and assisting solos with health insurance and practice basics. |

| Yes | No | Not sure | No | Bad legal advice can be more damaging than no advice. |

| Yes | No | Not sure | Yes | I think this is a phenomenal idea. It would expand access to legal services and make it easier for ppl to exercise their rights. |

| Yes | No | Not sure | Yes | If the goal of this LP program is truly to reduce costs to the public, then the OSB must restrict the rates that LPs may charge for their limited services. Otherwise, this program will allow non-attorneys to profit from practicing law without requiring them to attend law school. Moreover, if this program is implemented, then LPs must adhere to the same rules of professional conduct that attorneys do, and must make it clear to the public that they are non-attorneys. |

| Yes | No | Not sure | The program should not be enacted if the public is not protected from incompetent advice through malpractice insurance from the PLF. The PLF should not pool the risk of attorney malpractice and paralegal malpractice; they are two different kinds of risk for two distinct classes of workers. The licensed paralegals should bear their own cost of malpractice insurance. Until that cost is factored in, there is no way to know the public will receive services at a lower cost than from attorneys. |
| Yes | Yes | Not sure | No | I am opposed to LP program. Many of my family law cases as a lawyer were cleaning up serious errors in existing cases that were made by various “paralegals” either in Oregon or elsewhere. Some were so bad it seemed like kindergartners were in charge of the paperwork. The errors were grievous and affected substantial rights of the parties. Of course, I’ve also been retained to correct grievous mistakes made by the parties themselves in cases where they completed the paperwork without legal advice. Those were almost as bad, but at least they weren’t “clothed” in legitimacy.

What I very much support is some improvement in the OJD iForm family law self-service program. I use it often with a party who just wants legal review of their paperwork. The first time was long and drawn out and tried my patience, but I soon became a big fan. The step-by-step, guided process helps eliminate gross mistakes and essentially provides enough information to make informed choices about an issue that MUST be addressed. I think with some more tweaks, the on-line assistance can be really, really good. Some things that need tweaking are: the ability to go BACK and correct something that you later realize you did wrong; the ability to at least TALK about retirement accounts as personal property and to distribute them to one or the other party (not divide them, which requires a QDRO, but to award to one party or the other). Those are the two issues that leap to mind immediately.

I do not believe the public is adequately protected by allowing paralegals to function AS LAWYERS. How can they have sufficient training if they don’t have as many years of education, cross-subject information (like disabled children or parents, hidden assets, etc.) as lawyers do? Family law is extremely complex. It addresses a dozen issues in a single case. I have had to clean up other LAWYERS’ mistakes in some cases. I think it misleads persons in need of legal advice to think that a nonlawyer will be able to adequately and accurately answer their questions and give correct advice.

Let’s put more effort into the self-guided iForm system that now does a fairly good job, to make it much, much better. Maybe a working group of practitioners and whoever designed the program would be a really good idea. |

| Yes | Yes | No | No | Lawyers go to law school for a reason. When physicians started letting nurse practitioners take off lower level patient it was a slippery slop that lead to lower quality patient care. This is a line in the sand. |

| Yes | Yes | No | No | The Bar, which is supported by lawyer fees should not be in the business of putting lawyers out of business. More important, the commodification of all sorts of professional services contributes to meaningful reductions in the quality of those services to people in need. This proposal will also impact the ability of new lawyers to be trained in the field in which they wish to work because licensed paralegals will take that work. It should also be noted that lower income clients get the benefit of the training lawyers obtain from wealthier clients who pay their fees. This allows an experienced lawyer to represent individuals of lesser means in their divorce or perhaps tenant matter, at lower cost due to their efficiency and skill. I am a lawyer but have been a client several times. I would not have wanted a licensed paralegal representing me. I fear the dumbing down of skills, lesser adherence to ethical obligations and just a generalized reduction of quality and respect for the legal profession.

The bar should focus on being a bar organization and not on putting lawyers out of business and demeaning the profession. This is a mistake and I am glad I will be retiring soon. And note I do not work in either of the fields to be impacted by this mistake. |

| Yes | Yes | No | No | This would set a dangerous precedent! Attorneys have to go through so much intense training and it is helpful to have the balanced knowledge of laws in all areas (education, bar exam, etc.) not just a certain focus. Do not do this! Lawyers are also scraping by right now! |

| No | No | I thought I could do it myself | Yes | Yes | I am in complete support of a program that provides greater access to justice in these areas |

| No | No | The problem was resolved without needing an attorney | No | No | Oregon should not create a licensed paralegal program. This program and the bar exam alternative program devalue the degrees and professions of those who are already in practice. Paralegals will be asked to be making complex legal analysis that (especially in family law) can alter people’s entire lives and they do not have the necessary qualifications (both through education and through ethical/character and fitness exams and licensing) to be effective representatives |
| Yes | Yes | No | No | There is a push in both law and medicine for not fully licensed and trained folks (like nurse practitioners and paralegals) to be able to operate as, in effect, doctors and lawyers. I believe this push is not a good idea, and oppose expanding the ability of paralegals to do the same work as lawyers. Paralegals can already do a lot of legal work, but working with and under the supervision of a lawyer. This is appropriate. After all, the whole idea of law school and lawyer licensing is to equip those who are responsible for the provision of legal services with not just the technical knowledge, but also the professional judgment, and the advocacy skills, to provide good legal advice. To me this proposal is to allow people without that training to provide services that require that training. That certainly does not seem like a good deal to the consumer—it could lead to inadequate legal services. It isn’t a good deal for we attorneys—work we would do better would flow to under-qualified paralegals. I understand that paralegals may wish they were lawyers, but they aren't, so I don't see their desire to do things lawyers do to be a legitimate reason to support this. | Lawyer |
| No | No | Other: (Comment box will appear below after selecting) | Question N/A | Not sure | Yes | I think this would be great overall. In the Navajo Nation, I believe they allowed Navajo members to join the bar through similar requirements. It is a great way to provide access to legal representation or legal educators for the public. It is also a great way to allow access to the bar by minorities or by people of lower socioeconomic status. Additionally, I also think that paralegals can be much more knowledgeable about legal matters than many attorneys—especially newer attorneys (including me). I'm not sure how important the bar examination is, but that could be an additional requirement if people in the legal community are resistant to this new idea. | Lawyer |
| Yes | Yes | No | No | At our firm, we have 4 attorneys doing landlord-tenant cases. This is one of the most complex areas of law. The law is constantly changing and is filled with malpractice traps. Due to the complexity, I do not recommend it for paralegals to handle. This area of the law frequently overlaps with other areas of the law such as discrimination, and premises liability. Federal, state, county, and emergency mandates must all be considered. Jennie L. Clark, Attorney at Law | Lawyer |
| Yes | Yes | No | Yes | I strongly support Licensed Paralegals. I served on the OSB's first LLP task Force and have spoken publicly many times in support. The bottom line is this, many people need legal help and either cannot afford to hire a lawyer or choose not to. The resulting lack of access to legal help has crippled courts and the justice system and amounted to limiting access to justice. While a licensed legal professional may lack the knowledge and sophistication of an experienced lawyer, some legal help is better than none. For an assortment of reasons, and not very good reasons in my judgment, lawyers in general have failed to meet this critical need for legal services. William Howe, Gevurtz Menashe, Portland | Lawyer |
| Yes | Yes | No | Not sure | One of my primary concerns is in the realm of settlement. The skills and experience required to bring about a fair settlement are considerable. In my 20+ years experience practicing family law, these are learned over many years of practice as a lawyer dealing with another lawyer. I have grave concerns how a licensed paralegal would have these skills and be able to negotiate a settlement. As an attorney, I do not want to negotiate settlements with a paralegal. I vigorously try to settle all of my family law cases; I do not anticipate that would be likely if the opposing party is represented by a paralegal. | Lawyer |
| No | No | The problem was resolved without needing an attorney | No | No | This is ridiculous. If this passes, is the state of Oregon going to wipe away any debt lawyers incurred for attending law school. Licensed attorneys in Oregon, like myself, did not spend countless hours and racked up a heap of debt to watch a paralegal take my career over. Had law school, court costs, real estate prices not be so pricy and high, we lawyers wouldn't need to charge as much for our fees. Why don't the judges take a pay cut, how about the clerks of the court take a pay cut to reduce filing fees. Further, it is against the code of conduct for a NON LAWYER to engage in the practice of law. Once you give up one (or MULTIPLE) lawyer duties to non lawyers, the integrity of our profession goes out the window. This program cannot be created and if it is, the courts will experience a lot of malpractice suits. Why can't the paralegals that want to practice law, spend hundreds of thousands on law school, take, AND PASS, the Oregon Bar exam, and then charge whatever minimum fee they want to these people in need. This will show how broken law school costs are, and why an attorney needs to charge such fees for the maintaining of its practice. Creating this program would be the utmost largest problem of today's™ legal community; as countless struggling attorneys already are having a difficult time finding (and keeping) jobs, and repaying loans from attending law school and paying for the bar exam, among the thousands of dollars in attorney fees we pay to the state to maintain a professional license and keep insurance. At the heart of this program, is the unauthorized practice of law, for which is why the program must not exist. | Lawyer |
| Yes | Yes | Not sure | Not sure | If Oregon moves forward with this proposal, I strongly encourage limiting the practice areas to those which both have a strong public need and also a shortage of practicing lawyers. This should be limited to landlord tenant, domestic relations, immigration and small claims cases. I fear a strong backlash from practicing lawyers, especially newly minted attorneys, who feel slighted at the huge expense and debt many look on for their license, only to have their source of income significantly curtailed. By limited the scope of practice area for the LPs, we can ensure a balance of protecting the legal profession while also serving the general public. | Lawyer |

<td>I am a family law practitioner (27 years). I see the need for more services to the general public, but I am concerned about this program as proposed. Your video compares Nurse Practitioners with Licensed Paralegals. NPs have advanced graduate degrees, very specialized graduate education, requirements for practical training, plus rigorous testing and licensing. In contrast, Physician Assistants are well educated and trained- but they cannot practice independently. I'm curious why the Bar isn't looking to adopt the NP rigor for licensing to this process (which I would support fully). From experience, many legal assistants who have years of experience in a law office don't have the skills or knowledge to advise clients. Many have no formal education beyond high school. A year or two as a legal assistant does not prepare the person to advise on the complex litigation issues presented in family law. I think it is a recipe for harm to clients. That said - I do fully support the concept of paralegal licensing similar to the nurse practitioner model if the Bar wants to give them the ability to open their own businesses. Otherwise I strongly encourage the Bar to start this program of licensing paralegals using a provisional plan where the paralegal would at least work under lawyer supervision. I think giving us all the opportunity to work out the &quot;kinks&quot; under supervision eliminates the risk to the public and gives the Bar a chance to measure success and refine the final licensing requirements for independent practice.</td>

|     |     |         | I am an attorney practicing almost exclusively in residential landlord-tenant law, representing only landlords. I have personally experienced an uptick in the last year of Legal Aid attorneys engaging in excessive discovery, delay tactics, and requests for jury trials in simple FED cases that are designed to move along quickly. In my opinion, there is no doubt that these tactics are designed to drastically increase the legal costs for landlords in an effort to force them to either abandon the FED case or settle on unfavorable terms. Tenants do not pay their attorneys from Legal Aid, while landlords are expected to pay their attorneys. This is an inequitable use of primarily public funding that allows Legal Aid to continue using these tactics to drive up the costs of FED cases. In my considerable experience over 30 years of practice, these tactics do NOT occur when private attorneys are representing the tenant while working on a contingency basis. Attorneys working on contingency still zealously represent their tenant-clients, but while not using the delay and discovery tactics regularly employed by Legal Aid. ORCP 17 sanctions are of little use in these types of cases for at least a couple of reasons. First, judges are generally reluctant to impose sanctions personally against attorneys, which is the only kind of sanction that would have any meaningful effect on these kinds of tactics (sanctions against the tenant-clients would be essentially meaningless). Second, in many of these kinds of cases, the Legal Aid attorneys can reasonably argue that they are entitled to demand what turns out to be excessive discovery, and certainly are entitled to demand a jury trial for their clients. ORCP 17 does not help in these situations. As such, serious consideration should be given to placing limitations of some kind on the proposed paralegal program to ensure that it is not abused in a manner to increase the costs of litigation. It is easy to envision Legal Aid or even law firms employing large numbers of paralegals and expanding what I perceive to be an effort to continue making FED cases prohibitively expensive for landlords. Alternatively, the Oregon Supreme Court should explore changes to court rules to make it easier to bring sanctions for using these kinds of tactics, whether employed by attorneys or paralegals. <td>I do not agree with such limited licenses to practice law. I would strongly vote against it if it were put to vote of the membership, would encourage the board to follow the majority of the bar members for direction. Also, if the bar adopts such a limited license, I sincerely hope they limit the landlord tenant scope to only residential landlord tenant and not commercial landlord tenant matters. My preference would be to not allow, but from what I hear, that ship has sailed. Sad to think this decision is being made without majority of the bar supporting it.</td>

<td>The current proposal involving paralegals seems designed to make the paralegals members of the Oregon State Bar. If that happens, that would technically make paralegals eligible to become (and run for) circuit court judges pursuant to ORS 3.050. An argument could also be made that they would be eligible to become (and run for) appellate judges, although it is less clear. I do not believe that is the intent of the program, and it may be worth looking into to avoid that becoming an unintended consequence.</td>

1. What is the definition of "need" for legal services? Is it merely the appearance of a pro-se party in court? Or is it the concrete knowledge that the pro-se party just got "hosed" by representing themselves in court? In other words -- do we know for sure that if the pro-se party had obtained a lawyer or legal advice, his or her case would have turned out "better"? In my experience litigating against pro-se parties, the pro-se parties "lost" because they had no case to begin with, and not because I or the legal system abused them. Judges go above and beyond to make sure these people are given due process and due respect in court.

2. Sadly, when it comes to professional services, you often get what you pay for. If a goal of this program is to make legal services more affordable, I think it opens the public up to being abused by "LPs" who are charging "more affordable" rates than attorneys, but who are basically doing nothing more than helping clients fill out forms. The LPs won't be providing "issue spotting" or wholistic advice like an attorney would, based on years of academic training and polishing of the mind. Time after time I have reviewed documents that I KNOW were prepared by legal staff, and not attorneys. Time after time these documents were flawed, and did not consider the "big picture" of a matter. These professionals are still billed at up to $175/hour for their services.

3. If the goal of this program is to make navigating the legal system easier, perhaps the legislature should revisit the messes it has created with statutes that are hard to understand and full of minefields. For example, landlord-tenant law has become a specialized legal practice area due to extreme risk to landlords who attempt DIY fixes to their problems. This wasn't always the case. The 2019 changes to the law were horrible for small landlords -- with the COVID-related amendments on top, even worse.

4. The LPs will not be a cure to basic human failings, or failings of the educational or social services systems. If you can't pay your rent, you will be evicted. If you marry unwisely, you'll end up divorced. If you are uneducated, you will struggle making contracts and understanding legal documents. you don't respond to the legal papers you've been served with, you'll end up with a judgment against you that will impact your life.

5. To the extent that any party to a legal proceeding is poor and is also a victim of abuse -- such as by an employer, or the police, or their spouse -- they should qualify for and be able to obtain legal aid. Invest in legal aid, law libraries, and even high school curricula that teach the basics of the Oregon legal system. Invest in more court staff or judges dedicated to uncontested divorces or child custody cases. Make law school more affordable so that qualified applicants can become lawyers, graduate with less debt, and perhaps be able to make a living billing their services at $100/hour in an under-served community.
Licensed paralegal programs like this have a lot of potential for extending access to justice in critical areas. However, these programs have failed in other states for a variety of reasons. Looking at the requirements for the proposed program, I anticipate that this one will fail as well, primarily for this reason: the requirements imposed on LPs to become licensed make it almost easier to just become a lawyer. That fact goes without saying, considering that the requirements are reduced, but not eliminated, if a candidate already has a JD. Particularly with respect to requirements for licensure, I would recommend looking at places where these programs work well—not just United States jurisdictions—and consider incorporating some of those approaches. Examples can be found in Kenya, Kyrgyzstan, and the United Kingdom. See 30 Wash Int'l L. J. 324, 381-65 (March 2021), available at: https://digitalcommons.law.uw.edu/wilj/vol30/iss2/10.

The use of licensed paralegal services in any or all family law cases is a poor idea, particularly when the case involves issues beyond just child custody, parenting time, and child support. Those cases alone can be difficult and complicated enough. Cases can become more complicated with multiple consequences involved when there are issues of division of property, both real property and personal property, division of liabilities, and when there is an issue of spousal support. It is unlikely that a lesser education and less experience will serve clients well in those situations. In addition, more widespread use of paralegal services in such cases only serves to diminish the value of services provided by attorneys, may increase the need for additional litigation to modify terms of a judgment (or to try to clean up problems created by a less than thorough or complete job done in the first place), and could create potential harm to litigants. There are even licensed attorneys who do not have a thorough understanding of the legal issues, procedures, and skills to provide all of the necessary services required for such cases, yet they are authorized to practice in that area of the law. Adding a group of people who are lacking in the legal education and experience to the mix, and who are not prepared to deal with all of the various issues that may arise will not serve the profession or the public well. It is often likely the litigant who chose to try to save money by using the services of a paralegal will end up spending much more for the services of an attorney later to attempt to correct or rectify problems that were created due to the lack of ability or experience of a paralegal. Therefore, Oregon should not create a Licensed Paralegal program that authorizes the type of authority that has been proposed.

Some years ago I went on record (but I can't locate the record) stating that the paralegal licensing program should start with JDs who are not admitted to the bar. Given that about 30% of the bar applicants never pass, there is a large pool available, and we at least know they were smart enough to graduate from university and law school. If that pool is inadequate, then open the pool larger from time to time. I spent six years on the OSB UPL committee, and I am concerned that there is the possibility that lawyers admitted in other jurisdictions, but not Oregon, could practice family law in Oregon (particularly family law - where I do not practice) without being admitted. Bottom line, I have mixed feelings about this program. There is an unmet need for legal help for consumers, and to aid judges in the courts where the pro se litigants are numerous. I also feel that providing a pool of inexpensive legal practitioners to act in housing court (another forum where I do not practice) is an indirect attempt to tilt the playing field (even more) in favor of tenants against landlords, and the victims will be mom and pop landlords. It will also make the economic conditions for young lawyers who did pass the bar and who are struggling with loans incrementally more difficult.

I think this is a very bad idea. I work primarily with Latino immigrants who are easily misled by people who hold themselves out to be trained professionals but are not. These “professionals” or more often called “notarios” May have college degrees, but they do not have the skills and knowledge to properly assist others, relying solely on their bilingual abilities to convince unsuspecting victims that they are able to comprehend complicated legal procedures. The “notarios” often start by assisting in small matters such as a family or landlord disputes and then they move to more complicated matters such as immigration for which they are totally unprepared. They wreak havoc, and the result may be, I have seen it more than once, they get deported. Further, it is already a major undertaking to train a new attorney to be a competent advocate. New attorneys generally do not have well developed skills upon graduation from law school (god help us if they have even less education than that). They generally need the benefit of an experienced attorney mentor to learn procedure, writing, logic skills. The idea that a person who does not even have that minimum training should be tasked with guiding others in even the simplest legal procedures is frightful. The bar is already low, I spend countless hours mentoring young folks in writing, thinking and procedure. I can only imagine the frustration the courts will endure when they are faced with even less prepared individuals acting as advocates for those who often should rely on even more highly trained professionals. Instead of lowering your standards, I suggest you set up better mentoring programs, find ways to pay attorneys to handle pro bono cases, fund more legal aid attorneys. You are setting the entire bar up to become a mockery by lowering the professional standards to include people who, while sometimes no doubt could be competent enough to handle certain matters, are generally not well enough prepared to identify issues and creatively advocate. The poor level of representation will disproportionately affect the poor and immigrant populations, exactly the people who need better advocacy the most.

As a lawyer who has been in practice for 51 years, I strongly oppose independent paralegals. They should be employed by licensed attorneys and working under their supervision. C. Richard Noble, OSB # 701528

<th>Oregon has a significant access to justice problem, and this paralegal licensing proposal is a targeted solution to a part of it. The proposal was vetted with all relevant stakeholders, was modified based on input, and is limited in scope. It’s past time to continue to call out our access to justice problem while failing to advance solutions. To those who may oppose this solution, it’s time for them to step up with solutions of their own. I fully support implementing the paralegal licensing proposal.</th>

<td>I served on the Board for the Oregon PCC Paralegal Program for several years and was always impressed by the excellent standards under which they operated. All students received the full attention of their faculty and all students with whom I came into contact took the high standards seriously. Over the years I had the pleasure of supervising them when they came into our agency (Bureau of Labor and Industries) to work. Almost all were top students in their classes. Many times I thought that if law students had the advantage of a curriculum like the PCC Paralegal Program, more of them might be successful high achievers. An example is that in order to graduate, all paralegal students had to present an extensively researched project and answer questions about it and how they reached their conclusions. They had to submit a notebook with multiple sections illustrating their grasp of the principles of law under various factual scenarios. It was rigorous and we were asked to give our best critical reviews. Thank you for the opportunity to comment. Marcia Ohlemiller</td>

<td>I am an attorney in Oregon. I have specialized in Tenant Landlord since 1996, representing tenants for most of those years and in the last 5 to 10, landlords too. When I started, I provided low cost legal help to tenants. At the time there was no one else who did this and nowhere, beyond Legal Aid, were the services I offered available. Here in the Eugene area this has changed in the last few years. Tenants now have several low costs options. Over the years I have found that many atty's, not specialized in this area, believed tenant/landlord law was simple and anyone with a law degree could do it well. Needless to say I had a lot of success against these folks. The other problem has been landlord atty's treating FED's like major law suits, filing multiple and sometimes inappropriate motions etc. These motions go to the motion judges, (not the judges on the FED docket) judges often not familiar with this area of law either. I have seen some really strange results. these could have been even worse if I did not have a full legal background. Tenant/landlord law is not simple or easy. It is complex and involves one of the most intimate issues folks face in life, the potential loss of their homes and the consequences that result from such a catastrophic loss. People who own their home sometimes have no idea how close to homelessness most renters are. Folks who live pay check to pay check have difficulty coming up with a deposit, first and last, application fees, etc. And the current housing market, at least in the Eugene/Springfield area, has rental units at a premium, with a very low vacancy rate. the scarcity of rentals in recent years has tended to increased landlord abuse. One reaction to this has been the formation of new tenant advocacy groups in the Eug. Spfd., Medford, and Bend areas. As the housing crises continues and grows and landlord learn to exercise their increased leverage the need for experienced and capable attorneys will increase. Glorified form filler will only make the situation worse. While many or even most FED are fairly simple, either the rent was paid or not, (is there a diminished rental value issues? Something not specifically or clearly outlined in the statute and something one studying the statute might never discover.) and some involve very complex issues. It took me many years and many trials to learn to identify some of these issues. This is not something that should be left in the hands of anyone without a complete background in the law, or just a primer on Chapters 90 and 105. Paralegals allowed to give legal advise may give tenants (and the bar) a sense that tenants area receiving adequate legal assistance, but that is not what will happen. Most will either be fly by night operations that collect money and &quot;help&quot; fill out the forms. the rest will be attached to some corporate landlord law firms and they will get only token supervision and landlord tainted advise. These paralegals, lacking the knowledge and training, will be unable to even recognize the complex issues that arise and will not be able refer a tenant to competent counsel. I understand the need for more affordable representation for tenants, but this is merely a token smoke screen, a way to squeeze more money out of poor folks without providing meaningful representation. It reinforces the widely held belief that tenant/landlord law is so simple that you could train a para legal for a few hours and they could do this aw well as an atty with 25+ years of experience. This is nothing like a physician's assistant, the analogy just doesn't hold up.</td>

They should work in a lawyer’s office or legal clinic so they have some oversight of the work they’re doing. They should also be required to have appropriate insurance coverage in the event that they improperly handle the case and a client needs to recover against them. There should also be standardized rates that LP’s can charge to ensure that the goals of access to legal services is maintained by keeping fees affordable.</td>

<td>I like the idea of this program, for all of the reasons you’ve described. I practice in Lincoln City, Oregon. It’s a small town, and a rural area. We need more legal professionals in this area, especially in Family Law and Landlord/Tenant. We had five attorneys that practiced Family Law in Lincoln City until they either retired, died, moved away, or changed practice areas a few years ago. Now we have one. We had four that practiced Landlord/Tenant a few years ago. Now we have zero. This program would really help access to justice in North Lincoln County. <td>This is a bad idea. We have a complex legal system that depends on rigorous training and highly trained persons to navigate. It makes no sense to have such a system and then have lightly educated, trained and skilled persons implement it. The legal assistants don't know what they don't know. The clients don't know what they don't know. They are no check on this. The Courts do not have the time or resources to ride herd on it. All we have is the Bar. New lawyers take from 5 to 8 years to learn how to practice law. They, at least, have taken law school courses and passed the Bar. Even with that, they need a lot of additional training and skills to work in Oregon law. The public may want change. They may want lower cost legal services that are more accessible. Do they want a less complex and sophisticated legal system? It will be less nuanced and less fair; less tailored to each person and situation. It is a least a real possibility. What is not possible is a fair and nuanced system that tailors solutions to each person and situation that is less costly and more accessible. That does not exist and cannot exist. It is dishonest to pretend that it does. If it costs less and is more accessible, something is lost. It is not free. Empower legal assistants to work in LL/T and Dissolution cases and the cost to the public may go down and it may be accessible to more persons; however, it will not be legal system we have now. It will be a rougher form of justice and we attorneys will be picking up the mess for years to come.</td>

<td>Your proposed program, as I understand it, has no provisions to ensure that it will accomplish the stated goal, to wit: making legal services available to people at a cost they can afford, or to otherwise prevent people from going to court without legal assistance. In truth, this program would only enable non-lawyers the ability to offer for-profit legal services, despite not having met the current law practice licensing requirements. Their services may be priced lower than that of a lawyer, but will be priced as high as possible to cover business expenses and profit - as high as the market will bear. Instead of creating a complex licensing system for non-lawyers, consider a program that allows paralegals (without a special license) to provide the kind of services you envision under the supervision of a law firm or non-profit, where the organization or a lawyer in the organization is responsible for training and supervising the paralegal to provide the kinds of limited scope legal services you envision. This way, law firms can tier their pricing and create services directed toward lower income people; and non-profits can better leverage their paralegals, who are less expensive to employ than lawyers. Bar associations need to stop viewing lawyers as the problem re access to justice and start viewing lawyers as part of the solution. Start with simple, easy to implement solutions.</td>

I have also taught at Portland Community College’s paralegal program for the last seven years. Based on my experience both as a teacher and as a practicing attorney, I fully support the development of a program to license qualified paralegals to provide limited legal services to clients in family law and landlord/tenant cases. There is an urgent need for greater access to legal services, particularly in these areas. There is already a shortage of lawyers available for public defense, which will only compound the problem of access to necessary legal services.</td>

<td>According to the Civil Legal Needs study conducted by Legal Aid Services of Oregon in 2018, 84% of Oregonians with a legal problem did not receive help of any kind. According to this study, two of the top three reported legal problems were child support and divorce or legal separation, both of which would fall under the purview of the proposed PL program. In eviction proceedings, only about 17% of all parties were represented by lawyers. The most highly reported problem was trouble understanding court procedures and rules, which PLs would be able to do in many cases under the proposed program.</td>

<td>One of the primary problems Oregon has faced in the last few decades is the lack of access to legal aid and services of Oregon’s most vulnerable communities. Access to legal aid is disproportionately difficult for elderly, rural, low-income, non-English speaking, and minority communities. With the implementation of the PL program, the amount and diversity of legal professionals available would increase dramatically. Given the slowly eroding faith in the legal system, giving more people access to a more diverse group of legal professionals would be beneficial to all Oregonians.</td>

| Yes | Yes | No | No | As a member of the public who has needed a lawyer a few times, once in a divorce, I do not want an under educated paralegal unable to attend court to handle my matter. This represents further commodification of professional services nation and multiple industry-wide that comes at great risk of a dumbing down of the level of service provided to the public. |
|-----|-----|----|----| As a lawyer I deeply resent the state bar getting involved in a hell bent for leather effort to put lawyers out of business and to make the practice of law harder. Heaven help the practitioner dealing with a paralegal on the other end of the case. |

| 3/30/2022| Robert Harris     | Good afternoon Bik-Na and Matthew
While well meaning, the paralegal licensing proposal is likely to cause a lot of problems for those seeking legal services.
If there is a problem with affordability for tenants and clients seeking family law assistance, this proposal isn’t the way to meet that need. I also think once passed, the non lawyer legal service industry will push to expand paralegal services in criminal defense, personal injury, estate, wills and trusts, and other areas of law. Think legal zoom offices all over Oregon. Any paralegal program – even if limited in the type of practice it allows now, better be ready to deal with this push and have rules in place to address those seeking to expand it. I don’t know if the current rule has sufficient sideboards on it to anticipate forward thinking.
Here’s an example from just today. I got an email from a “paralegal” who was “helping” someone with a motorcycle accident injury case. They claimed that the victim’s legs were shattered, artery damage. Sounded like bad injuries. They emailed me because the statute of limitations was going to run in 60 days and Geico hadn’t made any offer. They asked us to file a lawsuit. It’s now been almost two years since the accident. No independent investigation has been done. No medical records have been requested and we haven’t been able to help the victim find the right experts or record all the damages they incurred. Witness recollections have dimmed. This victim thought they were getting legal representation from a paralegal. I realize the paralegal is not allowed to practice law, but the thing is that paralegal thought they knew what they were doing, but clearly simply doesn’t have the knowledge training or experience and it’s likely this will actually end up costing the victim. But since they were an “experienced paralegal” they represented to this victim that they would be able to help. You simply don’t know what you don’t know.
I will also predict that there will be little cost savings to a client. Lawyers will not reduce their prices – if that is being assumed by the proponents of the plan – so I expect paralegals will charge what the market will bear. This will be particularly true if zoom or other competitors get involved in the market.
Overall, this proposal seeks to address a real problem with an inadequate solution. Lack of sufficient training or oversight should cause you great pause.
Let me know if you have any questions.

<td>I am reaching out related to the Paraprofessional Licensing Implementation as our local BOG reps. My understanding is the BOG is voting on this issue April 8th. I was originally invited by Sr. Judge Thompson to be on the committee which was exploring and in support of licensing. I declined, in part, because I fear that this program will negatively impact family law litigant and non-English speakers in particular.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>500 hours for family law with no exam or other requirements will have dire consequences for these clients in my opinion. More than half of my regular cases include family law modifications, or requests for the court to change prior judgments. A huge issue I predict is division of assets in divorce cases – that is a non-modifiable provision of a judgment in a divorce case. If a paraprofessional makes mistakes or otherwise does not appropriately capture division of assets in a judgment, depending on the timing/discovery of the issue by a litigant, the could potentially have no recourse to modify or change the terms of property division.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Specifically as related non-English speakers (whom I deal with regularly, Spanish speakers), Notario fraud is already an issue that I have personally seen have terrible results. I have personally had to deal with “clean up” of poorly drafted judgments and other court orders done by a paralegal or notary service in family law matters.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The Bar has provided practitioners with limited engagement/draft retainer agreements for use by attorneys to conduct “unbundled” services – such as to perform document review (and our statewide documents available free online are excellent for family law matters) appear and file documents on behalf of clients for specific purposes, without the need for a client to pay a full retainer. I believe this could and should be encouraged more by the Bar and other related organizations who focus on access to justice issues.</td>

2/11/2022     | Christopher Hill | Oregon State Bar and Oregon Supreme Court:

Thank you for considering the paraprofessional licensing proposal in an attempt to meet the need of unrepresented parties in family law and landlord tenant cases. My first preference for resolving that issue is to advocate for funding legal aid agencies to assist pro se parties, because it would not require changing the structure of the legal profession, and would not rely on faith in the market filling a need which it has thus far failed to fill. Under existing rules, one lawyer could hire any number of paralegals to work under the lawyer’s supervision, assisting consumers with family law and landlord tenant legal issues, and charging lower rates because of the lower intensity of legal knowledge needed and higher reliance on staff support. The fact that a law firm like that does not exist should give the proponents of this proposal pause if there is any belief that the market will somehow fix or fill in where it currently does not, i.e. that offering a cheaper professional service will increase the number of people placing orders. My suggestion for funding legal aid agencies would essentially be creating a law firm like that or supporting existing firms to serve the needs of consumers who have unmet needs for legal advice, and would not rely on the market because it involves funding separate from the fees charged to consumers for the work.

If the Oregon State Bar and the Oregon Supreme Court are going to advocate for licensed paraprofessionals, then I think the OSB and OSC need to regulate paraprofessionals as professionals. Consumers will be relying on paraprofessionals for legal advice, application of law to facts, selection of forms, ministerial execution of docketing, and advocacy coaching. In other words, virtually all the same things which lawyers do which consumers rely upon to be done competently. Because of the consumer reliance on paraprofessionals, the OSB and OSC should require the Oregon Rules of Professional Conduct to apply to paraprofessionals including IOLTA accounting, continuing education requirements, and insurance or Professional Liability Fund coverage for paraprofessionals should be required. For the PLF coverage, I would also suggest that the PLF have separate risk pools for lawyers and what I suspect will be a more frequent claims rate for paraprofessionals.

I’ve been practicing family law for 14 years and I believe this program would provide a much needed service to folks who cannot afford or do not need the services of an attorney. It could also help the court’s overwhelmed resources by having things filed correctly versus incorrectly filed by pro se filers (my understanding is that almost 70% of domestic relations filings in Deschutes Co. where I primarily practice are filed pro se).
Overall, with proper licensing requirements, I believe this program would be a great benefit to the community.

<td>The Oregon State Bar continues its march to further undercut the viability of its bar members and quality accessible legal work for Oregonians. I was on the task force to investigate whether it was a good idea to allow people to sit for the bar without benefit of law school. Through that process, I learned a lot about other such programs and their abysmal success rate. I understand why we ask these questions- attorney rates are too high- but OSB continues to dodge the actual root of the problem. Attorney rates in Oregon are high, because we have the highest bar requirements in the country (or had when I was admitted back in 2004). We are one of the only states in the union that require PLF insurance, even for pro bono work. There are many instances that I could have assisted clients with their emergent family law issues (as I practice principally in dependency), but because of PLF requirements and OPDS coverage, those emergency orders and filings are prohibited! It's ridiculous to require bar insurance in such instances. Finally, I practiced in civil family law before I went into public defense. The bar failed to protect us from practicing law without a license when it determined that Legal Zoom and the computer &quot;form&quot; generator programs weren't practicing law when they ask applicants questions and then generate a form. My law partner at the time and I argued to the bar that if a human asked those questions- they are practicing law without a license! But if a computer asks those questions, its form selection??? The failure of the bar to protect small law practices from the pillaging of bread/butter practice like small wills/trusts and business organization hurt the bottom line of small practices. Where else do small practitioners make up those business costs? But turning to family law and landlord tenancy. Now you're threatening to undercut that, too? How do you expect people to make money to cover the outrageous expense of our education and overhead costs? I have a mortgage on my life thanks to my student loans. I'll never be able to pay it off if the bar continues to cut out bread and butter practice. There are sensible ways to help practitioners and continue to provide quality practice- do something about bar/PLF fees! Stop cutting our viability by undercutting routine practice like family law, wills/trusts, business organization, and landlord tenancy. And for clients who are indeed indigent and just need a quick divorce or need to file emergency filings, like in my cases where we have immediate danger order filings required--- stop requiring PLF insurance for that stuff! It doesn't implicate PLF coverage. You're asking to have non-attorneys do things that attorneys can do, but they won't be burdened by our expenses that could easily be dealt with in rule changes, like lifting PLF insurance requirements for small estates, pro bono work, and talking to OPDS to see that immediate danger filings and the like are available to those of us trying to get DHS out of the picture- when DHS wants to be out of the picture- but people are too broke to hire an attorney to file immediate danger orders themselves. Stop making practice in Oregon painful for attorneys! The bar has chased out 3/4 of the people who graduated at WUCL in my year. They quit and are taking the financial hit. We Oregon graduates and bar members feel unvalued and when we work to just pay the bar and our schools, it robs attorneys who took up the profession, not because it was a family business, but because we wanted to help people and step into the middle class. Many of us in practice have employees. How are we to pay them? My babysitter earned more money than I did some years when I did my solo practice! When I look at the practice costs of solo attorneys, it's not much better today. They would make more money waiting tables at El Gaucho than doing the good competent work they do. And this is the bar's response to the problem? Wrong headed. OSB is failing in its mission to protect the public with this idea and its cutting off the livelihoods of attorneys that make up its membership. LEC...</td>

President Wade and Members of the Board –

My name is Maureen McKnight. I am a Senior Judge, having retired from the Multnomah County bench 2 years ago and now serving wherever the Chief Justice sends me. I speak today for myself, and not for the Oregon Judicial Department.

My background is that of a family law attorney for 22 years followed by almost 18 years on the Multnomah County Family Law bench, where I was the Chief Family Court Judge. Prior to the bench I worked for 22 years at LASO and its predecessor firms, first specializing in individual family law casework and later coordinating systems advocacy statewide for Legal Aid clients in the family law arena. I was also a member of the State Family Law Advisory Committee for over 15 years. I list these experiences not because I'm speaking for any of those entities either but because this background very substantially informs my strong support for the Licensed Paralegal Proposal.

The primary points I want to make today are twofold:
- the LP proposal is a solid one
- we simply cannot wait any longer to act in light of the critical need for legal access.

In the over 40 years that I have been a family law attorney and then judge, I am aware of over 22 different committees or groups focused on improving access to justice for Oregonians specifically in the family law arena. I have been involved in almost all: some I have convened, others have been bar-led or court-led or jointly-convened, some legislatively led, some headed by the Department of Justice’s Child Support Program, and some organized by a community group. While a few have focused on domestic violence victims or the non-English-speaking, the great majority have had the broad charge of trying to improve legal access for all Oregonians in the family law arena. We all know the rates of self-representation in family law exceed 70% and that national and Oregon-specific studies have shown that the majority of people self-rep because they simply cannot afford an attorney.

And those 40+ years of efforts have included:
- Legal Aid’s teaching self-help divorce classes in the 1970s and 1980s,
- to Legal Aid sending each judicial district a floppy 3.5” disk of 40 common family law forms,
During these 40+ years, in addressing specific strategies to increase access, is not as if all of these groups have missed THE ideal solution to providing legal access to the family law system. The ideal access — we all know -- is that everyone would have an attorney. But we all also know that is not happening so increased funding & support for legal services and pro bono programs remains critical since they are one of the most -- if not the most -- effective arrows in the access quiver. But the access quiver has a LOT of arrows – and people can and do use one or more of them – to their benefit -- depending on the situation.

The Licensed Paralegal proposal adds another arrow to that access quiver. It would authorize limited but meaningful help in limited but common situations for some people, those who can afford this less expensive help. And it incorporates client protections and regulatory oversight. It is not a panacea any more than court facilitators or interactive forms have been a panacea. But like those other arrows, licensed paralegals add to access. I strongly believe that objections to the proposal essentially based on the argument that the LPs are not attorneys epitomize the axiom that the perfect is the enemy of the good.

I have gone over the proposal in depth. I do have a few suggestions separately submitted based on my experience but the concept is a solid one and an important one. I think what the Commission on Family Law Legal Services wrote in 1998 in completing its work on court facilitators remains true today: “We affirm the importance of experimentation on legal access efforts -- taking considered, prudent risks. We can experiment and refine, and experiment and fail, but we cannot fail to experiment.”

I strongly urge the Board to support this proposal. Thank you for considering my comments.
SUGGESTIONS of Maureen McKnight, Senior Judge on Licensed Paralegal Proposal

Relationship, if any, between the paraprofessional and an attorney. I am not suggesting there needs to be direct supervision of work by any means (LPs are separately trained, licensed, and insured individuals) but I have found both at Legal Aid and with court staff that a legal paraprofessional who has a good working relationship with an attorney (or judge) tends to consult with that attorney/judge proactively and appropriately when needed. I was wondering about what discussion occurred at the Committee about having a mentor-attorney. I realize that would implicate at first glance liability for the attorney for the LP’s work but that could be drafted away: it is the access to an attorney I’d want to encourage for an LP, not the oversight. Perhaps the LP having to file with OSB a document an attorney has signed confirming agreement to mentor on LP-initiated requests ???? I suppose attorneys could charge an LP for that mentoring but some may not. And it might happen naturally with LPs working out of attorney offices. But for independent LPs, it might be something helpful. Not a dealbreaker, just thinking about this point.

The only other issues I saw from the 2-page chart are:
-- clarifying (elsewhere) that LPs “attending” mediation would be attending to the same extent as attorneys. Some court-affiliated mediation programs don’t allow attorneys to attend, as you know, as the encouragement of future productive communication between the parents is a goal of the sessions as much as reaching an agreement on the disputes currently at issue.

-- “Respond to the court on behalf of clients to inquiries when requested” -- Perhaps other materials I couldn’t locate make this clear but I was wondering if these were factual inquiries or positional inquiries. Since the LP providing unsworn facts is as much a legal problem as an attorney testifying -- whom I can directly instruct (unlike the LP) to then elicit testimony from his/her/their client on that point -- I assume the intent was to limit LP responses to “positional” answers, i.e., non-testimonial answers. Is that correct? If so, I think the word “nontestimonial” should be added to clarify the authority. We can’t have testimonial information from an LP who is not excluded from the courtroom but sitting there the whole trial. And hearing unsworn factual information (as distinct from procedural info) from an LP is prejudicial to the other side’s perception of fairness, particularly if that second party is self-representing, even if the Judge properly ignores it and says she is ignoring it.

Also, it was not clear to me from the “when requested” language who was doing the requesting. I suppose it could be either the client or the Judge as long as what the LP says is non-testimonial.
Dear Committee Members:

I’m writing in support of the proposed opportunity for licensure of paralegals in Oregon which would allow them to act in some family law and landlord/tenant matters. I am a program manager with Saving Grace in Bend, OR, the domestic violence and sexual assault nonprofit serving Central Oregon for over 40 years. I manage two programs – Mary’s Place, which provides supervised visitation and safe exchange services for families where there are safety issues around parenting time, related to domestic violence, sexual assault, stalking or child sex abuse. I also supervise our program which locates a bi-lingual (Spanish) advocate within the Deschutes County Courthouse to assist survivors with protective order, court accompaniment, divorce/custody and immigration as well as overall support. I’ve been in my role since 2005 and therefore have firsthand experience of the dire need for access to free or affordable legal assistance for survivors of intimate partner violence with children, who often have concurrent legal issues related to housing.

The capacity of our local Legal Aid office is very limited and few family law attorneys make themselves available via the Modest Means program (which frankly is still unaffordable for the majority of our clients). It is virtually unheard of locally for family law attorneys to provide pro-bono services. Clients who do some financial resources often must resort to extreme measures to afford representation, such as second mortgage on a home, borrowing from friends or family, and going into debt that they will not reasonably be able to afford to pay off.

Saving Grace has several legal advocates who provide support for survivors with divorce and custody cases, however, they must be extremely careful not to overstep into unauthorized practice of law. Yet most of the survivors we work with need additional assistance and guidance which could be provided by a paralegal with expertise in family law and/or landlord/tenant. We see time and time again that those survivors without any representation fare worse in family court than those with attorneys. While I understand that the proposed paralegal licensure would fall somewhere short of what might be provided by an attorney, in many cases it would be sufficient and I assume more affordable.

For survivors of intimate partner violence with children, the post-separation period is often fraught with continued coercive control and abuse that plays out in the divorce/custody process. It is vitally important to the safety and long-term well being of these survivors and their children that they are able to access legal assistance in their family law cases. It is my experience that many family law attorneys lack in-depth knowledge of intimate partner violence, impacts on children and best practices for adult and child survivor safety in custody cases. I see a potential opportunity with this new paralegal program to develop greater expertise within these paraprofessional practitioners.

And while as a DVSA program, our focus in on survivors, it is important to note that access to legal help is also an issue for those who have caused harm in their intimate relationships, many of whom cannot afford an attorney. I believe that access to free or affordable legal assistance is key to accessing justice to many of our most vulnerable Oregonians. I look forward to hearing more about the proposed program as it moves forward!

Greetings,
I have attached, here, a written comment in support of the Proposed Oregon Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program. I gave spoken public comment during the Nov. 20 BOG meeting, and David Wade suggested I might submit the remarks in writing.
Thank you again for the opportunity to be heard.

Verbal Public Comment In Support of the Proposed Oregon Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program

The comment below was submitted by IAALS to the Oregon State Bar Board of Governors on November 20, 2021, in support of the Proposed Oregon Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program.

Hello, my name is Natalie Knowlton. I am the Director of Special Projects at IAALS, the Institute for the Advancement of the American Legal System at the University of Denver. We are a national non-profit research institute dedicated to continuous improvement in the American legal system.

I am speaking today in support of the Proposed Oregon Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program. And I commend the Oregon State Bar for pursing this innovative proposal.

My colleagues and I have conducted national research on the experience of self-represented litigants, particularly in family law cases. In one of these major studies, we partnered with the Multnomah County Family Court, thanks to the leadership of Judge Maureen McKnight. What we found is not surprising – good people and families trying to get through complicated processes.

<td>As you heard in the earlier presentation, other states and countries are figuring out ways to adequately train, appropriately supervise, and sufficiently regulate new categories of legal services providers. Of course, the WA program is perhaps the most well-known of them all, and opponents will point to that program as evidence that the model does not work. But Washington’s experience with implementing the model has no bearing on the paraprofessional model itself or on differing implementations of the model in other states.</td>

Nor can we stand by while waiting for unprecedented legal aid funding, the likes of which we have never seen.</td>

| 11/29/2021 | J. Glenn Null         | Regarding malpractice insurance through the Professional Liability Fund (PLF): It appears the report for the Board of Governors did not contain an analysis, or any other information for that matter, regarding the PLF's position on the following:
  • insuring a new group of professionals,
  • whether lawyers' PLF premiums would increase,
  • what the limits of coverage would be, and
  • whether acts of an LP outside the scope of practice would be covered.

  Lawyer | James Hargreaves      | Dear Reader
While I strongly disagree with this whole proposal to allow “paraprofessionals” to practice law, I am not going to waste my time writing the lengthy memorandum that it would take to cover all of my objections, since I have no doubt that, at this juncture, this is a “done deal” and that calling for comments is simply a formality to make it appear that Bar members’ input was considered. I suggest that a meaningful attempt at Bar member feedback would be to have a vote of the members of the Bar on this issue. I’m quite sure the Bar is not about to do that.
Even though I completely oppose this whole proposal, there is one issue that I have not seen addressed in your material that I think is important to understand, especially for members of the Bar. That is the question of finances. How is this whole new administrative structure that will be required around this program to be paid for? Does the Bar expect that it’s attorney members will foot the bill? And what about the PLF? How are the administration and costs of paying out claims going to be financed for this new group people?
I eagerly await your response to these questions.

Dear Committee, I am a collaborative attorney and mediator with over 20 years specializing in family law in Oregon. I am extremely afraid of the initiative for “para-professionals” and the harm it will cause to the public if passed. While it may be thought of as “access to justice,” or “helping increase equity,” the exact opposite will happen. Those with the most to lose, and no funds for an attorney who use a paraprofessional may have the biggest harm of all. Here are my concerns:

1) unsupervised paraprofessionals drafting documents about pensions, real estate, spousal support, business interests, retirement division, stock options/RSUs, etc etc. is a TERRIBLE idea as these are complex, technical, legal, and extremely impactful to lifelong ramifications to either or both parties in a family law proceeding. Maybe there is a misunderstanding that Family Law is “simple and straightforward??”

2) Risk of harm to public is real and no malpractice insurance for these paraprofessionals to protect against negligence. To give an example, even someone like myself with 20 years’ experience, depends on CPAs, pension attorneys, business valuation experts, and the like for drafting documents in a divorce. A paraprofessional will not even likely be able to “spot” the issue or know when to ask for help. The “pension” could be left out or “unvested stock options” messed up in any number of ways creating a nightmare of legal documents and increased cost to remedy if that is even discovered.

3) This will create a HUGE amount of litigation and clog the courts in judgments needing to be vacated, modified, supplemented, etc or leave families without remedy and inequitable outcomes they may not even know about for years. I believe this is why some big firms are in favor of this – self interest of increased litigation under the “guise of access to justice” and affordability to clients.

I would be happy to discuss other solutions such as attorney supervision of paraprofessionals (similar to a paralegal working for an attorney now), but without supervision, this is a truly awful initiative. My current paralegal also has over 20 years’ experience and she doesn’t even feel comfortable drafting many sections of the divorce judgments due to complexity and need for legal or specialized expertise. I cannot fathom someone with 6 mos or one year experience doing this work adequately without harm to families.

Best, Tonya Alexander

<td>The implementation of a paraprofessional licensing program will be of great benefit to our woefully underserved communities. The pandemic has only exacerbated the need for legal services and has exponentially increased the financial barrier to access of necessary legal services for people in our communities. As a legal assistant at the Oregon Law Center-Hillsboro regional office, that serves five counties in Oregon, I am, as many support staff in legal offices, the first face clients see and recognize when they reach out in their time of need. Most of the support staff at the Oregon Law Center are bilingual and that helps establish trust and breaks that immediate barrier of communication for some clients. Many of us have years of experience and are relied on because of that experience and firsthand knowledge of our communities and their needs. We see the efforts to diversify the attorney’s that practice in the state of Oregon but that takes time and a significant financial commitment on behalf of people of color, that for us is increasingly harder to reach. Many times, I have had to turn away clients because they are just above our income limits and refer them to the private bar. Many times, they have returned and let me know they cannot afford the $5,000 retainer. Unfortunately, there will never be a shortage of landlord tenant issues or family law cases. There are many capable individuals that can represent themselves in these cases but cannot access the basic guidance and use the tools already in place, such as pro se forms, because of language barriers and a lack of basic understanding of the judicial processes. Another focus of contention may be that there are members of the community that were negatively impacted using Notary Publics in the US versus “Notarios” in Mexico. In that instance the confusion arose because of the literal translation of the term Notary Public. In this case the distinction is clear when you are introduced as a paraprofessional, that translates to “paraprofesional” and would not confuse someone that may have used the services of a “Notario” in Mexico. Because of the increased need of legal services in our communities, I stand in favor of the paraprofessional licensing program. Thank you again for the opportunity.</td>

Dear Members of the Board:

Our team has reviewed Oregon’s proposed Paraprofessional Licensing plan and believes this program would serve the best interest of the state of Oregon and its residents. We strongly support Oregon in pursuit of a Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program.

At its core, limited licensing is about providing access to justice. Access to justice is a precondition for the satisfaction of basic human needs. Without it, life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness fall to the wayside. Even as you read this, Oregonians and people across the country are losing their livelihoods, homes, jobs, and more due to existing unauthorized practice of law (UPL) restrictions.

For far too long, the legal profession has unwittingly stifled the voice of its nation’s citizens by creating barriers to legal representation under the auspices of protection. Without a lawyer, citizens are frequently unable to challenge civil injustice or hold decision-makers accountable for wrongdoing.

More funding for legal aid and increasing pro bono hours have been touted as remedies for access to justice disparities. However, despite the tremendous efforts of Legal Services Corporation, legal aid, pro bono, and low bono campaigns, the legal profession remains unable to make a meaningful dent in the access to justice problem.

According to Legal Services Corporation, in 2019 Oregon’s income cut-off for legal aid was $16,100 per year for a single person and $33,125 per year for a family of four.

According to a 2018 Study Measuring The Civil Legal Needs Of Low-Income Oregonians, "Low-income households struggle to afford even basic living expenses of food, shelter, and clothing. Poverty is pervasive in both urban and rural communities. People of color, single women with children, persons with disabilities, and those who have not obtained a high school diploma are overrepresented in the poverty population." 2 According to the same study, “84% of people with a civil legal problem did not receive legal help of any kind.” 3

As you know, this is only the tip of the access to justice iceberg.
Many Oregonians above these income cut-offs cannot afford legal counsel, and the access to justice gap widens as the cost of living increases and outpaces wage growth.

Notably, the World Justice Project reports that 50-percent of middle-income consumers also go without representation in many civil matters. Middle-income consumers may be able to afford something for legal services, but not the rates many lawyers are charging. As a result, instead of receiving the help they desperately need, they go without legal assistance. Those who cannot afford legal counsel but may be able to afford the services of a licensed paraprofessional.

Keep in mind that while the law allows for self-representation, we’ve all heard the axiom, “He who represents himself has a fool for a client.” Even lawyers typically hire other lawyers for their personal legal matters. We know that self-represented litigants are at a severe disadvantage compared to those who receive help from lawyers or legal aid organizations. Adding limited licensees to the list of legal providers offers an additional affordable option for Oregonians and potentially increases Oregon’s pro bono provider pool.

The access-to-justice crisis is indeed a crisis of inequity. As legal professionals, it is time to rethink how legal services are delivered. Refusing to take action exposes a collective disregard for the needs of our citizens. There exists an immediate need for regulatory reform. Oregon’s program proposal demonstrates the commitment of Oregon paraprofessionals to meet that need. They have created a program to relieve the overly-burdened areas of Family Law and Landlord/Tenant matters in traditionally underserved communities.

It is critical to address these issues for people struggling to resolve their problems, whether getting a divorce or getting an eviction dismissed. Expanding access to justice by approving a limited licensing program will relieve some of the burdens on an overwhelmed court system inundated with pro se litigants, meet the needs of Oregon’s residents, and increase public trust in the legal profession, which is severely lacking.

While some attorneys may be concerned about the limited data concerning the viability of paraprofessional licensing programs, data doesn’t always precede innovation. Experimentation is a crucial part of innovation. States like Utah and Arizona are collecting data as they progress in their respective programs using an iterative and incremental process that will allow for cumulative adjustments to their programs while protecting their consumers.

The availability of affordable legal services is in the best interest of Oregonians, the court system, and the justice system as a whole, notwithstanding some lawyers’ apprehension about how it will affect them economically.

We have a duty to serve the broader legal needs of society. Otherwise, we send the message that we are willing to sacrifice the needs of our citizens for the economic interests of lawyers. The legal profession should want the public to view lawyers as trusted advocates, not self-serving, disinterested business people. We should also remember that the medical profession faced this same dilemma some 40 years ago when Congress told the profession that it was not serving the consuming public. At that juncture, the medical profession began to see the advent of nurse practitioners, physician assistants, and other qualified medical providers even over the protest of doctors at that time. Now, these alternative medical professionals are an integral part of our medical system.

A limited licensing program would not, by itself, eradicate the mounting crisis in access to affordable legal services. However, it would undoubtedly be a critical piece to the puzzle, and, if administered as this program proposes, one way to significantly narrow Oregon’s access to justice gap.

<td>Greetings:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I write today in opposition to the proposed paraprofessional program for landlord/tenant law. I represent both landlords and tenants, so I have a perspective on both sides of the “v.”.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Firstly, LL/T law is highly specialized. There are so many pitfalls, traps, and easy ways for an experienced attorney to get into trouble, much less a paralegal. In FED court in Multnomah County, Judge Peterson starts every first appearance with a warning that even very experienced attorneys mess this area of law up all the time.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I understand there is a gap between represented and pro se litigants and the need for additional services to low-income parties. FED work is very serious because it deals with something that is necessary – one’s housing. This is not an area to be taken lightly because the implications are so serious. Believe me, losing an FED and having your client evicted is one of the worst things. However, there has to be better way to address this representation gap rather than potentially putting landlords and tenants at greater danger, especially if attorney fees are on the line.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Overall, my most basic question is who is this supposed to help? My landlords are all your typical “mom and pop” businesses, with some only renting out a room in their house. The best thing I can do sometimes is to have them talk to me before they file because I can explain their rights and obligations to them prior to any notice. In this instance, the paraprofessional can only prepare documents for the landlord and negotiate on the landlord’s behalf. Because of their limited authority, a paraprofessional may not even know how a tenant making a good-faith complaint about the tenancy can have major implications in an FED.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>But this program does not help landlords because landlords can already appear via agent. A landlord can already have an outside company issue termination notices, attend first appearances, and negotiate on the landlord’s behalf.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I also do not see how this helps tenants. When I represent tenants, I am almost always on contingency because they cannot pay my hourly rate. In my experience, the vast majority of tenants who come to me could barely afford to even pay the $35.00 Lawyer Referral Service fee, much less pay hourly at practically any rate. We attorneys who represent tenants on contingency provide an access to justice that allows for very low income people to get representation and defend their rights, and their housing, in court.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>This program would not allow the paraprofessional to bring counterclaims or affirmative defenses on a tenant’s behalf. Often, we attorneys use any potential counterclaims or affirmative defenses to advance our clients’ interests, if possible. This program does not allow that, so there is little benefit to the tenant, while the paraprofessional gets paid to do something the tenant could do on their own. FEDs (evictions) are not always the cut and dried area of law that they seem to be. While the vast majority of cases are simply for non-payment of rent, statutes and case law govern FEDs and have all the nuance of other areas. An experienced attorney will know the questions to ask to determine whether a tenant has any counterclaims or affirmative defenses.</td>

I’d love to see a different word used than “paraprofessional” because it can mean that someone is >not< professional, when we pride ourselves on being as professional as possible to uphold our position in the legal community.
I’d also like to suggest that you might explicitly look at the trend in the country for “informal trials” (we have begun to develop statutes in WA State around these, and allow your LPs to provide services in any such trial additions you might contemplate. Another area that is ripe for inclusion of LPs is the collaborative law arena and to allow LPs to become mediators as well. Agreement is the backbone of a lot of what LPs will be a part of servicing.
We - >i< wish that the Washington Supreme Court had not suddenly yanked their approval of an intermediate license - between lawyers and “nothing”... and hope that Washington will find a way to allow this kind of imperatively needed program again here. In the meantime, we licensed LLLTs will continue to provide as much help to the community as we can.

<td>Upon first hearing about this program, my instant reaction was one of hesitation and potential opposition. My main concerns relating to the program were: (1) I believed it would take jobs from new lawyers, and (2) I was concerned about the breadth of the scope of representation paraprofessionals would provide. I have since reviewed the materials related to the program and assisted with the development of the program and no longer share the concerns listed above. Instead, I am a strong proponent and advocate.</td>

<td>For years, attorneys in Oregon have strived to close the access to justice gap through pro bono representation, volunteer opportunities, and other altruistic endeavors. However, the gap in access to justice throughout Oregon remains in two key areas of law – landlord tenant law and family law. This program is poised to provide quality legal services in these two key areas to individuals that cannot afford an attorney in the traditional litigation process.</td>

<td></td>

<td>When it comes to licensing paraprofessionals to be lesser-practitioners in the field of landlord-tenant law, I have the appearance of a conflict - residential landlord-tenant law is the field I have worked in every day for the past decade. That having been said, I am not personally worried about paraprofessionals taking my work; there is more than enough work to go around.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>What I am concerned about is tenants (who almost always tend to be the indigent side of the equation) receiving what amounts to fake, uninsured legal representation. There is no doubt that access to justice is broadly lacking in landlord-tenant disputes (among many other fields of law). There are plenty of ways that this might be addressed - one way would be dramatically reducing the cost of becoming a lawyer by replacing a year of law school with a year of apprenticeship.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>But, I do not believe that Oregon's tenants would be well-served by allowing non-lawyers to give them bad advice. We have enough lawyers giving bad advice. With landlord-tenant law, the cost of bad advice is often dramatic, especially for tenants - they can be unexpectedly forced out of their homes through eviction court, and crushed under judgments for the landlord's attorney fees. Landlords, too, can suffer dramatic financial consequences if they get bad advice (which they frequently do already).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>

To the Board of Governors:

I write in support of the proposed licensing of paraprofessionals to provide limited legal services in family law and landlord/tenant cases. I am the Executive Director of Legal Aid Services of Oregon, a non-profit organization that provides free legal assistance in civil cases to low-income clients throughout Oregon.

Many thousands of Oregonians need assistance with family law and landlord/tenant cases each year but cannot afford market rates for attorneys’ fees. Paraprofessional licensing is designed to lower the costs of entering the legal profession, to allow paraprofessionals to offer their services at lower costs. By doing so, they can help to address the tremendous unmet need for legal assistance in these two discrete areas of the law.

Oregon Judicial Department statistics show that in the past five years, 74% of family law cases had at least one unrepresented litigant and 83% of landlord/tenant cases had at least one unrepresented litigant. Studies show that most self-represented litigants would prefer legal assistance with their cases but do not obtain it because of the cost.

In 2016, the Institute for the Advancement of the American Legal System (IAALS) produced a study on the experiences of self-represented litigants in family law cases. IAALS conducted its research in four jurisdictions, including Multnomah County. The study concluded that, “Self-represented litigants in family court largely desire legal assistance, advice, and representation but it is not an option for them due to the cost and having other financial priorities. Attorney services are out of reach, while free and reduced-cost services are not readily available to many who need assistance.”

Other key findings from the study include the following:

- Self-represented litigants grapple with understanding the process, what to expect, and what is expected of them. They describe feeling lost or “in the dark,” relating both to the individual steps and the big picture of the case.
- Given the personal importance of their cases, litigants actively work to identify and utilize resources to help them understand the law and the court process. However, resources leveraged do not always address topics clearly or effectively enough to eliminate the need for more specific guidance.
- The paperwork can become overwhelming. Forms, while helpful, are not sufficient because many are unclear about the appropriate content to include when completing them. The cycle of litigant mistakes and court rejections is taxing for both.
- Litigants struggle with how to present their case to the court, including hearing or trial preparation, evidentiary matters, and courtroom procedures.
- Self-representation can negatively impact outcomes. By implication, this can directly affect children in family law cases. Some litigants have described simply giving up their rights when faced with the reality of the court process, including the time and energy required.
- Self-representation adds substantial stress and anxiety to an already taxing emotional period in the life of a family.

The struggles of self-represented litigants present challenges for the court system. They slow the processing of court cases, as the litigants are unable to comply with court rules. They force judges to decide cases without access to all of the relevant information that would lead to the most legally accurate result. They also leave the litigants with a negative view of the court system.

Many attempts have been made to address this gap over many decades. Oregon attorneys have been generous in their efforts to address this need, through pro bono programs, the Oregon State Bar’s Modest Means Program and other venues. The Oregon State Bar has permitted and promoted unbundled legal services. Courts have experimented with Informal Domestic Relations Trials and family law facilitators. Legal aid, the Bar, the courts and others have produced countless self-help materials, forms and instructions. Following the economic downturn that began in 2008, when the number of unemployed law graduates reached record levels, many efforts were made to match the market surplus of lawyers with this unmet need for legal assistance, including training and mentoring programs to encourage new lawyers to develop law practices addressing these needs. Nevertheless, these many creative and well-intentioned efforts have had no significant impact on the number of people struggling to represent themselves in family law and landlord/tenant cases. We seem unlikely to see a market in which enough lawyers can offer their services at low enough rates to meet the need for affordable legal assistance in family law and landlord/tenant cases.

Permitting paraprofessionals to represent tenants in landlord/tenant cases would also help to level the playing field in these cases. Currently, under Oregon law, landlords may be represented in eviction cases by non-attorneys but tenants cannot. ORS 105.130(4). It is difficult to understand the justification for allowing a landlord to be represented by an unregulated lay person while denying a tenant representation by a trained and regulated paraprofessional in the same case.

With appropriate education, training and oversight, paraprofessionals can provide quality legal assistance to people who are currently receiving none. Paraprofessional licensing is a step forward for access to justice in Oregon and I urge the Board of Governors to implement it. Thank you for the opportunity to comment.

Sincerely,
Janice R. Morgan
Executive Director

<td>Dear Board of Governors:&lt;br&gt;I am the Executive Director of the Oregon Law Center, a statewide nonprofit law firm whose mission is to achieve justice for the low-income communities of Oregon by providing a full range of the highest quality civil legal services. I am writing to support the proposal to license paraprofessionals to provide limited legal services in family law and landlord/tenant cases.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;At legal aid, we receive many more requests from Oregonians for representation in family law and landlord/tenant cases than we can accept due to our limited resources. The number of self-represented litigants in Oregon courts bears out the great demand for assistance in these areas. While some of these individuals might not be able to afford even the more affordable fees charged by paraprofessionals, some likely could, and would benefit from having the help of a licensed paraprofessional to navigate the legal system.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I believe the paraprofessional licensing program would make a positive difference not only for unrepresented litigants and their families directly, but indirectly as well. The courts would function more efficiently for everyone if more litigants had access to legal representation. Legal aid offices also spend time fielding calls and providing basic information to many individuals whom we cannot help. With more of those individuals able to receive help from licensed paraprofessionals, this would free up some of our time to assist more Oregonians whose low income qualifies them for our services.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Oregon law (ORS 105.130(4)) currently permits landlords to be represented in court by non-attorneys, but not tenants. Allowing licensed and regulated paraprofessionals to represent tenants would rectify this inherent unfairness.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;At legal aid, we employ dedicated and talented legal support staff, many of whom provide invaluable legal assistance to our clients under the supervision of our attorneys. We know that paraprofessionals are highly capable of providing high quality legal assistance in housing and family law cases. The Bar’s proposal requires appropriate education, training and oversight for that to happen. I do not believe that the paraprofessional licensing program will result in the supplanting of attorneys by paraprofessionals, because attorneys could take these cases now, but generally do not choose to. Rather, the proposal would cause many Oregonians who would otherwise receive no assistance to receive the help they need at a price they can afford.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Sincerely yours,&lt;br&gt;Monica Goracke Executive Director</td>

<td>Oregon Judicial Department statistics show that 74% of family law cases had at least one unrepresented party and 83% of landlord-tenant cases had at least one unrepresented litigant. Many of these individuals are not unrepresented by choice. If they had access to a paraprofessional at a price they could afford, many would be more likely to find the help they desperately need. When people who are struggling to make ends meet lack legal representation, they are effectively shut out of the justice system. This in turn can lead to distrust of the justice system, a feeling that the justice system is only for the wealthy and the privileged. This perception isn’t good for clients and isn’t good for lawyers or how the community thinks about lawyers. Paraprofessional licensing is designed to lower the costs of entering the legal profession, to allow paraprofessionals to offer their services at lower costs. I do not think that licensed paraprofessionals will supplant attorneys in these two areas of law, as there are not attorneys meeting all of the needs of low and middle income Oregonians now. Paraprofessionals will help to address the tremendous unmet need for legal assistance in family law and landlord-tenant law. A licensure system that is designed to provide appropriate education, training, and oversight to paraprofessionals will provide additional assistance to a growing group of Oregonians who do not have meaningful access to justice. I urge the Board of Governors to adopt this recommendation. Sincerely, Maya Crawford Peacock Executive Director</td>

<td>I am voicing my support for the proposed Oregon Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program. As someone who has represented low income Oregonians for many years, and administered a teaching clinic for law students for the majority of that time, I urge the Board of Bar Governors to move forward on the licensed paralegal proposal. I am acutely aware that the majority of individuals with family law problems and landlord-tenant issues are self-represented. Some are able to get help (but not legal advice) from court facilitators but the unmet need is significant and unfortunately is not able to be met by Legal Aid or pro bono attorneys, yet the consequences of family and housing problems are life-changing for these low-income and middle-income Oregonians. I believe the proposed educational preparation, practical experience, and formal regulation and insurance terms provide sufficient protections to implement this access-to-justice component, along with OSB oversight. | 11/16/2021 | Chris Newbold ALPS Malpractice Insurance | To Whom It May Concern:
It is my understanding the Oregon State Bar is considering options in enacting an alternative legal service delivery model in its pursuit of innovation and commitment to the access to justice cause. We commend you for exploring such options and your advancements in considering the proposed Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program.
As the nation’s largest direct writer of lawyers’ malpractice insurance, ALPS is uniquely positioned to provide carrier perspective on the insurability, risk and claims susceptibility of paraprofessional communities. As the endorsed malpractice carrier of the Washington State Bar Association and Utah State Bar, we’ve work side-by-side with bar leadership in providing malpractice insurance protection for Limited License Legal Technicians (LLLTs) in Washington and Licensed Paralegal Practitioners (LPP) in Utah.
As ALPS primary liaison to State Bars nationally, I hoped to provide some insights which may benefit your deliberations. In no particular order:
1. From a risk perspective, we’ve deemed the overall risk among paraprofessional communities to be low. Practice scope is limited, State Bars employing such programs have enacted important educational checks and balances as part of licensure and the educational path required provided us healthy comfort as to their readiness to deliver professional services. In many respects, the licensing, educational and experiential requirements of paraprofessionals (along with limited scope) position them as more ready to engage in professional services (and better risks) than graduating law students passing the Bar and hanging up a shingle as a solo practitioner. For these reasons, from a carrier perspective, we’ve deemed the risk low.
2. Given the low risk, premiums associated with malpractice coverage for paraprofessional communities has generally fallen in the $500 - $1,000 range, well below our standard average of $2,400 per policy. In part, most will start with a malpractice policy without prior acts coverage, thus providing for healthy premium credit as they embark upon a claims-made and reported policy.
3. ALPS’ claims experience to date on risks associated with paraprofessional communities has supported our preliminary hypothesis, although our experience is admittedly early in the “honeymoon” period for an otherwise long-tail product. We’ve issued 36 policies since inception among LLLTs in Washington and just issued our first LLP policy in Utah and have yet to pay out on any reported claim or circumstance.
4. We support your efforts to bring innovation in this area. The access to justice gap is real. Approximately 80% of low-income individuals cannot afford legal assistance. Middle class families struggle as well. We have shared our experience with Oregon Professional Liability Fund leadership as they contemplate product options.
If we can be of further assistance in your decision-making process, please let us know.
Respectfully submitted,

As a facilitator in Jackson County working with litigants in both family and landlord/tenant cases I see this program being hugely beneficial. We see a definite gap in services for our community. Not only is retaining an attorney almost unattainable financially but our community is also struggling with finding available attorneys. Adding this service for Oregonians will not only open the door for many litigants to receive specialized assistance but will allow for more complicated cases to retain representation. Lets fill the gap!

| 11/16/21 | Jakob Wiley | Dear Committee Members,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide comments. I hesitantly support the proposed licensing scheme, with some significant reservations.

My main concern is related to the control of the license and the institution that manages them. It is a trend of history for special licenses to be created that carve up the delivery of legal services. For example, realtors and contractors have been granted special authority to review, draft, and interpret certain kinds of legal documents. I don’t believe that these special types of exceptions to the general rule that providing legal services requires a law license have been generally beneficial.

In my experience, I believe the general public suffers when provided inferior legal services authorized by these pseudo-bar associations. The proposed family law and landlord/tenant law areas are critical to many people’s lives, just like home purchase and construction.

My solution is to ensure that the license remains firmly under the control of the Oregon State Bar Association and does not evolve into its own type of agency. The control of the delivery of proficient legal services in these areas should remain with attorneys, and not an appointed state board subject to the whims of politics. This solution is the only way I would support the change.

Further, I would argue that such a paraprofessional license holder should remain under the direct supervision of a licensed attorney. But, such a requirement undermines the goal of reducing the limits on access to such services.

What we really need is state funding for more public services and stable, living wages for attorneys doing this kind of work. Perhaps rather than eroding legal services, we should be funding more of it. Time spent lobbying for more public funding for these kinds of positions (more attorneys) might actually solve the problem of access to legal services, rather than slowly dissolving traditional attorney roles into several licenses with mediocre outcomes. There are plenty of struggling attorneys that would love to work in these areas, if they can survive doing it.

Thank you,
Jakob |
| 11/16/21 | Winter Drews | Good Afternoon,

As both an OSB Member and a Family Law Facilitator with Multnomah County, I wanted to reach out and say that I am wholeheartedly behind this proposal!

My daily work with the Multnomah County Legal Resource Center involves meeting with pro se litigants who cannot afford or access an attorney, and by far the greatest need we see is in Family Law and Landlord Tenant Law. On a daily basis, I meet with people who need a small amount of targeted legal advice, and of course as a Facilitator I cannot provide it. I refer people to the OSB Referral Service and the Modest Means programs daily, and I know that the unmet need far outstrips the capacity of those programs.

This proposed licensing program would help so many people who cannot access a lawyer. It would increase Access to Justice for historically underserved populations, and it would increase judicial/court efficiency by allowing more litigants to access legal advice, improving the quality and clarity of their filings.

I am very excited by this proposal!

<td>I write to you in support of the work the paraprofessional licensing committee has been considering regarding family law and landlord tenant matters. In Lane County, I have handled cases regarding both subject matters in the six years I have been serving as a judge. My practice, prior to serving on the bench was primarily focused on domestic relations and criminal matters. I currently serve as the Chair for Statewide Family Law Advisory Committee and the Lane County Family Law Advisory Committee. At the national level, I serve on the National Council for Juvenile and Family Court Judges Family Violence and Domestic Relations Advisory Committee. I do not write on behalf of Lane County or any of these organizations but rather with my own position on the issues. In the 1990s Oregon Legislature established the Statewide Family Law Advisory Committee to advise the State Court Administrator and Chief Justice on issues relating to family law. At that time, the legislature and the courts could forecast the tidal wave of litigants who would need access to justice who could not afford the services of an attorney. The OJD established the Family Law Program and staffed it with specialized people who continue to work tirelessly to address the needs of litigants. We know from OJD statistics that the averages for cases where at least one party is self-represented are somewhere between 68-90% and in some counties that number is over 90%. OJD has responded with generating forms, providing facilitators, and having court connected mediation. All of these are worthy actions by OJD but still the weight of the work is crushing on our Branch.</td>

| 11/15/2021 | Ben Cox             | There have been studies done about litigants’ ability and desire to pay for legal advice. I find, anecdotally, that most self-represented litigants would like to have an attorney, but they believe they cannot afford it. When a litigant does not seek assistance of an attorney, there is no longer an independent voice advising them about the legal substance of their claim, so, many cases are filed that may not have legal merit, or, are plead poorly and cannot prevail at a substantive hearing. Having a resource available to litigants at a reasonable price that can assist with form preparation, discovery requests, preparing for trials and depositions, would be a valuable contribution to our legal community and would assist the court in more efficiently addressing the needs of Oregon’s families. Regarding the scope of work the paraprofessional would do, I disagree with scope of legal advice and degree of representation that is proposed. There are complicated legal issues in family law matters particularly related to jurisdiction, and financial issues like spousal support, division of retirement accounts, and property. Such issues are routinely addressed in case law out of our esteemed Appellate Courts. They also often require expert witness preparation and input to adequately address the issues. When we allow paraprofessionals to appear in mediations, and trials subject to court questioning, we are conferring upon them the mantle of a lawyer and simply put, they may not be educated and are not licensed in that capacity. I would have less hesitation in this regard if the paraprofessional was an extension of an attorney office and worked collaboratively, or with the oversight of an attorney. Lastly, I understand the scope of this project is limited to family law and landlord tenant, but in the context of family law, I do not see protective orders are within the scope for consideration for paraprofessional work. Often times, domestic relations cases closely track with protective orders, so it would be appropriate for the paraprofessionals to be educated specifically on domestic violence, the manner in which those cases have overlap, and the implications of those types of orders in domestic relations matters. Regarding Landlord Tenant issues, I have handled that docket exclusively for over a year and I endorse paraprofessional licensing without reservation. To the members of the Paraprofessional Committee:

I write to respectfully request that you do not implement this program in its current format. While I appreciate that the bar seeks to improve access to justice, it should not do so by effectively delegating legal services to people who lack the training to be able to serve them appropriately, or the insurance to make it right for their clients when mistakes are made.

Reform, change, and experimentation are great when the outcome might be at all hopeful. I am supportive of Bar efforts to increase access to justice. However, in this instance, the experiment involves people who will be making irreversible decisions around their property and retirement in divorce while they are feeling like they are adequately supported in a vulnerable time with the help of someone that may not meet the standard for competency.

For family law, the consequences are grave: if a mistake is made, parties may need to relitigate support issues (potentially multiple times, in the shadow of power/control or abuse). This particular experiment will mean that kids will have to deal with parents renegotiating inadequate parenting plans and the ensuing conflict that comes from uncertainty. Parental conflict is directly tied to statistically worse outcomes for children.

There is already so much trauma around divorce. This particular experiment will increase that trauma and make it harder for people to trust helping professionals overall.

Instead, the committee could recommend increased emphasis and funding for alternative dispute resolution for parties, apprenticeships as an alternate pathway for licensure, or restricting the paralegal work to modifiable actions only. The committee should also recommend the creation of a separate insurance risk pool for these paraprofessionals should this happen.

Thank you for your consideration

To Whom it May Concern:

I am writing to add my voice to the opposition to the implementation of paraprofessional licensing in Oregon. I started out my career working in Intellectual Property litigation in the Bay Area after law school, returned to Oregon in 2014, and made the decision in 2016 to open my own solo practice focused exclusively on family law. I was mainly self-taught with a handful of kind attorneys that answered the phone when I called. I built my practice on modest means clients and eventually the phone started ringing on its own. I worked hard and faced the high price of my bar dues (California and Oregon) and PLF expenses without the backing of a firm or the security of incoming clients (except for one brief year when I worked for a downtown Portland family law firm to try it out). I have ran my own practice while also providing clients with a reasonable hourly rate that I typically write down, or off. I have not charged some clients and I have drastically reduced final bills for others when the benefit to going to a hearing or trial outweighed their ability to pay for it. And often I have clients come through my doors with a mess of pro se paperwork or paperwork they completed with the assistance of untrained attorneys. Between google, divorce forums, and friends/family, people think they know more about family law than they actually do. And much of what they find online is not about Oregon, but about another state. Adding another opportunity to provide vulnerable and sometimes desperate clients with advice that is not coming from a lawyer gives me nightmares. I already only bill half my time spent on the work I do.

I often must tell people hard truths knowing that they won’t like what I say. And I often must face very unpleasant conversations with my clients or opposing parties/counsel. One thing that keeps me picking up the phone or answering that email is the weight of the responsibility that I bear with my bar license and malpractice insurance. It would be very easy to be sloppy or brush off the uncomfortable conversations if I was only filling out paperwork with someone and did not have both of those things breathing down my neck. I work every day knowing that if I could no longer practice law I would never pay the law school loans that still exist 11 years later, which I took on with the understanding that they would allow me to do the thing I always wanted to do (be a lawyer). No amount of CLEs in the entire world could replace that pressure. And, as an aside, I was in a paralegal program at the University of San Diego when I decided to apply to law school. I value work that paralegals do. But it is not the same as being a lawyer.

When I first read about this program my initial gut reaction was to leave family law. It feels like the biggest slap in the face to what I do every day. It makes me resent the OSB even more as a solo attorney. While I have loved this area, I have no desire to be part of a system with lowered standards that I will, frankly, have to clean up. I have no desire to practice in an area where all my hard work and dedication to my practice is being de-valued. Rather than provide more access to family law help, I believe that you will find lawyers leaving family law. And those of us out here on our own are the ones that not only bear the weight of our bar dues and PLF fees, but we are the ones taking on the responsibility of cleaning up messes and offering reduced fees. To ask more is just offensive at this point.

| 11/3/2021 | Scott Staab  | Dear Committee, My name is Scott Staab and I 100% oppose the idea of paralegals being licensed to represent individuals in landlord tenant matters. These are technical matters in a complex field of law that moves very rapidly and will have adverse outcomes of unintended consequences for many families hoping for a miracle.
I have focused on FED matters since 2009, and since the beginning of 2019 I have officially appeared in 488 Circuit Court cases representing defendants in FED matters in 17+ counties across the state, and numerous more in Justice Courts. Much of that time evictions have been muted due to the pandemic. I do direct mail advertising, as well as receive numerous referrals from legal aid and other attorneys around the state. In past years I have sent more than 10,000 letters each year to households being evicted offering a free consultation and to take the case on at no cost to them if it is believed to be won. For each case I take I talk with dozens more giving them an accurate assessment of their legal position, the timeframes and procedures in place, as well as possible outcomes and consequences at stake.
In the rural counties I may sign up 1 in 5 I talk to, and around the metro area it is closer to 1 in 20. The idea that every unrepresented party in FED court has not had the benefit of counsel is false. During call dockets in the metro area I have routinely spoken to 20%-25% of the defendants being called that day, and in rural areas it can be as high as 50%-100%. If the tenant has a solid eviction defense they are currently able to get representation for free by myself, or a number of attorneys in the state depending on their region.
The proposal to allow paralegals to counsel tenants in the midst of an eviction has many flaws, and none bigger than the fact that this individual is giving advice and then are not able to back it up. They can advise this person on what to do and get them to the trial, but then they are fed to the wolves. Individuals do not loose eviction cases from checking the wrong box as ORS 90.105.137(8) allows any defenses to pro se tenants at trial, not just defenses pled, they mainly lose because they do not have legitimate defenses. This area of the law if statutory in basis, and if the landlord has taken the proper steps under the law, they are entitled to the property.
The proposal allows paralegals to charge money for a service they can only half provide. If someone in need seeks counsel they would expect it to be complete. This proposal has the tenant still doing the trial on its own, or for an emergency cost in hiring an attorney for trial that will be 5 times the cost of the fee paid to the paralegal that got them into the trial track. Attorneys guarantee their advice because mainly the one giving the advice is fighting the fight, not telling our client how to do it if it were us. FED matters by law are required to go to trial within 14 days of the first appearance (approx 22 days after filing), and many times are set within a week.
This will not help more people. This will not protect more people. I am confident that it will do more harm than good to those it intends to serve. And I, for one, want nothing to do with it.
Best,
Krista |
This tenant who sees an add for "$379 to take care of your eviction" is not going to realize that once the negotiation fails, the paralegal helps them check the boxes on the eviction form (single page with 6 boxes), and marks and copies their exhibits, they are then on their own to learn the Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure and Oregon Evidence Code. In the alternative tenant shells out much more money to get an attorney up to speed for a trial in days. The paralegal cannot be left to give this person advice, for a fee or not, and then just walk away with no repercussions or recourse to the aggrieved tenant.

This would bring us to the issue of liability. Accountability is paramount to the judicial system at all levels, none the more so than for those giving life altering advice. These paralegals would need to have a regulatory body to oversee them and mandatory malpractice insurance with a rate to be established by the carrier group that would be taking on the pool of members. Advertising practices would need to be inline with what is acceptable for attorneys under the Rules of Professional Conduct. Any advertising should include a disclaimer that these services may be able to be obtained free from a licensed attorney and a 211 directory can be maintainedwith such a list. Courts would need to be informed if the tenant is being advised by an outside entity, and that information needs to be clearly stamped or printed on every document that the paralegal provided, drafted, advised on, or reviewed and that information would need to include their contact information and paralegal #. If they are working under an attorney that attorneys information would also need to be provided and their PLF insurance would cover the paralegal. If not, the insurance carrier would need to be required to have a "Repair" clause similar to that of the PLF. The Repair clause allows the claim to be addressed pre-emptively and would occur when the tenant realizes they got bad info and they have trial in two days or a week. Without a Repair clause the tenant will most likely not be able to afford or retain counsel and will end up with a formal eviction and a significant money award against him for the landlords costs and fees. A post judgment claim may pay the money judgment, but the eviction is there to stay. Without the insurance and notice requirements tenants are then left with no recourse for improper advice which is antithetical to the goals of the committee, the bar in general, and the public at large.

Help is on the way! Craig Colby a godfather in FED and landlord tenant law in general is now a Senior Advisor at The Commons Law Center (a legal service non-profit) and is actively training a new generation of tenant advocates specializing in FED defense at no cost to nearly all. The project has been slow to get off the ground with the reduction in evictions based upon the pandemic, however they are up and running now and will be expanding all of their services statewide in the near future. Other approaches that are being under utilized in the state are forced mediation programs that are in place in Marion and Lincoln Counties as well as an extremely successful voluntary mediation program in Coos County. Once parties are required to verbalize their concerns in a setting with a third party they are many times able to compromise on an agreement and thereby removing the possibility of a formal eviction on ones rental history. Another approach used in Washington, Yamhill, Coos is to conditionally dismiss the FED action upon the entry of the stipulated agreement, thereby encouraging an agreement to be reached and to also not have the pending action be a barrier to suitable new housing and thus a barrier to complying with the agreement entered into.

In summary it is my sincere belief that the formation of this new class of independent paralegals would create a predatory environment when individuals are at their most vulnerable and is not in the interest of the tenant, or the judicial system in general. Judgments for evictions cannot be corrected like other judgments and can result in a cycle of poverty than can be difficult to break out of. Allowing paralegals to go half way in giving advice and then stepping away is not the answer. This radical approach should not be adopted.

I can be reached at 503-929-9262 if you have any questions about any of the information provided above.

Best regards,
Scott

| 11/3/21| Bob Casey    | Summary. I oppose the entire concept of paraprofessional licensing. I’m appalled that the Oregon State Bar is even considering this idea. Reasons fall into at least two areas: Protection of the Public. First, the public wouldn’t be well served by such lax standards. Requirements for liability insurance, education, or ethics are slim to none. Undermining the Legal Profession – a Violation of Trust. Second, I believe the Oregon State Bar would be violating a trust it holds with licensed attorneys. One way of understanding this point would adapt the contract law concept of detrimental reliance. For many decades, the Oregon State Bar has imposed extensive requirements upon thousands of members who sought to become licensed attorneys:
- We spent 3 years of our lives, struggling in accredited law schools.
- We spent large amounts, and often incurred huge debt.
- We studied for, and passed a bar exam.
- We subjected ourselves to a demanding code of professional ethics.
- Each additional year, we paid hundreds of dollars in additional bar dues.
- Each additional year, we paid thousands of dollars in additional professional liability premiums.
- Every three years, we complied with mandatory continuing legal education requirements.
It’s appalling, to think the Bar would now undermine those professional licenses. Instead, the Oregon State Bar must treat its members fairly.
Do you want an example of how this would undermine our licenses? Think of the talented, dedicated attorneys who specialize in landlord/tenant law. That is a hard area of law practice. Those who enter that area deserve nothing but respect. However, this unwise initiative by the Oregon State Bar would eventually ruin the careers of many of those talented attorneys. The reason runs parallel to a principle in economics known as Gresham’s Law, which maintains that “bad money drives good money out of circulation”. In like manner, proliferation of paraprofessionals would cause the public to hire individuals with the most negligible qualifications and dedication, and stop engaging attorneys who satisfied the bar’s extensive requirements for professional licensing and who actually knew what they were doing. The bad will drive out the good.
I oppose this idea – every part of it. Please, stop this push to undermine our careers. And in the process, please rededicate the Oregon State Bar to only granting licenses to individuals who have satisfied stringent requirements regarding education, dues, ethics, and dedication to law practice.
Bob Casey, Atty.

| 11/3/21| Judy Parker  | Dear Program Members,
Please first allow me to thank you for the work done to date on this program. Helen asked me to participate with you but I declined because I knew that it was a thousand times more work than I was able to bear - so I appreciate your service to the state.
Second, I wanted to share with you that I chaired a taskforce that urged the BOG and then the BBX and then the Supreme Court to adopt a law clerk program similar to Washington's, strictly regulated with much oversight.
It got push-back aplenty but it went through the various rule-setter organizations. (Our focus was on regulation and safety nets and providing relief for rural and older lawyers.)
And personally, my sister (my older sister, and one who tends to benchmark herself against me, which is annoying) is a paralegal in North Carolina (rather than attend law school like me). She attended Duke’s paralegal program - one of the hardest in the state, if not the country. Paralegals there can draft pleadings AND file forms AND do all sorts of things that we don’t allow paralegals to do here in Oregon. She keeps telling me to move to North Carolina and open an office and she’ll do all the work and I’ll have the name on the door. And my mother would be our receptionist. You can see why I’ll stay in Oregon forever, thankyouverymuch. But my sister, she's brilliant and a hard worker and she'd be an excellent lawyer if she went to law school. So I also couch my thoughts with What would Karen Parker do with this program? She'd be awesome - but that's not sufficient to protect the public. |

| 11/3/2021 | Anthony Stewart | Good afternoon,
Attorneys will adapt and the profession will evolve, but I'd like to share a perspective I've yet to see considered.

I learned of this “paraprofessional” program from former bar chair Chris Costantino 2 years ago at a local bar event. Setting aside the very thoughtful concerns from other colleagues shared here and elsewhere (like OTLA’s very good responsive letter), I’d suggest that those considering this type of program look to our neighboring state for a comparative analysis. Costantino assured me that she and the other attendee (I think it was Ms. Hierschbiel) would push for other states’ experiences to be analyzed and implemented in the decision making process. Part of our job as attorneys is to identify similar precedent and argue that it informs the current analysis.

Washington state implemented a similar program in 2012 — with an arguably even worse sounding name — Limited License Legal Technicians — LLLT. A WA Bar directory search today reveals only 72 professionals with the LLLT credential in the state after nearly a decade (and not whether they are still active). In a state coming close to twice the size of Oregon, I question whether the resources and attention expended on that program could ever be justified for such a small cohort.

Consider this 2020 ABA Journal article about how the WA Bar was initially supportive of the original 2012 rule adopted by the WA Supreme Court — but then just about everyone ultimately shifted to an entirely inverted position by 2020. We’re a year or so out of this specific news event, but I believe the article’s report that the WA Supreme Court in June 2020 sunsetted the LLLT program remains the status quo.

I’m not licensed in WA, but I’m sure there’s plenty of WA- & OR-licensed attorneys in the affected practice areas. Did the LLLT program ever serve the intended targets? Did it create a second class of quasi-attorneys that simply undercut the pricing of mid-range, non-nonprofit legal service providers? Where did most of the LLLT professionals end up practicing — in major metro areas or in rural/underserved communities? Was there a cognizable impact on the quality of pleadings prepared and outcomes obtained for client, for the better or worse? Do judges in that state find that individuals who would otherwise appear pro se are better informed and better poised to navigate litigation? Did the LLLT program result in a cognizable increase or decrease in appeals in the relevant time period? Etc.

I laud the contributions of time and energy into this proposal, but it is no excuse to lose sight of the powerful economic and behavioral incentives and disincentives at play with dramatic policy changes. Hopefully there will be a thoughtful consideration of these foreseeable issues (and the experience of other states) prior to enabling such a fundamental change to the provision of legal services in this state.

-Anthony

| 11/3/2021 | Dady K. Blake    | I am writing to make comments re proposed LPL program. I am generally opposed to this program. I've no doubt that there are shortages in many areas of the law. Generally I believe that there is more the Bar can do to provide incentives and structure to both new and experienced attorneys to fill these gaps, versus creating a new program of uninsured paraprofessionals attempting to take the place of lawyers.
I see problems with LPL acting in lieu of an attorney, including:
No protection of clients against mistakes; most notably no insurance coverage requirement; No program of oversight for the paraprofessionals; A false sense of security by potential clients. And no where to turn for clients when things go wrong or they discover they need additional legal support.
Most important, this process appears to have the Bar condoning and supporting the bifurcation of our legal system into halves and have-nots wherein the rich can afford fully licensed, experienced, insured and regulated legal practitioners and the have-nots get the paraprofessional. The Oregon State Bar needs to be advocating for all persons and not creating another Bar of paraprofessionals to attempt to meet the needs of the poor. Certainly we can do better than this.
I've spent 1000s of hours volunteering on behalf of seniors and disabled. I've made it a point of pride to take on one difficult case involving the homeless or mentally ill each year. I know that the Bar can do more to support attorneys in these roles. Generally those of us who do this work, do it alone, without recognition or more importantly support. The Bar can do more.
Thank you for your consideration.

| 11/3/2021 | Sara Yen         | Dear Committee Members:
I strongly oppose creation of the paraprofessional license for landlord-tenant and family law practice. My reasons for opposition are many, but most can be summed up in the final paragraph in a letter submitted to your committee by attorney John Gear:
The mission and emphasis by the Oregon State Bar should not be figuring out how to rationalize providing the poor with ersatz legal services, it should be on doing everything possible to reduce the cost and time required for people to become fully qualified attorneys so that we can meet the needs for competent legal help with an increased supply of those equipped to provide it.
The committee proposal is a typical example of rightly identifying a problem, and coming up with the exact wrong solution. |
| 11/3/2021 | Blaine Clooten   | I disagree with Paraprofessional Licensing Implementation. This is a fundamental danger to consumer protection and will irreparably harm the legal profession. - Blaine Clooten. OSB 133294. |
| 11/3/2021 | Bear Wilner-Nugent | This is not addressed at anyone in particular. But I will say that one of my general takeaways from this discussion is that it furnishes more evidence in support of a proposition I already considered fairly well established: that the majority of active posters on this listerv reflexively oppose any reform or change proposals at the statewide bar level, and are never more eager to unfurl the full force of their reasoning powers than in an effort to slow or stop innovation. And I imagine that many of the selfsame people consider themselves innovators with regard to, say, their use of digital law office technology. One of the real shortcomings of our profession is that so many of its members are so relentlessly hostile to experimentation.
This whole discussion is really about economics more than it is about training or ethics. I wish more people were being intellectually honest about that. The chest-thumping and the obfuscation, all in favor of TRADITION!, are part of why this listerv is sometimes kind of a bummer for me to read. I can only hope that, in the fullness of time, new generations of lawyers will bring more openness to new ways of doing things. |

<td>From my vantage, I’ve watched bar-sponsored legislation that relaxed standards for wills, trusts, and probate. The result seems to be an increase in cases of estate planning that is badly-conceived or fraudulent. For example, recently I attended the deposition of someone with no professional training and whose education stopped at high school, who'd prepared transfer-on-death deeds for an elderly individual who’d been diagnosed with dementia for the preceding 13 years. She said she didn't know or consider... - Legal standard for lack of capacity; - Legal standard for undue influence; - Possible effect on title insurance; - Possible effect on taxes; or - Restraint on ability to sell property after signatory's death. It's a thing. There's a reason why licensed attorneys struggle over the hurdles to obtaining their professional license. It has to do wiht capable legal services for the public. Bob Casey, Atty. <td>Dear Paraprofessional Committee, I am writing today to express my deep concern about licensing paraprofessionals to practice law. An OSB endorsement of this proposal will give great credibility to the concept that one need not be a lawyer to practice law. It will result in the diminishment of the integrity and professionalism of the bar and of equal access to justice for all. Instead, we should continue to work on making sure all people who need a lawyer have a lawyer. The proposal is lacking in many ways. It requires no attorney supervision. It does not address diversity and inclusion. It does not prevent corporations from owning paraprofessional firms not licensed by the OSB. It does not require adequate malpractice insurance and, even if it did, the standard of practice will be lower making it more difficult for the client to recover in a malpractice claim. It will result in less equity. It does not address access to services issues. There will be less interest in making sure everyone who needs a lawyer has one. Those being represented by a paraprofessional will still not be represented by a lawyer who has ethical standards, and who has completed law school and passed the bar. They will not be on an even playing field in the courtroom, but will think they are somehow protected because the OSB has given the paraprofessional credibility by the mere fact that they allow them to practice law. We need to continue to work to make sure everyone who needs a lawyer, has one. Accepting anything less is failure.</td>

<td>Dear Committee, I am against any paraprofessional licensing. All paraprofessionals should work under the supervision of a licensed attorney. Law is too complicated and fraught with peril for people to give legal advice without their own connection to an attorney. The public will suffer, and attorneys will suffer. This would be a step back. Thank you. Best, Jan</td>

The investment in a paralegal certificate and PLIC requirements pales in comparison to attending law school and the passing Bar exam and thus by nature they have much less vested in giving improper advice and the consequences that an eviction or judgment can have against those already vulnerable societies.</td>

<td>To whom it may concern:</td>

<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I just read the summary of the proposed program. I have been very concerned about this program since I first heard about it a couple of years back. My concerns are:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>1. Allowing paralegals to essentially practice law, unsupervised, at lower rates, significantly diminishes the value of Oregon lawyers' law degrees and admission to the Bar. Oregon attorneys don't need a lower priced source of competition, or a bargaining tool for potential clients who think we charge too much.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>2. I don't practice family law, but I know it is very nuanced. Divorce and custody matters have lasting consequences on the parties. I believe permitting unlicensed individuals to assist clients with such matters, without the supervision or meaningful involvement of an attorney is a danger to the public. Attorneys spend four years in undergrad, three years in law school, and a couple of months studying for the bar exam before they can do many of the identified items without the assistance or supervision of an experienced attorney. I understand the goal is access to justice, but at what cost? Is it really justice if an unlicensed professional misses a big issue and one of the parties suffers severe adverse consequences? I know paraprofessionals will have some licensing requirements, however, it does not rise to the standards of a licensed attorney.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>3. Does this program constitute the unlicensed practice of law?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>4. Inflation is extremely high right now. Gas prices and food prices have gone up. Many companies and service providers are likely contemplating raising prices in response to the high prices of everything. Offering a low cost alternative to attorneys may very well take business from Oregon attorneys.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>5. I don't practice family or landlord-tenant law. However, when might this program be expanded to include business law, estate planning and probate, or other practice areas? The competition among attorneys for clients is already there. Prepaid legal services, Legal Zoom, and Rocket Lawyer already undercut the pricing models of traditional law firms. I am very concerned that this program will further undercut the value of the law degrees and bar admission that we have spent so much time, money, and effort obtaining and maintaining.</td>

<td>I am not necessarily opposed to this idea. There is clearly a demand for such services in certain areas that are bogging down our courts - family law and criminal law. Particularly with pro se litigants. If properly administered, this program might be a good thing. But that’s also where I grow cautious - what does the oversight look like and who will pay for it? It may start out with glamour and glitter but eventually, I foresee watered-down regulatory oversight since it is a ‘cheaper’ way for non-lawyers to access revenue from legal work, which probably means they won’t be chipping in as much for their own oversight. Limited budget means limited oversight. And if paralawyers do not oversee themselves, who should pay? The state? Likely not. Licensed lawyers? That seems pretty unfair to those who actually committed to a course of study that takes discipline and a lot of patience to achieve. But ‘fair’ is not important. The result of our serious undertaking is it actually means something to those who achieve it. It has value, and therefore, most of us work to protect the integrity of our profession by our very conduct - whether we recognize it or not. One big advantage to the consumer using a licensed lawyer is that they have a forum for recourse in the event of malpractice. For us in actual practice, it’s a dreadful, but necessary facet of law. And, because we (lawyers) pay substantial dues and insurance premiums to pay for self-regulation, there is some certainty that somebody that says they are a lawyer actually is entitled to practice law and appear in a tribunal. A quarrelsome lot by nature, the first thing we often do is check out our opposing party. Are they bona fide? Am I dealing with Gadfly or real Gravamen? Since the barriers to entry for a paralawyer will necessarily be lower, the available recourse to the consumer will probably be limited. The presence of ‘paralawyers’ and reduced rates for simple services is going to attract a lot of price-conscious consumers. Sometimes that is a good thing. But there are a lot of areas where that can be a very bad idea. For example - setting up a ‘simple’ Will appears to be easy. But after almost 30 years of practice, I know things can go quickly wrong if you miss something. Or if someone lies. If this program is introduced on a limited basis with a lot of oversight, study (and a hell of a lot of disclaimed liability to the consumer) then it might be worth trying out in some very narrow areas. On the other hand, a trusted friend practicing in Northern California has described the LA basin - which is heavily populated with paralawyers - as a total unregulated mess where the judiciary is pretty much overwhelmed and lawyers have little reason to work collaboratively since they rarely cross paths twice. That would not be a place where I would want to spend much time. So, if you decide to try it out, be just as ready to toss it on the ash-heap.</td>

<td>Hello,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I apologize for multiple emails, but wanted to share some additional thoughts regarding the proposed paraprofessional program.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>1. The summary indicated that all LPs must have 1500 hours of “substantive paralegal work”, including 500 hours of family law to represent family law clients, and 250 hours of landlord-tenant law to work on landlord-tenant cases. The minimum of 1500 hours could be accomplished in just seven months of full time employment. The thought that a paraprofessional with only seven months of law firm experience could represent clients alone in a huge matter like divorce or custody is very concerning.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>2. Paralegals do not have experience (or significant experience) in researching, reading, analyzing, and synthesizing caselaw. How can anyone adequately represent a client in a family law proceeding without any knowledge or experience in legal research and Oregon caselaw?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>3. Law firms do not have uniform standards with respect to identifying employees as a paralegal versus a legal assistant. The firms I have worked at have very different standards for these separate roles. Some firms have significant overlap, where paralegals perform administrative tasks, and legal assistants perform some more substantive tasks that would constitute paralegal work. Because of the lack of uniform standards, one individual’s 1500 hours of paralegal experience will be vastly different than another individual’s 1500 hours of paralegal experience.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>4. I know many attorneys are straddled with significant law school debt. The burden of this debt becomes even more significant if the value or even perceived value of our profession is diminished. The paraprofessional program will diminish the actual value and perceived value of our education and license to practice law.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>5. The Oregon State Bar could do more to match prospective clients with modest means to new attorneys willing to take matters at lower rates.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>6. When I previously heard about the paraprofessional program, the scope of what the LPs could do was much, much more narrow.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>7. If a client uses an LP for a matter, and the LP makes significant mistakes, the client will spend more overall after he or she uses a licensed attorney to clean up the mistakes. Many mistakes or adverse consequences are permanent, and could not be fixed later by a licensed attorney. The risk to the public of receiving incorrect advice/counsel far outweighs the benefit to the public of lower cost legal services.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>8. Under the proposed plan, how will unlicensed practice of law be prevented and identified if an LP goes beyond the scope of services they are licensed to perform?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>9. I know that our Bar is self-governed by the Board of Governors. On significant issues affecting all attorneys such as this, all attorneys should have a meaningful opportunity to vote on and be heard on this matter. I first learned about the proposed program when I served on the Executive Committee of the Oregon New Lawyers Division several years ago. I did not hear about the program again until today through a listserv. Attorneys get hundreds of bar-related emails per month. It is easy to miss an email on an important topic such as the paraprofessional program.</td>
</tr>

<td>I’m strongly opposed to the paraprofessional program because I think there’s a good chance disadvantaged minorities will be taken advantage of and fall through the cracks of our system.</td>

<tr>

<td>Most of my clients are low income Spanish speaking clients. Although, I don’t practice family law or landlord/tenant law, I think there should be greater protections in place for those who have had less of a formal education, those who don’t speak English, and those who need extra help understanding and accessing their rights. This paraprofessional program takes away one of the strongest protections in place: fear of disciplinary action by the bar. After working hard in law school, shelling out over a hundred thousand in tuition, and passing the bar exam, attorneys have a lot to lose if they mess up. Paraprofessional will have much less at stake and the chances for abuse increase.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I can also easily imagine a situation where a paraprofessional puts pressure on their client to settle a case (even if it’s not in the client’s best interest), knowing they would be unable to litigate the case without the help of a real attorney.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I urge the bar to reconsider this program. Licensed attorneys can hire paralegals to take on more cases and oversee their work. Licensing paralegals as attorneys is not the solution.</td>

<td>I write to strongly oppose the proposal to license paraprofessionals to undertake client representations in landlord-tenant and family law and to endorse all the points made by OTLA President Lara Johnson in her letter of 28 September. And I write as someone who is not happy with the status quo about conditions for under-represented people at all. But the maxim of “First do no harm” should control. Indeed, I was a member of the Alternative Pathways to Admission task force, which offered a proposal to reduce the cost and expand the pipeline of people who can become fully qualified attorneys by letting people who complete a rigorous clerking program sit the bar exam without attending law school. That is the approach that worked to train many of the greatest lawyers and judges in history up until the middle of the last century; that is the approach that needs to be revived and promoted, so that the kinds of people who want to provide affordable legal help to others can become fully licensed lawyers who can competently represent their clients—and who must carry liability coverage for when they fail to do so. Engineering technicians are not allowed to review and approve designs for bridges or buildings the way licensed engineers are. Pharmacy techs are not allowed to practice as pharmacists or counsel patients because what looks to the tech to be a routine prescription may be, to the qualified pharmacist, a fatal drug interaction event. While dental hygienists can, in some states, offer cleanings without a supervising dentist, the risk of a bad tooth cleaning is many orders of magnitude less than the life-changing risks that can easily arise from poor representation in the family law and landlord-tenant arenas. The mission and emphasis by the Oregon State Bar should not be figuring out how to rationalize providing the poor with ersatz legal services, it should be on doing everything possible to reduce the cost and time required for people to become fully qualified attorneys so that we can meet the needs for competent legal help with an increased supply of those equipped to provide it.</td>

<td>I just found out about this two days ago. I am not looking to decrease the access of very low to no income folks to services, but I believe that, at the very least, these issues need to be discussed among the populace of practicing attorneys as a whole, before the runaway train has crashed and burned. My colleagues have brought to light many issues I did not recognize before our round robin on the listserv. My own concerns are that those of us in the trenches, who actually represent lower income individuals on a regular basis, allowing for payment over time, reducing our fees, encouraging clients to perform some of the legwork themselves to lower costs and fees, have not been invited to the table in any form whatsoever. I do not believe many of these ideas are good, and I believe they will result in errors abounding, in clients being represented poorly, and in mistakes that can be ill afforded in family law, most of them surrounding children. I do not believe it is appropriate for the subcommittee to whom I addressed this email to provide any recommendations unless and until other family law attorneys have been involved in the process. Why was there never any outreach to the family law listserv? did the committee not think we could provide insight and offer ideas?</td>

| 11/2/2021 | Michael McNichols | To the Members of the Paraprofessional Licensing Implementation Committee:

  Please excuse the impersonal nature of my letter. I write it with sincerity and the hope and expectation that it will receive your full consideration. Please feel free to contact me should you desire any clarification of what I write below.

  I do have major concerns about the Proposed Oregon Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program currently being considered (and formulated) by the Paraprofessional Licensing Implementation Committee. (“PLIC”) My concerns about the proposed program arise from my 29 years of experience as an attorney in this state.

  I find it admirable that the bar’s intent is to provide legal expertise to those who have historically been unable to afford access to these services. Unfortunately, it appears to me that this could easily become one of those situations where bad consequences are born out of good intentions.

  On numerous occasions during my work as an attorney I have been approached by persons wanting me to review work that was already “substantially” completed but just need a final attorney review. I learned very early in my career that the potential risk in terms of potential malpractice exposure never justified accepting such engagements. I had to explain that the potential malpractice risk to me was the same irrespective of who else did the work that needed reviewing. That was a risk I was never willing to take.

  I also talked with clients who, although they had relied up what they thought was on competent advice provided by a non-attorney, often found themselves in legal quagmires because of that reliance and also because no attorney was willing to clean up the legal mess (with attendant legal liability) that had been created. In most every situation I encountered, the wronged consumer was in no position to be able to afford competent counsel to rectify the situation. They were also in no position to afford to seek legal remedies against the person who provided incompetent assistance. All of which leads to the question, will persons licensed under the proposed program be required to carry malpractice insurance?

  I am not aware of any minimum level of competence require by the Oregon State Bar to receive this license. Is there a qualifying exam? In order to become a real estate agent/broker in this state there is a comprehensive test to determine subject mastery. The same applies to Oregon notaries. And to Oregon nurses. And attorneys. Persons licensed under the Paraprofessional Licensing will be able to practice as a “standalone professional”, evidently having no supervision whatsoever. |
It appears that the major winners in this situation will be the community colleges and for-profit colleges that implement programs awarding the certificate. Please let me know if I am misinformed but it appears to me that the OSB is relying on the community colleges and for-profit colleges to set the required level of competence. I am certain that members of this committee are aware of the problems that made headlines in recent years concerning for-profit institutions. The prior comments are not intended to denigrate the quality of education provided by the community colleges of this state which provide needed educational resources to non-traditional students. They are invaluable. However, I am aware of no other profession which allows its practitioners to engage in the profession without some type of competency examination or demonstration. Paraprofessional Licensing should be no exception.

The stated goals of this program is assist those needing help with family law or landlord-tenant law. What will the Bar’s position be when Paraprofessional Licensed practitioners seek to provide legal guidance beyond these two areas? Will this license be expanded to include business law, immigration law, estate planning or intellectual property? And if not, why not? The Bar’s position is a slippery slope.

One of the goals of this initiative is to serve the under represented members of the community. How will this goal be accomplished by the Paraprofessional Licensing program? In Oregon, notary fees are regulated by the state. Will the state regulate how much Paraprofessional will be able to charge for these services? Is cultural sensitivity training a part of the Paraprofessional Licensing curriculum? Are there any stated procedures or benchmarks to determine how the program will successfully address this concern?

I appreciate and I endorse OSB’s aspiration to make access to competent legal service available to all Oregonians. The proposed Paraprofessional Licensing programs does not appear to be an solution to the problem. If anything this program has the potential to seriously harm those it seeks to assist.

There is a need to address the stated problem. Granting the right to provide legal services to untested and minimally trained and minimal supervised practitioners is no solution. I do not see how this program can help those it is intended to help. Unfortunately, I do see significant negative consequences arising from this program.

I appreciate the PLIC’s consideration to my letter and my concerns about this committee’s plan for licensed legal paraprofessionals in it’s current form.

<td>I write to oppose implementation of an Oregon paraprofessional program. My practice is almost exclusively limited to representing people in claims for employment discrimination and unpaid wages. As such, I do not practice in an area that will be affected by the current proposed implementation of the paraprofessional program. However, I am a Spanish speaker and represent Spanish speaking members of our community. In representing Spanish speakers, I have seen people use what are referred to as “Notarios,” which are unlicensed individuals essentially doing what the bar is proposing with the paraprofessionals. The incidents I have encountered Notarios, the results have often resulted in a loss of rights to the individual or individuals who sought help in the first place. They are also often paying for the ‘privilege’ of having their rights and claims taken away through some form of malpractice. The bar’s proposal does nothing to prevent these Notarios from continuing their practice, and I believe that implementation of the paraprofessional programs will only provide cover to illegal notaries and paraprofessionals to act in a more open manner, alongside the bar’s proposal to have paraprofessionals engaged in representing individuals.</td>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I strongly urge the BOG, the HOD, and the Committee to stop what its doing in this paraprofessional realm. Only attorneys, with legal training, insurance, oversight, ethical obligations, and understandings of the complexities of these situations should represent people in their legal affairs. This is more obviously and apparent when we are discussing individuals who are already living in the margins, about to be evicted, or are otherwise being taken advantage of. Implementing a situation that will simply monetize their claims, force them to pay, up front, fees and for forms for that which they already do not have money to pay, will not increase access to justice for these people. It will merely compound the harm and financial ruin that they already face, and allow another person to take their money and kick them while they are already down.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I write in strong opposition to this proposal, as this program will not provide a solution to the perception that people are unrepresented in landlord / tenant or family law matters. If we truly wish to an equal access to justice to those who cannot afford it, then we must seriously consider providing a constitutional right to counsel to tenants facing eviction in landlord/tenant proceeding as well as seriously support a true fee shifting bill that permits successful litigants the ability to recover and afford the legal services that they need. It appears that Washington State has already passed such a mandate, as have other cities and counties: http://civilrighttocounsel.org/major_developments.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>Further, this program will not accomplish the stated objective. Litigants will still be unrepresented in court, facing questions from a Judge or opposing counsel. They will not have someone in their corner, by their side, during what could be the most difficult and challenging part of the proceeding, at a trial or hearing. What this proposal does is merely gloss over, cover up, and give lip-service to justice, without actually providing justice to people. Other jurisdictions have tried this approach and it failed miserably. I do not understand this bar’s decisions to proceed like this in the face of overwhelming information that such programs will not achieve the desired goal of protecting individuals, who are often in some of the worst financial situations of their lives.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>I strongly oppose implementation of this program and urge you to vote not on its passage and stop all programs which will deny people true access to justice.</td>

Dear Paraprofessional Committee and Board of Governors,

Below are my top concerns with the proposal for the Oregon Legal Paraprofessional Licensing Program that I read:

- Insurance. Attorneys in Oregon are required to have insurance to protect our clients. Paraprofessionals must also be required to have insurance for the same reasons that attorneys are required to be insured. Not requiring insurance is extremely troubling, given that paraprofessionals will have significantly less legal training than lawyers and will be representing clients in matters that could have catastrophic outcomes if the paraprofessional errs. In essence, the proposal would place consumers at greater risk for legal error without an insurance safeguard.

- Abuse reporting. No mention is made in the proposal about whether paraprofessionals will be mandatory reporters like attorneys are. This needs to be addressed because those working in family law may be more likely to encounter abuse and paraprofessionals should be required to report abuse.

- Education. Paraprofessionals must go through some kind of standardized certification process that includes education and a test for minimum competency even if they demonstrate substantial substantive experience in the field. Even notaries in Oregon are required to have standardized training. It is unconscionable to allow paraprofessionals to represent clients without being required to take training in legal ethics and abuse reporting and demonstrate that they understand how to understand the laws they will be working with.

- Continuing education. As the proposal currently stands, mandatory CLE requirements are a “potential” ongoing licensure requirement. Paraprofessionals must be required to complete continuing legal education. Having less formal training than attorney who are required to refresh on certain topics every few years, paraprofessionals should be required to complete as much, if not more, continuing legal education as attorneys.

Why are we focusing time and resources on figuring out how non-attorneys can practice law instead of focusing on expanding our legal aid programs to serve very low income Oregonians and on incentivizing innovative lawyers like Amanda Caffal to create firms to offer services to low income Oregonians? What if law school wasn’t so expensive that lawyers have to charge ridiculous amounts of money to pay back their loans? What if PLF insurance was sliding scale so lawyers making less could pay less and pass those savings on to their clients? What if PLF and bar dues were lower for people whose hourly rate was below a certain dollar amount or performed some large number of pro bono hours per year? What if we had scholarship programs tied to working in legal aid in Oregon for a certain number of years? I can think of so many ways to expand legal services without licensing non-lawyers to practice law. But if we do license non-lawyers to practice law, they must be required to have insurance, report abuse, have standardized education, take a minimum competency test, and continuously refresh their legal education.

Also, please consider that The Limited License Legal Technician (LLLT) program in Washington was created in 2012 as an effort to respond to unmet legal needs of Washington residents who could not afford to hire a lawyer. Through this program, licensed legal technicians were able to provide narrow legal services to clients in certain family law matters. The program was an innovative attempt to increase access to legal services. However, after careful consideration of the overall costs of sustaining the program and the small number of interested individuals, a majority of the Washington Supreme Court determined that the LLLT program is not an effective way to meet these needs, and voted to sunset the program.

Also, please consider how low income Oregonians will fare in their legal struggles when the other party is represented by an attorney. While I agree receiving some kind of help is better than proceeding pro se, I have witnessed people without a formal legal education assisting others in court and the results were similar to if the litigant had just proceeded pro se. I implore the board to focus its attention on expanding actual legal services to low income Oregonians.

Thank you for taking the time to read my concerns.

Sincerely,

Sarah-Ray

| 10/22/2021 | Dona Marie Hippert | Dear Paraprofessional Committee,
I understand the committee is asking for comments on its proposed plan before delivering a final report to the Board of Governors in November. Could you please tell me what the deadline for comments is? Is the proposed plan the two page PowerPoint document found at https://paraprofessional.osbar.org/files/Proposed-Oregon-Legal-Paraprofessional-Licensing-Program-One-Pager.pdf, or is there something other than that?
Many thanks!
Dona                                                                                           |
| 10/22/2021 | Jan Kitchel        | All,
I think this would be disaster for clients, lawyers, and the entire legal system. There are plenty of lawyers to take care of any legal problem for any demographic sector. This will result in fraud, weirdness, and bad legal service. Please do not implement this plan. I understand Washington tried it and dropped it.
Best,
Jan                                                                                           |
| 10/22/2021 | Brooks Cooper      | While I agree that access to justice, especially for lower income folks is a problem in our society, the problem is not solved by this proposal. It will be made worse. Without the fully panoply of protections for the public - RPCs, mandatory PLF, etc., the rights of lower income Oregonians will be in jeopardy.
This problem can be solved by more robust funding of sources like Legal Aid by the society as a whole, not by a proposal such as this.                                                                 |

I'm very excited about this and have been waiting a long time for this to come to light in Oregon. I intend to apply to become an Oregon licensed paraprofessional in the domestic relations specialty area as soon as it launches. I'm in the process of reviewing the materials posted on your webpage to learn more about what has been developed so far.
Thank you for your hard work in developing this program!                                           |
| 8/30/2021  | Susan Tillitt      | Dear Paraprofessional Licensing Implementation Committee,
I learned about your efforts to implement a paraprofessional license program while investigating my own landlord-tenant matter.
In 2004, I received a paralegal certificate from the University of Washington. I attended the program on campus - I think this may have been before they offered an online program.
Since then, I've been working in Intellectual Property management (5 years in private sector and 11 years at OSU), but have always held a place in my heart for affordable housing issues. When living in Seattle, I volunteered for nearly 2 years with the Washington Low Income Housing Network (June 1998 - February 2000 - right in the midst of the dot com boom and bust in Seattle).
If there is any more information you can provide to me about the status of the licensing program, I would very much appreciate it. Also, if my letter of interest can be useful for the committee's efforts, please feel free to include this in your records.
Thank you,
Susan Tillitt                                                                                   |

<td>I've been an attorney in Oregon since 1996, mostly handling civil litigation, and have served on a number of committees and boards over the years. My work experience does not include family law. I do have experience with landlord-tenant disputes and have taken and defended probably thousands of depositions and have tried dozens of cases. My work experience also includes defending lawyers in Oregon through the OSB PLF, which gives me more insight than most into the harm bad lawyers can cause.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>In Oregon, unlike in many other states, all lawyers are required to carry malpractice insurance. Lawyers do sometimes make honest mistakes, and a few make dishonest mistakes. Regardless of how the error occurs, legal malpractice can leave clients devastated. When someone undertakes to represent another in a legal matter, it sets up a situation where the client can be victimized. I did not see any discussion in the attached about whether malpractice insurance would be mandatory, and if so, how that would be handled. That is a huge issue. If the paraprofessional license is created, it is certain that there will be malpractice claims. What is the plan for that? Will the paralegal malpractice insurance premiums go into the same PLF risk pool as lawyers? I hope not! Similarly, what will the ethics rules be, and how will that be policed and enforced? Realtors can represent both buyers and sellers in transactions. Will paraprofessionals be allowed to represent both spouses in a divorce? I imagine the Committee has been talking about these issues. My understanding is that there is a plan to present this to the Supreme Court for approval, but the attached flyer has no discussion of these very important issues. Nobody should support this without a fuller explanation. The above issues are administrative in nature and are presumably things that can be addressed and solved. The bigger concern is that we already have a program that licenses people to represent others in conflicts in and out of courts. That has traditionally been reserved to lawyers, who can delegate much of that work to supervised staff. Representing clients is a tough job. It requires a significant understanding of a lot more than a narrow substantive area like family law. For example, how is someone supposed to advise clients on depositions if they don't know the rules of evidence and have never tried a case to develop actual knowledge of how bad answers or a poor demeanor play out? Advising clients, preparing pleadings, assisting clients in trial, assisting clients in settlement decisions, interpreting opinion letters and orders, etc. all falls squarely within the job description of lawyers. It takes years to train an associate sufficient to allow an attorney to represent clients without supervision by a more experienced lawyer.</td>

| 8/11/2021  | Aryn Seiler      | This is a terrible idea for several reasons. Attorneys study long and hard, and sit for tortuous exams that test whether or not they can responsibly and professionally represent clients in legal matters large and small. Unless all of that was meaningless, and a waste of money, it does not make sense to allow people who have not proved themselves through those rigorous to represent people in legal matters.

The list of services outlined in the proposed program are first and second year attorney tasks. Those are baby lawyer tasks that a new associate or a clerk performs because they are relatively low risk and mistakes can be corrected. Why would you give that valuable beginner’s work to a non-attorney?

The decision to expand paraprofessional services will water down the field, make it hard for new attorneys to get any real experience, and likely result in a lot of paraprofessional legal malpractice claims.

This is a very bad idea and I don’t and won’t support it.                                                                                                                                                    |

| 5/14/2021 | Sam Johnson   | Hello, I was asked to give some input as a stakeholder currently doing evictions for landlords in Oregon. I am interested in getting a paraprofessional license when it becomes available. I see this as an opportunity for me to expand my services and continue to provide cost effective, efficient evictions for landlords.

A little bit about my background, I graduated from University of Oregon with a Bachelor of Science. My father started a business assisting landlords with low cost non-attorney evictions in 1997. In 2006, I took over as the primary manager of the business. In addition, I became a licensed property manager in 2015 and my current portfolio is 105 units. Over the past 15 years, I have managed over 30,000 FED filings on behalf of landlords and have become an expert in what needs to happen to set up a strong case and how to navigate the court process.

I read the draft requirements and I think you should consider another pathway to getting the paraprofessional licensing for people who have not been working for an attorney, but have considerable experience. In my case, it appears I meet all the requirements outlined, except I have never worked in a law office. Your current requirements would exclude someone like me because I do not have the 1500 hours working under an attorney. I have had an experienced landlord/tenant attorney on retainer for the last 14 years who has spent a considerable amount of time explaining processes and giving advice to educate me on specifics that allow me to competently assist my clients with this process at a high level. I would argue that I know more about landlord/tenant law than many attorneys that only dabble in that area of law. There are certainly several expert attorneys that specialize in this field and they are needed for cases that are complicated. The reality is that the vast majority of FED’s filed are fairly cut and dry over non-payment issues and an attorney is not really necessary. I believe that my experience is relevant to the mission at hand, which is to provide the public competent and reliable legal services.

In closing, I think that there are a small group of individuals in the state that have never worked in a law office, but have in depth knowledge in specific areas of law and could be great paraprofessionals. With the current proposed paths to a paraprofessional license we would be left with an insurmountable gap to meet your base requirements. I suggest that you give a path to people like me that have spent their career helping the public with this process. My suggestion is to allow people to submit a signed letter of recommendation from an attorney that knows their ability and can attest to their competence in lieu of the 1500 hour requirement.

Thank you for the chance to be part of this process and I hope you find my input valuable. If you have any questions or would like more info from me please feel free to reach out!

Regards, Sam Johnson

<td>Good morning... I have been a legal assistant for 28 years, working in family law for 28 years and criminal defense 13 years, and I am going to graduate in June earning my AAS in Paralegal Studies. Crystal Sullivan, my advisor, is on the OSB Licensed Paraprofessional Committee and told me about the new program you are working on. I have been reading and following your planning etc. and was just wondering if there is a way to either join the committee or be provided some of the information to keep up on as you all work through the dynamics of creating this program. I am very interested in becoming a Licensed Paraprofessional especially as it would fit into my future plans when I decide to retire early and hopefully create a little business for myself helping family law clients maneuver through the divorce process and the judicial process. I already work full time for an attorney and as I said, I graduate in June, so I'm not ready to jump into anything until after I graduate since my plate is pretty full, but I definitely would be interested in either being in the loop or even engaged in some way while the discussions and planning are going on with the committee. I feel since I have an extensive amount of legal experience from an assistant/paralegal standpoint, and have helped many people, i.e., friends and family members, file their own divorces, I might have some good insight. Thank you so much for your time. Have a great day.</td>

RE: Paraprofessional Licensing Program

Dear Members of the Board of Governors and the PLIC,

Thank you for the opportunity to provide public comment on this proposal at the November 20th BOG meeting. I am reaching out to provide suggestions on limiting the scope of work paraprofessionals should be licensed to perform in dissolution of marriage cases. I am also including a written copy of the testimony given at the November 20th meeting.

Supplemental Commentary: Limitations on the Scope of Work to be Performed by Paraprofessionals

The division of property in divorce cases often requires knowledge of many different areas of law. The assets to be divided in a divorce could include intellectual property, business interests, promissory notes, family trusts, inheritances, investment portfolios, stock options and/or restricted stock units, personal injury settlements, appreciation in value of separately held assets, biological material such as frozen embryos set aside for assisted reproduction, defined benefit plans, defined contribution plans—the list goes on. Division of these types of assets correctly requires some knowledge and understanding of the law related to each type of asset, such as estate planning, property, contract, intellectual property, personal injury, ERISA, etc. If either party in a divorce is insolvent, federal bankruptcy law might come into play. Frequently, the division of assets creates significant tax consequences to the parties which must be considered prior to trial or settlement. The training requirements proposed for a paraprofessional to provide legal advice in family law cases does not adequately cover these areas, nor should it be expected to in a two-year associate degree program.

I am concerned by the prospect of paraprofessionals drafting stipulated judgments (rather than merely helping parties understand and fill out court-provided forms) without attorney supervision because they are both binding legal contracts and enforceable court orders. Paraprofessionals may lack the skills and training required to reduce complex agreements to enforceable stipulated agreements. Drafting errors could plague clients for years to come and be extremely costly and time consuming to repair. For example, in spousal support cases, special consideration must be given to the wording of the findings and orders to avoid unintended consequences when either party moves to modify or terminate the support in the future. Unlike child support, there is no one-size fits all formula for determining spousal support, and spousal support is typically more difficult to modify than child support.
The Oregon State Bar should not hold licensed paraprofessionals out to the public as competent to handle these issues if the training and experience required to obtain licensure does not cover them. Rather than expanding the training, I am suggesting limiting the scope of work paraprofessionals could be licensed to perform to include only those areas in which they will be trained through the licensing program. There are a variety of ways to do this. One would be to create a list of assets designated as complex, and a requirement that the licensed paraprofessional refer clients to an attorney when those assets are a part of the marital estate. Another would be to put limitations on the value of the marital estates on which paraprofessionals are licensed to provide advice, decreasing the likelihood that these more complicated assets will be involved.

ORS 107.485 is a statute allowing parties to file for summary dissolution of marriage without the need for a hearing on the merits in certain straightforward cases. The legislature determined that cases involving minor children, marriages of ten years or more, real property, debts of $15,000 or more, and/or personal property valued at $30,000 or more are too complicated to qualify for the summary dissolution process. The financial benchmarks in this statute could be incorporated into the scope of work for which paraprofessionals could be licensed in family law cases. Limitations on the size of the marital estate would alleviate concerns around the complexities of dividing certain

If the Bar does not restrict these complex issues from the scope of cases licensed paraprofessionals are allowed to handle, members of the public are likely to infer that they are just as qualified to assist on complex cases as they are on the cases this proposal intends them to handle (e.g., those in which the parties might not otherwise have representation). The program should have more safeguards in place than simply assuming licensed paraprofessionals will recognize when a case is beyond their experience and training and choose not to accept it.

Testimony given at the Board of Governor’s Meeting, November 20, 2021

I am a collaborative attorney and mediator who has been practicing family law in Oregon for ten years. I am the past president of the Oregon Association of Collaborative Professionals. I currently serve on the Executive Committee of the Alternate Dispute Resolution Section of the OSB, and as cochair of the OTLA Family Law Section. I am not speaking on behalf of any of those organizations.

Licensing paraprofessionals to represent clients would create a dramatic change in how legal services are delivered in Oregon. Such a major change should not be implemented without engaging the sections of the Bar that will be most impacted, and the plan should not move forward until that engagement has occurred.

Providing accessible legal resources to underserved Oregonians is an admirable goal, but there are other places the Bar could focus its resources to provide a greater impact.

More and more, family law litigants are choosing to be pro se not because they cannot afford attorneys, but because they are opting out of the adversarial dispute resolution model offered by the court system. They are choosing not to hire attorneys because they are fearful of finding themselves embroiled in costly, time consuming and stressful litigation. There is a need for access to affordable alternative dispute resolution options within family law. At present, free or low cost mediation services are available through the county courts, but only to resolve issues related to child custody and parenting time. Expanding those programs to allow litigants to mediate property division and spousal support issues would provide a tangible benefit to pro se litigants and help keep those cases off the courts’ already overworked dockets.

Pro se litigants are already going to the self-help counters of their local courthouse for help filling out paperwork. The services available to low-income litigants through the courts should be expanded.

Law firms should be encouraged to allow their staff paralegals to deliver services directly to low-income clients in certain straightforward cases, allowing paralegals to advise pro se litigants within the safety net of a firm with immediate access to an attorney when needed.

As a family law practitioner, the scope of the areas in which a paraprofessional could deliver legal advice under the current proposal is too broad, and the standards for licensing are too lax. At a minimum, there should be an admittance exam that tests whether the paraprofessional understands the boundaries within which they are permitted to practice, what to do when approached by a client who has issues beyond those boundaries, and how to inform potential clients about the limitations of their practice so that they can make an informed choice.

Looking at the admissions framework recommendations, a paralegal would only need 500 hours of experience working in the family law to become licensed paraprofessional in family law (in addition to 1,000 hours of substantive paralegal experience in any practice area). That is the equivalent of just over three months of full-time work at a family law firm, and it is simply not enough time for a paralegal to gain the knowledge and skill required to evaluate the scope of potential family law representation, let alone to provide effective legal advice. Family law paralegals typically do not get experience attending depositions or attending trials when working within law firms, yet this proposal would have them attending depositions and court hearings.

In divorce cases, the division of property is final, meaning it is difficult and often impossible to correct if a mistake is made during the initial divorce proceeding. The risk of mistake and malpractice when dealing with the disposition of the family home, retirement accounts, business interests, stock options, or RSUs is real and the dollar amounts are significant. Spousal support is another complex and technical area that is extremely impactful to the parties and can have lifelong ramifications if done incorrectly. These concerns could be addressed with caps on the total value of the marital estate or the incomes of the parties in cases paraprofessionals could handle.

I urge the BOG to postpone implementation of the paraprofessional program until there has been an opportunity for meaningful engagement with stakeholders, including the family law and landlord tenant sections of the Bar.

Sincerely,

RE: Public Comment on OSB’s Paralegal Licensing Proposal

Dear Ms. Grabe,

The Women’s Justice Project at Oregon Justice Resource Center is writing to comment on the Oregon State Bar’s proposal to allow the Bar to license paralegals to provide limited legal services in family law and landlord-tenant cases. First, we generally support this proposal as it appears to be a valuable step towards narrowing the access-to-justice gap among Oregonians who cannot afford traditional legal services. However, we also submit this comment to highlight our concerns as pertains to a population that is often overlooked: those who are incarcerated in Oregon’s prisons. Our primary concern is that the proposal is unlikely to meaningfully increase access to civil legal services for incarcerated persons. Further, the proposal may actually exacerbate the existing disparities and barriers faced by incarcerated persons who need civil legal assistance. We therefore ask the Oregon State Bar to consider targeted modifications to the proposal to address these concerns.

About Oregon Justice Resource Center and the Women’s Justice Project

The Oregon Justice Resource Center (“OJRC”) was founded in 2011. Our goal is to promote civil rights and improve legal representation for underserved communities, including people living in poverty and people of color. We work in collaboration with like-minded organizations to maximize our reach to serve these underrepresented populations, to train future public interest lawyers, and to educate our community on issues related to civil rights and civil liberties. We approach our work through a model of integrative, client-centered advocacy that includes direct legal services, public awareness and education campaigns, strategic partnerships, and coordinating our legal advocacy to promote criminal justice reform. Through our projects (Civil Rights Project, Oregon Innocence Project, Youth Justice Project, Women’s Justice Project, and others), OJRC provides direct legal services to clients incarcerated in jails and prisons throughout the state of Oregon.
The OJRC’s Women’s Justice Project (“WJP”), founded in 2015, is uniquely positioned to understand the civil legal needs of incarcerated individuals. WJP is the first and only program in Oregon to exclusively address issues related to women intersecting with the criminal legal system. The WJP provides civil legal assistance to people incarcerated in Coffee Creek Correctional Facility (“CCCF”), Oregon’s only women’s prison. They help clients identify non-criminal legal issues that are or might become barriers to successful reentry into the community, and work with clients to resolve their legal issues and address potential roadblocks before they are released. Family law and landlord-tenant issues are common areas of concern for WJP clients.

Why We Support the Paralegal Licensing Program

We recognize that many Oregonians are unable to access assistance with legal matters that may have tremendous consequences for their lives. These legal problems can impact the person’s ability to access housing, maintain income, or receive adequate healthcare. Those unable to obtain legal assistance rarely experience their legal problems in isolation, as the negative consequences typically fall on the entire household. Further, we understand that our state’s failure to provide access to legal services is even greater in historically marginalized communities, who have a disproportionally large number of legal problems. Expanding the available options for legal representation is especially important for underserved populations in our state, including persons of color, people with low incomes, and people living in rural areas.

Why Access to Legal Assistance During Incarceration is Important

Our work with incarcerated persons is founded in the understanding that almost everyone incarcerated in Oregon will return to our communities one day. Upon releasing from prison, individuals face numerous barriers to successful reentry. Many of these challenges are the result of civil legal matters that could have been addressed effectively if the incarcerated person did not have to wait until release to do so. Of course, not addressing legal issues promptly can make the problems more complicated, burdensome, or cause irreversible consequences. Unfortunately, legal assistance is extraordinarily difficult to access from prison. This makes it more difficult to successfully reintegrate into the wider community and makes recidivism more likely. Many people cycle through our criminal legal system more than once, caught in a cycle of poverty, marginalization, crime, and incarceration. Our communities thus pay a high price for our unwillingness to invest in legal services that can help people before they are released and increase their likelihood of successful reentry.

There are many civil legal issues affecting incarcerated people, ranging from debt to driver license suspension to landlord-tenant issues. To illustrate how an incarcerated person could benefit from legal assistance in landlord-tenant matters, consider the impact of eviction records. Many landlords will screen out tenants who have been evicted. Incarcerated people often struggle with limited housing options upon release due not only to their criminal records, but records of evictions, many of which may be eligible for expungement. Access to a legal professional who can help with expungement of eviction records can make a tremendous difference in clearing the person’s path to finding housing.

WJP clients receive assistance with a variety of civil legal issues, but help with family matters is the most common request. Of particular concern is ensuring that healthy parent-child relationships are maintained during incarceration. We have observed that it is very common for incarcerated mothers to be prevented from contacting their children by the other parent or caregiver, even when the mother’s parental rights have not been terminated. This dynamic is particularly pernicious where the other parent is a domestic abuser of the mother, which is sadly very common. Clients often do not understand what their rights are or how to enforce them. Existing parenting time orders often do not address the mother’s incarceration and contain no provisions specifying how contact is to proceed between an incarcerated mother and her child. Thus, having access to legal advice and assistance can make the difference between whether a mother and child will lose all contact for years, causing irreversible harm to that relationship, or whether that relationship will be preserved during the incarceration.

The beneficial effects of consistent and positive communication between incarcerated parents and their children is demonstrated by social science research. As of 2017, there were more than 70,000 children in Oregon who have an incarcerated parent, and of those 70,000 children, approximately half are under the age of ten.¹ Many things may influence a child’s ability to cope with parental incarceration, such as family dynamics, available supports, degree of trauma for the child and caregivers, and details of the crime and/or incarceration. Studies have shown that maintaining contact between incarcerated parents and their child—with visits conducted in supportive, safe, and child-friendly environments—is likely to be the best option to mitigate the harmful effects of parental incarceration on families.² At the WJP, we have observed time and again the important role that access to legal assistance plays in ensuring these bonds are not severed by incarceration.

Incarcerated Persons Face Unique Barriers to Access to Justice

Given that it is already difficult to navigate the legal system without an attorney, being incarcerated creates further barriers. Even finding basic information about one’s legal matter can be very difficult from prison. While a prison facility may have a law library, access to the library and resources within the library can be limited. For example, prison staff and library coordinators regulate when and how an inmate is allowed access to the law library based on available staffing and operational needs. There is no opportunity for incarcerated people to browse the internet for helpful advice, or to call the local courthouse to speak to a court clerk. This commonly results in incarcerated individuals being unable to access what few legal resources are available in a timely manner.

While the Oregon Administrative Rules require Oregon Department of Corrections (“ODOC”) to make available “legal research materials” and “legal forms,” these materials are often outdated or contain incorrect statements of law. Indeed, the materials available in a prison law library often pale in comparison to the publicly accessible Self-Help Forms Center available on the Oregon Judicial Department’s website. Further, most laypersons, including incarcerated persons, usually do not know what forms are appropriate to their situation. Even when the correct form is used, people have no option except to fill them out as best they can without legal advice. This can result in people unwittingly harming their interests in court proceedings and/or the court rejecting their pleadings.

Additionally, incarcerated persons have a significantly reduced ability to contact court staff or court clerks, as they have limited access to telephones, and even less access to email and the internet. Usually, contacting the court by mail is the only option. Compared with e-filing documents, or making a quick phone call to ask a question, the mail is a slow method of communication. Prison mail processing systems can add days to the time it takes for a person’s item of mail to actually leave the facility. It can take several weeks for a person’s mail to be received and filed by the court. This can result in delays and/or missed deadlines. People are often left wondering whether the court received their mail, but do not have any way to find out other than to send more mail.

Being incarcerated also makes it more difficult to appear in court. For example, the policy at CCCF, the women’s prison, is that incarcerated persons may appear in person or by video for criminal case hearings, but not for civil cases. Appearances for civil matters must be done over the phone. This restriction can diminish the person’s ability to advocate for themselves effectively before a judge. Further, there can be significant logistical hurdles to arranging court appearances by telephone. Court staff are sometimes unwilling or do not know the procedure to contact the prison to facilitate the appearance. At times, particularly early in court proceedings, courts will assume that an individual’s failure to appear is willful, not realizing the person is incarcerated and does not have the ability to let the court know their whereabouts. Access to telephones for court appearances can also be affected by scheduling errors by court staff or ODOC staff, lack of scheduling availability in the facility areas used for these calls, or emergencies like facility lockdowns or staff shortages.

One example in particular illustrates the unique difficulties faced by incarcerated individuals in accessing Oregon courts. Every individual incarcerated in an Oregon prison is assigned a State Identification Number (“SID” number). Incoming mail must contain the person’s SID number, or it will not be delivered. Something as simple as the court failing to include the SID number on an envelope can result in the person failing to receive a piece of mail that may be critical to a successful outcome in their legal matter. Others never receive copies of judgments in their cases and are left without a clear understanding of the outcome.

These barriers to accessing the courts are compounded by the financial realities facing a person in prison. Without financial assistance from friends or family outside of the prison walls, the vast majority of incarcerated persons lack the financial means to seek legal representation. They also often lack sufficient funds to pay for mailing documents to the courts, filing fees, civil process fees, and other costs associated with litigation. Incarcerated individuals generally earn between $8 to $82 a month for their prison work. From these earnings, up to 15% can be automatically deducted—5% for the general victim’s assistance compensation fund, 5% for the individuals transitional savings fund (up until that account contains $500), and the remaining amount to pay court fines and fees (this deduction can be either 5% or 10%, depending on if the individual has exceeded $500 in their transitional fund). This generally leaves a monthly balance of $7.20 to $73.80 from which the person must pay for certain basic needs.

Necessary purchases can quickly deplete the entirety of one’s monthly earnings. Those with any money in their accounts are required to purchase their own hygiene products, including soap, washcloths, shampoo, toothbrushes, toothpaste, etc. These items are not priced at a reduced rate, and “basic” hygiene needs can easily cost about $20 a month. Incarcerated people also purchase other essential items each month such as paper, lotion, underwear, cough drops, vitamins, contact solution, and instant coffee. They pay for products necessary for managing health issues, such as back braces, wraps for joints, extra pillows, shoe lifts, and eyeglasses. Monthly earnings can also be quickly depleted due to the substantial expense of phone calls and mail. One 30-minute phone call costs $2.70; three 30-minute phone calls per week would cost $32.40 per month. One 28-minute video visit costs $5.88. Ten envelopes with postage, one blue pen, and one pad of writing paper costs a total of $7.96.

Given these financial realities, even lower cost options for legal help, such as the Oregon State Bar Modest Means program, are still out of reach for most incarcerated persons. Similarly, as explained below, the option of licensed paralegals is not likely to ameliorate the access-to-justice problems that incarcerated people face.

Why the Current Paralegal Licensing Proposal is Unlikely to Improve Access to Legal Services for Most Incarcerated Persons

While the proposed Paralegal Licensing Program will expand access to available legal assistance, it is not likely to do so for the incarcerated population. First, while the program will increase the amount of lower-cost legal services for Oregonians, most incarcerated persons will remain unable to afford the services of a licensed paralegal. Presumably, licensed paralegals will offer their services at lower cost than most attorneys, but the financial barrier will still be insurmountable for most incarcerated persons. As discussed above, incarcerated Oregonians earn between $8 and $82 a month for their prison work, most of which is either automatically deducted or quickly depleted to pay for basic necessities or communication expenses. Without the financial assistance of outside friends or family, paying for the legal assistance of a licensed paralegal will be an impossibility.

Second, the traditional legal aid and nonprofit organizations that might hire licensed paralegals to expand their capacity do not offer services to incarcerated persons. As far as we are aware, WJP is the only program throughout the state of Oregon whose primary objective is providing civil legal representation to incarcerated clients. Other organizations may provide civil legal assistance to incarcerated clients from time to time, but it is not a committed approach.

Finally, the proposal has the potential to further disadvantage incarcerated persons in family law cases. When one parent is incarcerated, there is a clear power imbalance between that individual and the non-incarcerated parent. The non-incarcerated parent has access to legal assistance and to the family courts in a way that is simply unavailable to the incarcerated parent. This power imbalance is a particular problem when the incarcerated parent has been a victim of domestic abuse. Abusive ex-partners on the outside will often use the legal system as a means to manipulate or exercise control over the incarcerated parent, especially since the abuser has greater access to legal help by virtue of not being incarcerated.

At present, it is very common in family law cases involving an incarcerated parent that both parties are self-represented. However, the Paralegal Licensing Program makes it more likely that the non-incarcerated parent will be able to obtain legal assistance, while the incarcerated parent will still be left with no choice but to represent themselves. This means that the proposal will unintentionally exacerbate the power imbalance in these cases, and create greater potential for domestic abusers to use the legal system to their benefit. Incarcerated parents can expect worse outcomes in their family court cases if the non-incarcerated parent has the assistance of a licensed paralegal.

Character and Fitness Standards Can Disproportionately Impact Marginalized Communities and Discourage Applications from Those with Criminal Histories

Finally, we would like to express our concern regarding how the proposed standards for assessing an applicant’s character and fitness will impact those with criminal histories. Currently, the proposal recommends that “LPs meet the same character and fitness requirements that currently apply to lawyers” (Recommendation # 3(2)). The proposal further describes the standard for “Potentially Ineligible Individuals or Conduct” (Recommendation #8), “Factors Considered for Present Character” (Recommendation # 9), and “Rehabilitation/Character Reformation” (Recommendation # 10). “Existing procedures for evaluating character and fitness of applicants for a lawyer license would be used to evaluate the character and fitness of applicants for the paraprofessional license.” (Organizational Structure, Pg. 28).

Unreasonable character and fitness standards further exacerbate the problem of improving access to legal services for incarcerated persons. Those with criminal convictions may wish to apply for the licensed paralegal program after completion of their sentence, and may be far more willing to provide low-cost or free legal services to those people who are currently incarcerated. Unfortunately, the character and fitness requirement will likely discourage persons with criminal histories from applying, and will likely exclude many applicants who do apply.

Character and fitness considerations should be narrowly tailored to avoid over-emphasizing an individual’s prior criminal history, particularly given what we know about how marginalized communities and communities of color are disproportionately impacted by the criminal legal system. Context is important when reviewing someone’s criminal history—and often the criminal conviction itself fails to accurately represent the seriousness of the person’s conduct. Facts as articulated in a police report can be incomplete or inaccurate, but are frequently assumed to be a full and complete accounting of the individual’s criminal behavior. Character and fitness considerations should balance and weigh the facts contained in law enforcement accounts with any competing information provided by the applicant.

It is also important to consider that persons from marginalized communities are afforded substantially less opportunities to demonstrate reform and rehabilitation. For someone with abundant financial resources, it may be much easier to pay restitution and court fines, access drug treatment or self-improvement programs, or have the available free time to participate in community service. It is extremely harmful to assume that an individual has not demonstrated reform merely because that person could not afford to pay restitution, or because they have struggled to access programming due to limited financial circumstances. Ultimately, it is important that we not hold those with a criminal history to an idealized or biased standard of what it means to be “rehabilitated.”

For these reasons, it is critical that the persons empowered to make character and fitness decisions regarding the licensing of paralegals have an intimate knowledge of the criminal legal system and the inequities contained within it. The decision-makers in character and fitness determinations should include those who have worked as criminal defense attorneys, legal aid practitioners, or others in the legal community that understand the barriers facing those from marginalized communities and the disproportionate impact of our criminal legal system on communities of color. It is additionally important that the character and fitness process be transparent, so that applicants are aware of the basis behind the decisions to approve or reject someone’s application. Promoting transparency in this process will help ensure fairer and more just outcomes, and will encourage applications from those who might otherwise be discouraged from applying.

Recommendations

We respectfully request that the Oregon State Bar consider the information provided in this letter as it works to finalize the Paralegal Licensing Proposal to be submitted to the Oregon Supreme Court. We further encourage the Oregon State Bar to support and advocate for incarcerated individuals to have greater access to legal assistance on civil legal matters outside of the Paralegal Licensing Program.

Below are a list of recommendations that the Oregon State Bar could explore further for the purpose of modifying the proposal to better serve incarcerated persons. This list is not exhaustive, and we encourage you to think broadly about any and all recommendations that would improve access to legal services for incarcerated persons. For example:

- Create financial incentives for licensed paralegals and attorneys to provide pro bono legal assistance to incarcerated clients, such as reduced annual dues or reduced CLE registration fees;

- Establish an aspirational pro bono standard for licensed paralegals that mirrors the aspirational pro bono standard for licensed attorneys. As is the case for licensed attorneys in Oregon,⁶ permit qualified pro bono hours to be converted to MCLE credit requirements for renewal of licensed paralegal endorsements. Consider changes to the aspirational pro bono standard that encourages licensed paralegals and attorneys to work with incarcerated clients;

⁶ See MCLE Rule 5.11(b) and Regulation 5.300(b)
• Support and encourage broader advocacy for incarcerated persons to have greater access to legal assistance in civil legal cases (such as state funding for legal aid services offered in jails and prisons);

• Consider targeted changes to the character and fitness standards for licensed paralegals that would expand the ability of formerly incarcerated persons or persons with criminal convictions to successfully apply to become licensed paralegals;

• Provide CLE Access to currently incarcerated Oregonians who desire to apply for the licensed paralegal program upon release or during their term of incarceration.

Conclusion

Thank you for the opportunity to express our support for the Oregon State Bar’s Paralegal Licensing Proposal. Once again, we urge the Oregon State Bar to consider incarcerated Oregonians when determining how to best implement this proposal. We believe that increasing access to available legal assistance for those in prison comports with the overarching goals of the proposal—to reduce the access-to-justice gap and ensure fairness and just outcomes for all Oregonians in our courts.

Sincerely,

Alexander Coven

<td>Licensing paralegals is a good step and will improve access to justice. The percentage of persons appearing as self represented parties is, however, regularly misstated. A great percentage of cases in which one or more parties are self represented are cases in which there is never an appearance in a courtroom. These are mostly stipulated matters, and at other times matters arising from default. This misstatement occurs with regards to all types of cases, but is especially true with respect to family law cases.</td>

<td>with the population increasing this also brings lots of family problems whether its physical or mental abuse we see it becoming more of a problem in our community. on a daily basis we see people who are scared to file anything with the court because the other party (or friends/relatives of the other party) threaten them or harass them. threats like calling INS or threats to hurt them, threats to get them fired form a job. also at times we see people file a restraining order then the respondent request a hearing on the order the petitioner is to scared to prepare correctly for the hearing and at times the orders get dismissed due to lack of preparation and lack of legal assistance. There is lots of children being abused and/or neglected because of the lack of free or affordable legal resources at times the parent allows it to continue thinking they can not do anything about it due to the repercussions of the other party. there is also a high number of people needing assistance with third party custody, example of this could be an aunt/uncle or grandparent trying to get custody or trying to intervene into a case maybe because both the biological parents are in bad situations the court does not provide assistance with this. These types of situations can be very crucial especially now a days with mental health being up at an alarming rate the same with the drug use.</td>

<td>With the development of family law policy and practices at OJD that focuses on providing access to justice in family law matters to self represented litigants the courts have been flooded with litigants who, because they do not seek legal advice prior to filing, no longer have a “gatekeeper” regarding legally sound claims and complete and accurate legal filings. Any support that can be made available to these folks, will presumably ease the burdens on the courts and make court processes more efficient because information is available at a reasonable cost. I do not believe that paralegals should be permitted to participate in court proceedings on behalf of clients.</td>

Q4 Would you be interested in becoming a licensed paralegal if it meant you would be able to provide additional services that you couldn’t today, or if it meant you could provide limited services without being employed by an attorney?

<td>I think that certification of paralegals is a natural step in progression. Nurses are certified and serve under doctors, why not allow paralegals to do the same instead of hamstring their abilities. This gives them more options for careers and in turn seen as a more of a professional career. I think that the training I have received in school has geared me towards being able to practice some limited law. Of course, paralegals should absolutely be required to pass a bar exam to get this certification, but I think they can and would pass.</td>

<td>My biggest factor in wanting paralegals to be able to practice in some regard is to give more people access to law help when they need it. I am an intern for a law firm and I see how expensive the billing is for people who seek help from lawyers. I know that not everyone can afford such a cost and have even read emails between the lawyers and clients closing services due to costs. This is where paralegals could come in and help those who seek some help but don't have the means for a high end lawyer. Legislation has made laws to have law be more accessible to the public with how it is written. Why not make the same for the actual practice. Ultimately, this is a free market, let the people decide where their money goes.</td>

currently have no experience or training in these fields, and have no plans to obtain them in the near future.

12 Because I truly believe that most Paralegals are professionals, well educated in certain public services and have strong passions to relate with public issues as listed.

13 I am not interested in those specific areas of law

14 I am a corporate/real estate paralegal so this doesn’t exactly apply to me, but if the licensing expanded, I would be interested.

15 My position would not benefit from this; however, I would fully support anyone else doing so. I think it's a great idea

16 This would financially benefit the clients who can’t afford attorney prices for simple work and I would love to help

17 Not at this time

18 If I was interested in family law, then licensure would be something I would want if I could provide limited services to clients on my own.

19 I work for an elder law practice and the additional services described would not fit in with my current employment.

20 Interested in additional services while being employed by an attorney

21 I am interested but likely would not become a licensed paralegal under the proposed framework, I have nearly 5 years of family law experience but don't currently work as a family law paralegal, so I do not believe I would qualify with enough recent experience by the time this was adopted (if it is).

22 I would love to be able to better assist clients.

23 Currently I am three years away from retiring and I work for the appellate courts. My understanding from listening to discussions at the Supreme Court public meetings is the licensing would be in limited practice areas. In that case my answer is no. If I could be licensed to help people fill out appellate court forms, I would say yes.

24 I currently work in litigation for local government. I used to work in family law and miss it. I would love to be able to have my own business doing what I love.

25 The Washington state had a similar program and they discontinued it after only a few years.

26 Not if those additional services are limited to family and landlord-tenant law.

27 But not if it meant I had to go back to school when I am already a paralegal even though uncertified.

28 No one should provide services without supervision of an attorney.

29 Yes, but only if doing did not cause an extra financial burden. I am only making $20/hr as a paralegal working for an attorney and I know that those who do “freelance” services make much less and have to try harder to get clients. It's not an appealing option.

30 My position wouldn't allow me to perform expanded services and would not be applicable in my current field.

I work with them successfully in a limited capacity. I don't see how it would successfully be put into practice.

26. Bar Complaint PLF Claim 11/8/2021 1:40 PM

27. Educational costs, income potential 11/8/2021 1:23 PM

28. I think that this type of licensing really tows a very thin line between providing services that paralegals are competent to provide and UPL. I personally, would not be comfortable walking that line. 11/8/2021 1:23 PM

29. Close to retirement. Probably interested if earlier in my career. 11/8/2021 12:57 PM

30. Being able to provide services to those who cannot afford an attorney, collaborating with attorneys, CLE's that are only provided to attorneys 11/8/2021 12:57 PM

31. Being able to provide lower cost services to those you need assistance but can't afford an attorney 11/8/2021 12:46 PM

32. Greater Employment opportunities as well as providing greater access of services to those in need 11/8/2021 12:45 PM

33. Possibly making extra income with my profession on the side of a current employment. Offering a service for a more affordable option to folks that are lower waged. 11/8/2021 12:39 PM

34. I am currently in law school, so this kind of license would be moot for me. If I were not in law school or planning to pursue a law degree, I would consider becoming a licensed paralegal. 11/8/2021 12:38 PM

35. Speed of implementation; cost of additional studies 11/8/2021 12:38 PM

36. Training, insurance coverage, mentorship, cost of services. 11/8/2021 12:38 PM

37. I would need to know what services they are referring to. Attorney are constantly studying the laws. I would not feel comfortable practicing law, even if limited. 11/8/2021 12:37 PM

38. Liability, potential inability to explain how something works without running into UPL territory. 11/8/2021 12:36 PM

39. Prerequisite knowledge & costs 11/8/2021 12:34 PM

40. I would have gone to law school if I felt the need to be licensed as a paralegal. 11/8/2021 12:34 PM

41. More flexibility in job options 11/7/2021 2:09 AM

42. I am unsure as I'm worried that licensing would then become a requirement by most employers. I appreciate the room for additional growth and further credentials in the paralegal field that licensing would allow. Limiting the scope to family/ landlord tenant law seems like an arbitrary limitation but would make it less likely that employers would require every paralegal to be licensed. However the fact that it would allow us to do our jobs better and on a larger, more diverse scale, opens a lot of opportunities. 11/5/2021 6:02 PM

43. More responsibility, more substantive work, more lucrative, more autonomy 11/5/2021 6:31 AM

44. Proper training and education are important to me. I would want to feel prepared and ensure resources are available. The cost is important, as well. 11/3/2021 11:53 PM

45. Working in a non profit law firm, I see the tremendous need for fairly straight forward, competent, and affordable legal services. Generally these matters involve people's personals lives and basic living needs. There's so many Limited Scope matters I've seen hired on where either a paralegal could complete most the work for a much cheaper rate, or that the potential client declined legal assistance due to costs. Peoples inability to pay for our already much cheaper, sliding scale legal fees is the #1 reason they decline our service. There's an enormous gap to fair and equal justice that will require a remedy of solutions to meet all if Oregon's legal needs. 11/3/2021 10:22 PM

46. I think about the help that I could offer people who would not be able to afford an attorney. Unfortunately, Law school is too expensive, and this would be an affordable option. 11/3/2021 8:51 AM

72 I have paralegal training, but work for the US Courts so at this point I wouldn't want to get the license. 10/28/2021 8:28 PM

73 Cost of license, any additional schooling needed, and limitations of license. 10/28/2021 8:08 PM

74 I currently work in criminal law under attorneys and I’m satisfied with the document management and analysis work that I do. Thus, I wouldn’t need licensure under these circumstances. 10/28/2021 7:54 PM

75 Attorneys are expensive, especially during a pandemic, not everyone has access to funds to pay for an attorney to complete something a paralegal can do just as easily for a smaller price. 10/28/2021 7:45 PM

76 Whether the skills are useful to me or my employer. 10/28/2021 6:57 PM

82 opportunities for career advancement, cost/hassle of getting licensed vs. perceived value of the license to employers 10/28/2021 5:45 PM

83 Being more of an asset to my organization. Ability to grow professional as a paralegal 10/28/2021 5:25 PM

84 The cost and time and effort required of becoming a licensed paralegal. I would like to be able to provide pro bono assistance to friends and family, if it were legal for me to do so, and I know I am qualified to provide that assistance but legally cannot, which disadvantages people who cannot afford an attorney. However, I would not spend substantial amounts of money or pay for liability insurance on an ongoing basis to help 1-2 people a year for free. If there were a mechanism for me to volunteer through an existing organization, like St. Andrew Legal Clinic, on a very occasional basis in addition to my regular full time job as a paralegal (no longer in family law) I would be interested in that, but I don't think that would be likely under the current proposed framework. 10/28/2021 4:54 PM

85 I cant afford law school but I would like to advocate for tenants more directly. 10/28/2021 4:50 PM

86 Fair compensation for the extra work involved. 10/28/2021 4:45 PM

87 sounds like practice areas would be limited. see answer to 2. 10/28/2021 4:25 PM

88 Broaden my professional abilities and services I can provide. Make me more competitive in the workforce. 10/28/2021 4:18 PM

89 I am an immigration law paralegal and I would love this opportunity. I have been helping in this field for 5 years. I am studying to apply for DOJ Accredited Representative status. My question is would paralegals be able to obtain dependency and special finding orders in Oregon State court in order to help minors apply for I-360 Special Immigrant Juvenile Status with USCIS. 10/28/2021 4:09 PM

90 What is the time and money expenditure to become licensed, and how effective could I be at running a business with only providing “limited” services - like how limited would it be? 10/28/2021 4:05 PM

91 lower-cost legal services for greater equity and justice in our state, the ability for paralegals to have a greater impact, that paralegals are highly capable, paralegals may be able to make a better income, however, length of program may be prohibitive, or a particular paralegal may not be interested in family or landlord/tenant law 10/28/2021 3:56 PM

92 I work in criminal defense, so those areas aren’t relevant to me. Also, I can’t currently picture a situation in which this sort of limited licensure would be of value to me professionally. 10/28/2021 3:53 PM

93 But not if it meant I had to go back to school when I am already a paralegal even though uncertified. 10/28/2021 3:49 PM

94 Most people don’t think like an attorney. If we allow non attorneys to start acting like attorneys, confusion will start by those seeking legal help. It opens the door to bad legal advise. 10/28/2021 3:48 PM
95 I already spent 20K in student loans to complete my 2 year paralegal degree in 2015 at PCC and I don't think I should have to pay additional fee's to obtain a license if I want to "freelance" and do side work when I already have a degree and have been working in the field for 5 years. Also, for those of us who spent good money on paralegal programs before the state started offering free community college should be able to get our balances waived or reduced. Knowing that If I had simply waited a a couple years to get my degree and it would have been free sucks because now I have student loans to pay back and am still not making significantly more than before I had a degree.

96 Neither of those types of law are my field of specialty; however, for paralegals who do have experience in those areas, I support the concept program.

97 Flexibility, money, the thought of working independently.

98 Practice area

99 Ethical rules and regulations.

100 Licensed Paralegals would be able to provide the necessary and quality legal services at a low cost for the clients. Licensed Paralegals would be able to reach those communities who are in most dire need of legal services and would be more accessible to Black and Brown communities, whom statisticly make up a large portion of the population in hospitals, jails/prisons, and Immigration related cases.

101 It's not required for my position and would not be applicable.

102 The funding and availability of the education to fulfill licensing requirements would be important to me. Also important to me would be the opportunity to provide low cost legal services to people who's access is limited by their finances.

103 Flexibility in work, opening up more opportunities for work, flexibility in helping clients

104 Autonomy of work and increasing availability of legal services for those that need it most and can't afford the price of an attorney.

Q10 What education or experience do you think a licensed paralegal should have before providing services to clients when not under the supervision of an attorney? (For example, additional education, mentorship, reporting requirements, CLE requirements, etc.)

<td>I believe a mentor would be very important at least for the first 3-5 years as a licensed paralegal, that they should have a paralegal degree and credentials (RP, CRP, etc.) have at least 5-7 years of experience as a paralegal, and have CLE and reporting requirements.</td>

<td>I believe that adequate direct subject matter experience is particularly important to safeguard the public and to avoid creating more problems for the court than it solves. I have worked as a family law paralegal for approximately 16 years. I began feeling really confident in my knowledge after 2-3 years. However, my level of experience is likely an outlier. Absent extensive prior experience, I believe that a mentor relationship (or perhaps an apprenticeship) with an attorney would go a long way toward preparing a newer paralegal once they have learned basic legal concepts in school. I also think that licensed paralegals should be subject to the same CLE and reporting requirements as attorneys.</td>

98 Paralegal education from an ABA certified school or a certain number of years of experience as a paralegal in a particular area of law. CLE requirements.

100 Some additional/specific education; I think CLE’s would be beneficial. I work with Judges and they have CLE’s - so I think it would be a good idea.

101 I think my answer for the previous question (about wanting a license or not) may have changed if I had more experience in the field. I think you should be required to complete 2-3 years in the field to get licensed.

102 I think a licensed paralegal should have reporting requirements and CLE requirements.

103 mentorship, reporting requirements, previous work experience

104 CLE requirements and specific course for the area of law prior to providing services

105 Annual CLE requirements

106 Education or work experience in the legal area. Degree in paralegal studies and/or current student towards becoming an attorney. Continued training

107 An AA or higher, CLE requirements, mentorship, reporting requirements.

108 Not education, but minimum 1 year experience in family law as a paralegal (not administrative worker).

109 12 credits of coursework and 1 year attorney supervision

110 Mentor ship, continuing CLE requirements

111 Reporting requirements- might be a good idea but it would depend how it was implemented. Mentorship and CLE requirements similar to (but less extensive than) the CLE requirements for attorneys. Some limited PLF option(s) seem necessary as well, but the cost could be prohibitive for many non-attorneys who otherwise would be assets to the community. Please put some thought into this issue.

112 I think a period of mentorship, 1-2 years, working in family law or landlord/tenant law would be most effective in training for independent practice.

113 CLE and reporting requirements. There should be a paraprofessional exam as well.

114 Internship (paid) or better yet something equivalent to a resident program doctors have for 1 year

115 Minimum BA Degree; Mentorship; CLE requirements. Reporting reporting might be needed maybe for the first 6 months to one year.

116 Minimum 5 years of supervised experience doing exactly what you’d do unsupervised and additional education yearly.

117 Additional education and CLE requirements.

118 All of the above

119 - Trauma informed practices - Most common family law procedures & forms - Confidentiality and document management

120 Mentorship and work experience

121 Interactive classes and testing.

122 Mentorship, CLE

123 Associates and/or working experience.

124 I believe a licensed paralegal should have additional education and CLE requirements.

125 Bachelor's degree and 2 years of experience, Associates and 4 years of experience, or 7+ years of experience without any degree

126 Associates Degree in relevant field; Ongoing CLEs
127 Additional education, mentorship, reporting, malpractice insurance, and CLE.
10/28/2021 5:39 PM

128 Additional education
10/28/2021 5:38 PM

129 mentorship, some reporting requirements, minimal additional education, and/or training
10/28/2021 5:32 PM

130 Ability to take courses on top of their already obtained associates degree, mentorship would be a good idea, I think CLE’s should be required absolutely.
10/28/2021 5:29 PM

131 mentorship, CLE requirements
10/28/2021 5:21 PM

132 Paralegal degree and a certain amount of hours training under a supervising attorney.
10/28/2021 5:14 PM

133 Highly contextual. One of the problems with most licensing programs is they don't take into account lived experience and additional work experience. They often require a lot of $ upfront for coursework covering material one already knows. It is hard to figure out how to factor in other kinds of experience but doesn't mean we shouldn't try. I think many people who have worked in social work, for instance, could quickly become better at this area of the law, if not out of the gate better, than someone who had less work and lived experience but had a law degree. Seems to me you learn more by doing and living, then you do by schooling.... That said, the most crucial thing to me is ongoing hands-on practice combined with CLE/yearly training, i.e., must be practicing that area of law within a certain timeframe else recertify and do some continuing education, costs should be based on expected earnings.
10/28/2021 5:02 PM

134 Paralegal degree and 2 years experience in family law within the last 10 years OR 5 years of paralegal experience with at least 2 years in family law within the last 10 years
10/28/2021 4:57 PM

135 CLE requirements at minimum
10/28/2021 4:56 PM

136 It's important that they know the law like an attorney. They can't guess because it could jeopardize a future legal case. Needs additional education more than CLE requirements.
10/28/2021 4:53 PM

137 Additional education is really important. I think mentorship is a great idea, if that means one paraprofessional mentoring another.
10/28/2021 4:52 PM

138 I think they should have paralegal certificate, where from a college or organization. They should have to pass a knowledge based exam in their practice area. And CLE should be required. Ethics and in their practice area. I have a certificate for NFPA an 8 hours CLE is required every two years

139 See the now-sunset Washington LLLT requirements.
10/28/2021 4:46 PM

140 The person should have their paralegal certificate from an accredited program like Portland Community College. Experience is also very, they should have at least 3 years experience working as a paralegal.
10/28/2021 4:31 PM

141 I agree with all the examples listed. However, I would hope that additional education should not be charged to the paralegal as a kinda helping hand or stepping stone to obtaining it. Mentorships with private and public orgs to guide the paralegal with real world field experience or simply to provide CLEs training and tutorials for paralegals. Reporting requirements are crucial but the reporting process shouldn't too technical, cumbersome, or difficult for the paralegal.
10/28/2021 4:30 PM

142 Definitely CLE requirements and additional education.
10/28/2021 4:24 PM

143 CLE requirements.
10/28/2021 4:22 PM

144 All of those mentioned
10/28/2021 4:20 PM

145 Graduate the Paralegal program. Mentorship for at least 1 year.
10/28/2021 4:17 PM

146 I think a licensed paralegal should have at least a bachelors (in anything) and a graduate level class in the area for licensure (family law). Alternatively (or in addition), maybe a pathway with a certain timeframe of mentor/sponsorship by an attorney. Periodic CLE requirements for renewal.
10/28/2021 4:09 PM

147 A paralegal certificate, a bachelor's degree - or equivalent on-the-job training over a 3 year period. Additionally, supervised practice in the area of law for the license for an additional year or 2. Perhaps testing in the field. Yes to CLE, less than a bar-licensed attorney.
10/28/2021 4:02 PM

148 At least 2 years in an ABA approved paralegal program or 2 years of mentorship/internship
10/28/2021 4:01 PM
under an attorney as well as having to pass a test.

149 CLE requirements similar to what attorneys have to go through + accreditation from a certified paralegal program

150 1. Bachelor's degree in a legal field and some experience on a legal office. 2. Have a designated attorney that they can reach out to if they ever needed advice. 3. Definitely continuing education requirements, just not sure what exactly that should look like.

151 I think all of those should be required.

152 Additional education/certification and mentorship

153 I don't think any paralegal should be providing services we're not supervised by an attorney. I do also believe that paralegals should have to participate in continuing education.

154 CLE Requirements Certification Requirements

155 Additional education, mentorship, CLE requirements, reporting requirements, 5 yrs professional experience in legal field, shadowing court staff

156 Additional education and reporting requirements sound like they should be required, and mentorship and CLE requirements sound reasonable too.

157 Definitely CLE requirements and a mini bar exam/licensing test for the license: family law or landlord/tenant.

158 CLE Requirements

159 Additional education, experience, and CLE requirements

160 Experience working in the area for a law firm, being supervised by an attorney. For years. 5+

161 mentorship and CLE

162 Definitely the Paralegal Program and an exam afterwards

163 An ABA certified paralegal degree or certificate, yearly continuing education hours/classes, additional licensing requirements, licensing exam

164 At least two years of experience and an associates degree or certificate

165 Mentorship, CLE requirements, Critical Race Theory

166 Report to a governing body Specific consequences for working outside of legal capacity Yearly CLE requirements

167 Mentorship and additional ongoing education with regular recertification

168 A class devoted to the specifics of the licensed field would be useful. A non-onerous experience requirement, such as one year working under attorney supervision, could regulate the licensing.

169 Completion of approved Paralegal Curriculum from an accredited organization or school. State Test & Certification (Think Security Guards & DPSST)

170 Mentorship, reporting requirements, CLE's.

171 Formal legal education of some kind, as well as supervised internship/practicum in the subject area of practice.

172 Paralegal certificate, mentorship and CLEs

173 6 months to a year of legal education from a program licensed by the bar, with CLE requirements.

174 Mentorship. Additional education except I feel that what I learned in the paralegal program was nothing even close to what I needed to know.

175 I'm open to anything.

176 Mentorship, reporting requirements, CLE's

43 Making clear distinctions between certified paralegals/registered paralegals/licensed paralegals/or any other variation. Maybe a page on OSB website to explain the differences. 10/30/2021 3:35 PM

44 Standard background check 10/30/2021 1:35 PM

45 The court needs to recognize how difficult life gets for poor and working class people who can't afford good legal help. Many "big" problems could be stopped early if affordable legal help would be available early in a disagreement. 10/30/2021 1:28 PM

46 I think it's an excellent idea to make the legal system more accessible. I would suggest the business fees involved be lower than fees for attorneys since the paralegal, even though licensed, will not charge as much as an attorney. If this is going to be an option, please don't price paralegals out of the profession by making the startup costs so high they can't get started or keep their business running. 10/30/2021 11:41 AM

47 Listen to community members and individuals (pros and cons) on what licensed paralegals can do. 10/29/2021 10:35 PM

48 This may be a very good advancement in the legal field. Paralegals (for the most part) are thorough and diligent by nature and training in order to best assist their attorneys. 10/29/2021 4:19 PM

49 I think it's a good idea for providing affordable legal services to people who cannot afford the cost of an attorney. 10/29/2021 3:38 PM

50 Minimizing legal cost in family matters and encouraging public or citizens to utilize paralegal services first to resolve certain matters. 10/29/2021 12:24 PM

51 I currently work at a non-profit. The landlord/tenant issues should be highest priority as well as family law due to the effects on low income families during COVID. 10/29/2021 9:48 AM

52 Creating a paraprofessional program is needed to ensure there are legal providers available to meet a growing need. It will provide a lower-cost alternative, and true paralegals are doing much of the same work as attorneys. However, it seems like there could be a lot of variability in the standard of work provided (paralegals enter the field through many different paths, and some are more skilled and knowledgeable than others), so it's important to have training or certification that to ensure that a paraprofessional is ready to provide services. It would also be helpful to have a mentor program, and perhaps an assigned attorney who can answer questions or talk through a complex legal issue, if the need arises. 10/29/2021 9:19 AM

53 I think only experienced paralegals should be licensed (or the additional education so through they might as well go to law school.) 10/29/2021 8:41 AM

54 Based on the outcome of Washington's LLLT program, the success of Oregon's program may hinge on whether it is well communicated to the public and/or it's acceptance by attorneys. 10/29/2021 8:04 AM

55 A framework for how much a licensed paralegal would charge for services. 10/29/2021 7:26 AM

56 Consider the areas of estate planning and probate too. 10/28/2021 10:28 PM

57 Follow Washington 10/28/2021 10:23 PM

58 I think that this program could be successful, but, it may be a few years before it's truly successful. As it's completely new, folk may be hesitant at first to take the financial risk. Also, I think it would be a good idea to open this idea to social workers and other fields similar to a paralegal to see if there would be interest. I would also like to see an immigration services option for document preparation as well. 10/28/2021 9:19 PM

59 The financial benefit to the public. It really would benefit the community. 10/28/2021 9:10 PM

60 The benefit to Oregonians to have a lower cost alternative and give access to more individuals. 10/28/2021 8:51 PM

61 The program needs to balance educational requirements against the expected pay for licensed paralegals. If the requirements are too high, they will deter paralegals from seeking licensure because there won't be the financial incentive. 10/28/2021 8:44 PM

62 Who is going to fund the licensing? 10/28/2021 8:34 PM

63 Look at other states where independent licensed paralegals have been successful. 10/28/2021 8:02 PM

64 I think of all the legal drafting I've done over the past four years, and at least 50% (if not more) of it has just been changing names around on templates. Attorneys are always overwhelmed with work (at least in the offices I’ve worked in). I think having positions to allow attorneys to clear up some of their caseloads would be helpful to everyone.

70 How paralegals are going to remain compliant with CLEs 10/28/2021 5:56 PM

71 I think the court is well aware of how unaffordable legal services currently are for middle and lower income persons - volunteer pro bono service are an inadequate and inappropriate/inefficient solution 10/28/2021 5:48 PM

72 no 10/28/2021 5:32 PM

73 I think this may help with fee costs for individuals seeking advice for not so complicated matters 10/28/2021 5:29 PM

74 Making sure that the program would be accessible and equitable. 10/28/2021 5:14 PM

75 I am sure there is. I’d have to think longer on this and no more about the details of the proposal before the court before I could answer this question. 10/28/2021 5:02 PM

76 I think it should consider whether people would seek licensing to provide pro bono assistance and possibly have some easier mechanisms to allow people to do that, especially if it was part of some kind of legal clinic. The court admittedly has difficult decisions to balance ensuring competency and protection of the public against promoting access to justice. If there are significant costs or barriers to licensing, it is less likely that people will seek licensing to provide pro bono services, which will reduce the effectiveness of the program. 10/28/2021 4:57 PM

77 This would provide many more people with access to legal help they need. (but you probably know this already)) 10/28/2021 4:56 PM

78 I think looking into the paralegals background. I believe the job carries a lot of weight and responsibility. There should be extra testing on the subjects applied for. 10/28/2021 4:53 PM

79 Try to make it as accessible of a program as possible. I think there is a lot people interested in getting licensed. 10/28/2021 4:52 PM

80 I know that the court has looked at other states that license paralegals. I think that to find out from them what works and what doesn't is important. 10/28/2021 4:49 PM

81 I would like an assurance that they will not abruptly end the program like they did in Washington. 10/28/2021 4:46 PM

82 Plenty of attorneys are subsided by their employers with access to LexisNexis, various programs, and various trainings. It would be beneficial to the young paralegal to have equal access to these resources as well. 10/28/2021 4:30 PM

83 My definition of a licensed paralegal is someone who either has a paralegal degree, a paralegal certificate plus some experience, or enough experience to equate a degree. 10/28/2021 4:24 PM

84 I think the PLF should also be involved similarly as with attorneys. Mandatory dues/malpractice insurance and then support from the PLF like attorneys have. 10/28/2021 4:09 PM

85 Making 'more' possible in this way for clients and paralegals would be a boost to all concerned in Oregon! Thank you. 10/28/2021 4:02 PM

86 I worked hard to become a paralegal. I took out student loans, completed internships and spend hundreds of hours in person in the classroom (because there were no ABA approved online classes for paralegal certification in Oregon in 2015). If you let just anybody become a "licensed paralegal" it is not fair to the rest of us who had to put in the hard work and hours just to graduate and only make $20/hr. Paralegals in Oregon do not make as much as they do in other parts of the country and paralegal programs should not be able to advertise that you can make 60-80K per year as a paralegal when that is not true for our job market. I went from making $16/hr in customer service to $20/hr as a paralegal and now I have 20K in student loans. I feel like I got tricked. Other than meeting with the client, I do 90% of the attorneys work and they simply review it and sign their name on it. Not only should we be getting paid more but we should be recognized for our hard work. Allowing anyone to obtain a license to do freelance work is a disservice to the legal community and to those who turn to freelance paralegals who have not been properly educated and are more likely to get bad legal advice. Also people who offer freelance services on Craiglist etc should have to educate their customers about UPL and provide a link on how to file a complaint for UPL if they obtain bad service.

87 The court should really sit back and think about how easy miss information gets spread. If you have non-attorneys performing legal tasks it opens the door to miss information, misunderstanding of what a paralegal is and does, potential for paralegals practicing law. If a nurse wanted to be a doctor they would be a doctor. Same here. 10/28/2021 3:50 PM

88 Way to do a conflict check 10/28/2021 3:47 PM

89 I hope the Bar continues to move forward with this, in the interest of providing greater access to justice. 10/28/2021 3:46 PM

90 I just think this is great that Oregon is considering licensing like Washington did. It’s too bad it is only for family law and landlord/tenant law, but I guess if you get too specialized that is where an attorney comes in. Hopefully, it will expand to other areas of law. But all in all a great start to help people who can’t afford an attorney. 10/28/2021 3:45 PM

91 Limited license legal technicians could help fill the access gap due to legal services that many people experience due to the price of services. In order for the program to be successful, it will need continued funding and support. 10/28/2021 3:41 PM

92 Outside of large population centers (Portland Metro, Salem, Eugene) there is a population of citizens that desperately need legal services and can’t afford the rates of a remote attorney. 10/28/2021 3:35 PM

93 No 10/28/2021 3:34 PM

94 Please make this program affordable. 10/28/2021 3:33 PM

95 This would greatly improve people’s ability to access representation, particularly low income and underserved communities. 10/28/2021 3:33 PM

1.0 Statement of Regulatory Authority

The Rules for Licensing Paralegals in Oregon are Rules of the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon. The MPRE will be conducted at the times, places and in the manner prescribed by the NCBE or its duly authorized representatives. Accommodation requests for the MPRE shall be directed to the NCBE, and any decisions related to such requests are made exclusively by the NCBE without input from the Committee, OSB or Court.

(2) Subject to the limitations stated in RLP 6.2(c)(1) above, an Applicant may take the MPRE at any location where it is given, and at any time offered by the NCBE. An Applicant may take the MPRE as many times as is necessary to pass.

(3) Applicants attempting to establish the requisite knowledge through the MPRE must achieve a Passing Score within 36 months prior to applying for a Paralegal License with the OSB]

6.3 Prerequisites for Examination; Exam Cycles;

Every Applicant for a Paralegal License is required to pass the paralegal entry examination (“Entry Exam”) described in RLP 6.4 below.

(a) No Applicant may sit for the Entry Exam unless and until they establish that they have the requisite knowledge of the Rules of Professional Conduct for Licensed Paralegals in Oregon pursuant to RLP 6.2 above.

(b) No Applicant may sit for the Entry Exam unless or until the OSB or Committee has determined that the Applicant meets all requirements for a Paralegal License with the only exception being that the Applicant’s Character and Fitness will not be fully assessed until they pass the Entry Exam.

(c) Within a reasonable time after determining that an Applicant qualifies to sit for the Entry Exam, the Admissions Manager shall provide written notice to the qualified Applicant that they are eligible to sit for the Entry Exam within the six months following the date of the notice (“Entry Exam Notice”). The Entry Exam Notice shall be sent through email or any other reasonable electronic means provided by the OSB.

6.4 Time, Place, Form and Manner of Entry Exam

The Entry Exam must test the Applicant’s learning, ability to retain and apply the rules and laws related to the scope of practice for, and the referral obligations applicable to, Licensed Paralegals in the State of Oregon. Without limiting the foregoing, the OSB may test Applicants on other subjects relevant to being a Licensed Paralegal or the Endorsement being sought by the Applicant. If such other subjects will be included in the examination the OSB must provide notice to the Applicant taking the examination pursuant to RLP 6.6 below.

(a) The OSB shall develop and maintain the questions that will make up the Entry Exam. The OSB may hire, retain or appoint any third-party to assist with the creation or development of the questions and formats that make up the Entry Exam, including the Committee, faculty of any paralegal program at any of Oregon’s higher education institutions, and third-party vendors in the business of producing professional licensing examinations. No party shall be permitted to develop or create any Entry Exam question or exam format unless and until the party has agreed in writing that they will not disclose any information used to develop the question or format, nor the content of any question or format, and the OSB shall own the intellectual property rights to any such Entry Exam formats or questions.

(b) The Entry Exam may be offered multiple times throughout each calendar year, and each Entry Exam shall take place at a time, place and location established by the OSB. The OSB may limit the number of Entry Exams per year in order to test as many Applicants as possible for any given Entry Exam, but must offer at least two Entry Exams per calendar year. In the OSB’s discretion, Entry Exams may be administered on an individual or group basis.

(1) The OSB must take all reasonable efforts to develop a sufficient number of questions and formats to ensure that any Applicant who takes multiple attempts to pass the examination in any calendar year does not take the same exam twice in the same calendar year.

(2) Each Entry Exam shall take place within a single day, and may not exceed three hours in length, unless extended by testing accommodations provided pursuant to RLP 6.5 below.

(c) If technology is sufficient to protect the intellectual property rights of the OSB and ensure that there is no significant reduction in the ability of the OSB or its proctors to observe possible cheating on an examination, the Entry Exam may be taken remotely using an Applicant’s own computer or laptop equipment in an environment of Applicant’s choosing, subject to exam procedures, exam conduct rules and environment restrictions established by the OSB.
6.5 Testing Accommodations for Entry Exam. Assessed by Admissions Manager. Appeal to Committee.

(a) Definitions. For the purpose of this rule:

(1) The term “disability” means a disability as the term is defined under the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 USC § 12101 et seq.) (ADA), amendments to the act, applicable regulations and case law.

(c) Consistent with the requirements of the ADA, the Admissions Manager shall evaluate all timely and complete accommodation requests and determine the extent, if any, to which they will be granted. In fashioning an accommodation, the Admissions Manager shall strive for an accommodation that is reasonable, not unduly burdensome, consistent with the nature and purpose of the examination and which does not fundamentally alter the nature of the examination as necessitated by the Applicant’s disability.

(d) Applicants must file timely and complete accommodation requests using the forms prescribed by the Committee. The filing deadlines for requests shall be two months following the date Entry Exam Notice. Incomplete or untimely requests will be rejected except where: (a) disability occurs after the application filing deadline; or (b) the accommodation request does not cause an undue hardship on the Committee or the OSB.

Request for this accommodation must be submitted timely using the procedures and forms prescribed by the OSB for specific testing accommodations. Applicants must submit medical documentation from a qualified medical provider supporting the request for accommodations, including verification that the Applicant is breastfeeding and the child’s date of birth.

(g) The Admissions Manager shall notify the Applicant of any decision shortly after reaching a decision on the Applicant’s accommodation request (“Accommodation Notice”). The Accommodation Notice shall be sent via email to the Applicant’s email address stated in the Applicant’s Application, or through such other reasonable electronic means authorized by the OSB.

(h) Any accommodation decision reached by the Admissions Manager that provides less than, or alternative to, those requested by the Applicant, may be appealed by the Applicant. The appeal must be requested in writing within two weeks of the date of the Accommodation Notice (“Appeal Notice”). The Appeal Notice must be addressed to the Committee and sent to the Admissions Department of the OSB. The Appeal Notice must be submitted via email to the Admissions Department of the OSB, or such other reasonable electronic means provided by the OSB. If the Applicant wishes to have additional supporting documentation considered on the appeal, then the Applicant must include the additional documentation with the Appeal Notice.

(i) Upon Receipt of an Appeal Notice, the Admissions Manager shall forward to the Committee the Appeal Notice. The Admissions Manager shall also submit with the Appeal Notice, all documentation and communications related to the Applicant’s accommodation request and the Admissions Manager’s decision relevant to the appeal. When forwarding the Appeal Notice and related materials to the Committee, the Admissions Manager shall include a written statement identifying the basis for the Admissions Manager’s appealed decision, and identify the end date of the Exam Cycle for which the accommodation is sought.

(j) The Committee shall review any accommodation appeal de novo during the next regularly scheduled judicial proceeding of the Committee following the submissions of the Admissions Manager. The accommodation decision reached by the Committee shall be final, and no additional appeals or requests for reconsideration shall be considered related to the Applicant’s accommodation requests for the relevant Exam Cycle. In making a decision on an accommodation appeal, the Committee shall comply with the terms of this RLP 5.2, and without limitation, consider at least the following information:

(1) The Admissions Manager’s prior accommodation decision, or any basis for such decision provided by the Admissions Manager;
(2) The contents of the Appeal Notice, including any basis for appeal stated by the Applicant;

(3) The accommodation requests made by the Applicant related the Entry Exam for the relevant Exam Cycle; or

(4) The accommodations suggested by any medical provider or other third party’s accommodation suggestions that were offered in support of the Applicant’s accommodation request.

6.6 Notice to Applicant; Contents of Examination; Manner of Examination and Accommodation

(2) The schedule for the exam day, including the start time, and end time or maximum length of time permitted, for the relevant exam session(s);

(b) Grading must be completed within sixty-days of the date of the examination.
(c) Within two-weeks of the completion of grading of the Entry Exam, the Admissions Manager must notify the Applicant of their score on the examination and identify whether the score is passing or failing.

(b) There shall be no regrade performed on the Entry Exam.

(c) There shall be no appeal or review of any portion of any question or answer to the Entry Exam, unless authorized by the OSB or the Court.

(d) An Applicant who has failed the examination has the right:

   (1) To be informed of the total score, scaled or otherwise and the score required to pass the examination in Oregon.

   (2) If an Entry Exam involved essay questions, a failing Applicant may inspect and obtain, at the Applicant's expense, copies of the Applicant's handwritten or typewritten answer(s), and the essay question(s) to which the answer(s) apply, and the raw scores given for such answer(s).

(e) After the administration of each exam, the Admissions Manager shall establish a date, time and place to inspect and/or obtain the materials as prescribed in paragraph (c)(2) of this rule, provided that:

6.9 Effects of Failing or withdrawing from Entry Exam; Expiration of Exam Cycle; Limits to Entry Exams and Exam Cycles.

(a) An Applicant may only sit for one Entry Exam in any given Exam Cycle.

(b) If an Applicant fails the Entry Exam during an Exam Cycle, then the Committee or OSB Staff shall send the Applicant written notice that the Applicant’s Application for a Paralegal License is denied due to failing the Entry Exam. The Applicant must complete a new Application in order to gain a new Exam Cycle and sit for another Entry Exam.

(1) If an Applicant fails the Entry Exam, they may not gain a new Exam Cycle in Oregon until at least three months have passed since the date for which they were last notified that they failed an Entry Exam.

(c) If an Applicant withdraws their Application during an Exam Cycle, then the Applicant waives the ability to be tested during that Exam Cycle, and must complete a new Application in order to gain a new Exam Cycle and sit for an Entry Exam.

(d) If an Exam Cycle expires without the Applicant sitting for an Entry Exam, then the Applicant must complete a new Application in order to gain a new Exam Cycle and sit for another Entry Exam.

(e) No Applicant may receive more than two Exam Cycles in any twelve-month period.

(b) If a signed Oath of Office is received from a qualified Applicant, OSB Staff shall forward to the Court the Oath of Office, together with the relevant recommendation of the Admissions Manager or Committee.

(c) For the sake of Judicial Efficiencies, OSB Staff may hold the Oath of Office and recommendation of an Applicant until a sufficient pool of Applicants has been established, so that the Court may issue one Order of Licensure to cover the entire pool, rather than an Order of Licensure for each individual Applicant.

10.2 Qualifications for Licensure; Order of Licensure

(1) In order to be a Licensed Paralegal in Oregon, an Applicant must meet the following requirements:

(A) Be at least 18 years of age at the time the Paralegal License is issued;

10.4 Address, Telephone Number, and Email Designation

(a) Once a Paralegal Licensee has received their Paralegal License, and OSB Associate Member Number, the Applicant must immediately log into their Membership Portal provided by the OSB, and designate a current business address and telephone number, or in the absence thereof, a current residence address and telephone number. A post office address designation must be accompanied by a street address. The Paralegal Licensee must also designate a current email address to receive OSB communications.

(b) It is the duty of all Paralegal Licensees to promptly notify the OSB in writing of any change in his or her business address or telephone number, or residence address or telephone number, or email address, as the case may be. A new designation shall not become effective until actually received by the OSB.

SECTION 11 - SCOPE OF PRACTICE RULES FOR LICENSED PARALEGALS IN OREGON

This Section 11 lists professional legal activities and services that Licensed Paralegals are authorized to engage in, without the supervision of an attorney, so long as the activity or service is provided in an Endorsed practice area. Additionally, this Section 11 lists professional activities, legal services, and subject matters or issues that Licensed Paralegals are NOT authorized to engage in, unless they are supervised by an Attorney OSB Member. If a Licensed Paralegal’s client or prospective client has need for services that the LP’s is not authorized to provide, then the LP is affirmatively obligated to refer the client to an attorney or practitioner that is authorized to provide such services.

11.1 – Family Law Endorsed LPs - Scope of Practice

(a) Within the Scope of Practice of Endorsed LP: Licensed Paralegals, Endorsed in Family Law, may engage in the following tasks in the course of representing or potentially representing Family Law clients, so long as such tasks pertain to an area of law within the definition of Family Law, and such representation would not otherwise violate any provision within the Rules of Professional Conduct for Licensed Paralegals:

(1) Meet with potential Family Law clients to evaluate and determine needs and goals, and advise the clients regarding legal steps that can be taken to meet those needs and goals, if appropriate. As part of such a meeting, the LP should make an initial determination whether the potential client’s Family Law concerns are within the scope of the LP’s practice or whether a referral to an attorney would be appropriate.

(2) Enter a contractual relationship to represent a natural person (not including a business entity) in a Family Law matter.

(3) Assist by completing pattern forms and drafting and serving pleadings and documents, including orders and judgments in a Family Law matter. LPs may assist litigants in form selection and completion. LPs may explain the purpose of documents to litigants, help determine the appropriate document to use, help customize the information provided in the documents or pleadings to the litigants’ benefit, and provide clarity and accuracy in filling out the documents consistent with the requirements of case law, Oregon Revised Statutes, Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure, Uniform Trial Court Rules, and Supplementary Local Rules.

(4) File Family Law related documents and pleadings with the court, electronically or otherwise.

(5) Assist a Family Law client by drafting, serving, and completing discovery and issuing subpoenas. Family Law discovery practice often includes such procedures and pleadings as requests for production of documents, responses to requests for production of documents, protective orders, drafting and advising on motions to compel, conferring with the opposing party or their representative, subpoenas, uniform support declarations, requests for admissions, and motions for and responses to motions for the following Family Law matters: custody and parenting time evaluations, drug and alcohol assessments, psychological evaluations, inspection of property, real and personal property appraisals, and vocational assessments. As part of this service, LPs should help the Family Law client become familiar with discovery requirements and procedures and assist litigants in their discovery efforts.
(6) Attend Family Law depositions, but not take or defend them. LPs may assist with scheduling and compelling deposition appearances and preparing clients for being deposed and for taking a deposition, but that they not be allowed to take depositions or defend them.

(7) Prepare for, participate in, and represent a party in Family Law settlement discussions, including mediation and settlement meetings. LPs may advise clients in advance on what to expect, and help them prepare for such sessions.

(8) Prepare Family Law clients for judicial settlement conferences. LPs may help prepare clients regarding what to expect and help them prepare so that such sessions will be more efficient and effective. LPs may attend these sessions to advise clients on their options and discuss various proposals.

(9) Participate and assist with preparations for Family Law hearings, trials, and arbitrations. LPs may prepare clients for Family Law court appearances (e.g., prepare clients for direct-examination, cross-examination, and oral argument; issue subpoenas; prepare witnesses; prepare and submit exhibits; draft asset and liability statements; and write memoranda to provide to the court).

(10) Attend court appearances to provide support and assistance in Family Law procedural and ex parte matters. LPs may sit at counsel table during Family Law court appearances and respond to questions by the court in standard procedural family law appearances, ex parte matters, evidentiary proceedings, and informal domestic relations trials. An LP may assist clients in organizing, marking and submitting exhibits, but such exhibits must be offered by the client. LPs may not affirmatively represent a client directly during evidentiary hearings or other similar court appearances. For example, an LP is not allowed to make evidentiary objections, offer exhibits, or question witnesses.

(11) Review Family Law opinion letters, court orders, and notices with a client and explain how they affect the client, including the right to appeal. LPs may inform the client about the significance of a court’s determination and the right to appeal and the related timing, even if LPs are restricted from assisting in the appeals process. LPs may also provide Family Law referrals if a client is considering an appeal.

(12) Notwithstanding the prohibition against providing services related to appeals, as stated in Section-2(b)(1) of Section 11, an LP may assist a client in an appeal made, pursuant to ORS 25.513(6), from an order of an administrative law judge or a default or consent order entered by an administrator relating to the establishment or modification of child support. The LP may file the document required to appeal the order to a circuit court for a de novo hearing. The LP may also assist in the preparation of the de novo hearing before the circuit court relating to the establishment or modification of child support.

(13) Notwithstanding the prohibition against juvenile dependency situations stated in Section-2(b)(3) of Section 11, LP’s may be allowed to provide limited divorce services to a client in a Family Law case with a consolidated or related associated juvenile court proceeding where the juvenile court’s involvement may not be initiated or may be dismissed if a divorce, separation, custody case, or modification is initiated (and child custody therefore secured for a protective parent). If the client is represented by court-appointed counsel in the juvenile dependency case, and the divorce proceedings for which LP is providing services are within the LP’s Scope of Practice, then the LP may continue to assist the client in their divorce, despite the divorce having a related juvenile court proceeding.

(14) Notwithstanding Section-2(b)(13) of Section 11, which prohibits an LP from providing services to a client against whom a FAPA claim has been raised, an LP may continue providing services to an existing client if a FAPA claim is raised after the representation was already established, so long as the LP refers the client to a qualified FAPA attorney, who is an active OSB Member, for a consultation on the legal consequences of the FAPA claim. If after the consultation, the client still wishes to be represented by the LP, the LP may continue representing the client.

(15) Refer Family Law clients or potential Family Law clients to attorneys for tasks or subject matters outside the Scope of Practice for the LP. LPs may refer potential Family Law clients on matters within their Scope of Practice to other LPs or attorneys who specialize in the potential Family Law client’s issue. Additionally, LPs may refer clients and potential clients to lawyers for non-Family Law matters outside of their Scope of Practice. However, LPs have an ongoing obligation to refer Family Law clients to Attorney OSB Members, if information is discovered after the LP has already begun representing a client, and the new information indicates that there are matters or issues that could affect the Family Law matter for the client, and such matters or issues are outside of the Scope of Practice for the Family Law LP.

(b) Family Law matters outside the Scope of Practice for Family Law Endorsed LPs: Licensed Paralegals may NOT provide any services, or attempt to provide services, to a client or potential client related to the following matters or issues, regardless of whether the underlying area of the law involves Family Law, unless the LP does so under the supervision of an Attorney OSB Member:

(1) Except as provided in Section 2(a)(12), LP’s may not provide services related to appeals, whether they be related to orders from, or appeals to, an administrative body, a trial court, the Court of Appeals or the Court.

(2) Matters involving stalking protective orders.

(3) Except as provided in Section 2(a)(13), LP’s may not provide services in matters related to Juvenile court cases (dependency or delinquency).

(4) Modifications of custody, parenting time, or child support when the initial court order originates outside Oregon.

(5) Matters involving premarital or postnuptial agreements.

(6) Matters involving cohabitation agreements.
(7) Matters involving qualified domestic relations orders (QDROs) and domestic relations orders (DROs). While prohibited from drafting such provisions themselves, LPs are allowed to use language for QDROs and DROs within their own documents provided, the language was provided by an Attorney OSB Member who specializes in QDROs and DROs.

(8) Matters involving third-party custody and visitation cases (ORS 109.119).

(9) Matters involving unregistered domestic partnerships (“Beal v. Beal cases”). This prohibition does not apply to registered domestic partnerships.

(10) Litigation cases with third-party interveners.

(11) Military divorces unless stipulated. An LP may represent one party when both parties agree on the dissolution terms, and the role of the LP is to assist in finalizing the divorce, so long as before the client signs any document, the client is referred to an Attorney OSB Member, who specializes in military divorces, and the client has been advised about the legal consequences and advantages of signing the documents prepared by the LP.

(12) Matters involving remedial contempt when confinement is requested. While LPs may assist with remedial contempt matters, they may only do so when confinement is not before the court.

(13) Stand-alone Family Abuse Prevention Act (FAPA) cases (ORS 107.700–107.735).

(14) Elderly Persons and Persons with Disabilities Abuse Prevention Act (EPPDAPA) cases, Sexual Abuse Protection Order (SAPO) cases, guardianships, and adoptions.

11.2 – Landlord-Tenant Endorsed LPs - Scope of Practice

(a) Within the Scope of Practice of Endorsed Landlord-Tenant LPs: Licensed Paralegals, Endorsed in Landlord-Tenant Law, may engage in the following tasks in the course of representing or potentially representing Landlord-Tenant Law clients, so long as such tasks pertain to an area of law within the definition of Landlord-Tenant Law, and such representation would not otherwise violate any provision within the Rules of Professional Conduct for Licensed Paralegals:

(1) Enter into a contractual relationship to represent a natural person or a business entity in a Landlord-Tenant matter.

(2) Meet with potential Landlord-Tenant clients to evaluate and determine needs, goals, and advise on claims or defenses (e.g., notices of intent to terminate tenancy, inspection of premises, rent increase).

(3) Review, prepare, and provide advice regarding a variety of Landlord-Tenant Law documents, including pleadings, notices, orders, and judgments. LPs are authorized to review any document pertaining to a residential tenancy, including, without limitation, residential leases and rental agreements, amendments to rental agreements, eviction notices, notices of intent to enter rental property, rent increase notices, demand letters, notices of violation, and security deposit accountings.

4. File Landlord-Tenant Law documents and pleadings with the court. Litigation regarding residential tenancies can occur through small claims court actions as well as FED litigation. Examples of the types of documents LPs are authorized to prepare and file in small claims actions include, but are not limited to, small claims and notices of small claims, responses, trial exhibits, and memoranda. Examples of the types of documents LPs are authorized to prepare and file in FED litigation include, but are not limited to, complaints, answers (including tenant counterclaims), replies to counterclaims and affirmative defenses, subpoenas, trial exhibits, FED stipulated agreements (ORS 105.145(2)), declarations of noncompliance (ORS 105.146(4)), requests for hearing on declarations of noncompliance (ORS 105.148), notices of restitution, and writs of execution.

5. Assist in obtaining continuance requests to allow parties to make discovery requests or obtain other discovery in Landlord-Tenant matters.

6. Assist with and attend depositions related to Landlord-Tenant matters, but not take or defend them. LPs may work with clients to assist with the expedited timeframe in FED actions, including scheduling and compelling deposition appearances and preparing clients for being deposed and for taking a deposition.

7. Participate, prepare for, and represent a party in Landlord-Tenant settlement discussions, including mediation and settlement meetings.

8. Prepare parties for judicial settlement conferences in Landlord-Tenant matters. LPs may help prepare clients regarding what to expect and help them prepare so that such sessions will be more efficient and effective. LPs may attend these sessions to advise clients on their options and discuss various proposals.

9. Participate and assist with hearing and trial preparation in Landlord-Tenant matters. LPs should be allowed to prepare clients for court appearances (e.g., direct examination and cross-examination, oral argument, exhibit preparation and submission, and memoranda to the court).

10. Attend court appearances involving Landlord-Tenant Law, and provide permitted support and assistance in procedural matters. LPs may sit at counsel table during court appearances and respond to questions by the court. LPs cannot affirmatively represent a client directly during evidentiary hearings or other similar court appearances, except if state law would allow representation of a client in the proceeding by a non-lawyer.

11. Review opinion letters, court orders, and notices pertaining to a Landlord-Tenant Law involving a client and explain how they affect the client, including the right to appeal. LPs may be restricted from providing services related to appeals, but they may inform clients and prospective clients about the significance of a court’s determination and the right to appeal and the related timing in Landlord-Tenant matters. Additionally, LPs may provide
(12) Refer Landlord-Tenant Law clients or potential Landlord-Tenant Law clients to attorneys for tasks or subject matters outside the Scope of Practice for the LP. LPs may refer potential Landlord-Tenant Law clients on matters within their Scope of Practice to other LPs or attorneys who specialize in the potential client’s legal issue. Additionally, LPs may refer clients and potential clients to lawyers for matters that do not involve Landlord-Tenant issues. However, LPs have an ongoing obligation to refer Landlord-Tenant Law clients to an Attorney OSB Member, if information is discovered after the LP has already begun representing a client, and the new information indicates that there are matters or issues that could affect the Landlord-Tenant Law matter, or the matter poses a significant legal challenge to the client’s security, health or well-being, and such matters or issues are outside of the Scope of Practice for a Landlord-Tenant Law LP.

(b) Landlord-Tenant issues outside the Scope of Practice of Landlord-Tenant Endorsed LPs: Licensed Paralegals may NOT provide any services, or attempt to provide services, to a client or potential client related to the following matters or issues, regardless of whether the underlying area of the law related to the matter or issue involves Landlord-Tenant Law, unless the LP does so under the supervision of an Attorney OSB Member:

(1) Affirmative plaintiff cases in circuit court. However, Landlord-Tenant Endorsed LPs may provide services related to Landlord-Tenant Law, if the client pursues a matter in small claims court that could otherwise have been brought through an affirmative plaintiff’s case.

(2) Matters involving agricultural tenancies and leases.

(3) Matters involving affirmative discrimination claims (except if asserted as a counterclaim or defense of a Landlord-Tenant matter). Claims may be raised in state court, but if raised in an FED may create preclusion issues. If a tenant wishes to counterclaim for personal injury damages, whether arising under a tort or ORLTA theory of liability, the LP must then refer the case to an Attorney OSB Member.

(4) Matters involving commercial tenancies and leasing.

(5) Landlord-tenant claims for personal injury. Personal injury and other tort claims may arise during the landlord-tenant relationship and may give rise to liability under ORLTA or the rental agreement. Examples of this include premises liability injuries and mold-related illnesses. Such claims may be brought in the circuit court as well, and if raised previously in an FED, may create preclusion issues. Therefore, these claims, if a client wishes to counterclaim for personal injury damages, whether arising under a tort or ORLTA theory of liability, the LP must refer to an Attorney OSB Member.

(6) Matters involving injunctive relief in affirmative cases.

(7) Matters involving housing provided in relation to employment.
(8) Matters involving affirmative subsidized housing claims. However, an LP who is familiar with subsidized housing–related issues should not be precluded from advising on defenses to eviction related to the subsidized status of a unit.

RULE 1.0 TERMINOLOGY

(a) "Belief" or "believes" denotes that the person involved actually supposes the fact in question to be true. A person's belief may be inferred from circumstances.

(b) "Confirmed in writing," when used in reference to the informed consent of a person, denotes informed consent that is given in writing by the person or a writing that an LP promptly transmits to the person confirming an oral informed consent. See paragraph (g) for the definition of "informed consent." If it is not feasible to obtain or transmit the writing at the time the person gives informed consent, then the LP must obtain or transmit it within a reasonable time thereafter.

(c) "Electronic communication" includes but is not limited to messages sent to newsgroups, listservs and bulletin boards; messages sent via electronic mail; and real time interactive communications such as conversations in internet chat groups and conference areas and video conferencing.

(d) "Firm" or "LP firm" denotes an LP or LPs in a partnership, professional corporation, sole proprietorship or other association authorized to practice law or authorized to practice only within the scope of practice of an LP license; or LPs employed in a private or public legal aid organization, a legal services organization or the legal department of a corporation or other public or private organization. Any other LP, including an office sharer or an LP working for or with a firm on a limited basis, is not a member of a firm absent indicia sufficient to establish a de facto firm among the LPs involved.

(e) "Fraud" or "fraudulent" denotes conduct that is fraudulent under the substantive or procedural law of the applicable jurisdiction and has a purpose to deceive.

(f) "Information relating to the representation of a client" denotes both information protected by the attorney-client privilege or LP-client privilege under applicable law, and other information gained in a current or former professional relationship that the client has requested be held inviolate or the disclosure of which would be embarrassing or would be likely to be detrimental to the client.

(g) "Informed consent" denotes the agreement by a person to a proposed course of conduct after the LP has communicated adequate information and explanation about the material risks of and reasonably available alternatives to the proposed course of conduct. When informed consent is required by these Rules to be confirmed in writing or to be given in a writing signed by the client, the LP shall give and the writing shall reflect a recommendation that the client seek independent legal advice to determine if consent should be given.

(h) "Knowingly," "known," or "knows" denotes actual knowledge of the fact in question, except that for purposes of determining an LP's knowledge of the existence of a conflict of interest, all facts which the LP knew, or by the exercise of reasonable care should have known, will be attributed to the LP. A person's knowledge may be inferred from circumstances.

(i) "Licensed Paralegal" or "LP" is an individual licensed by the State of Oregon as an associate member of the Oregon State Bar who is authorized under the law to perform limited legal services within a defined scope of practice.

(j) "Matter" includes any judicial or other proceeding, application, request for a ruling or other determination, contract, claim, controversy, investigation, charge, accusation, arrest or other particular matter involving a specific party or parties; and any other matter covered by the conflict of interest rules of a government agency.

(k) "Partner" denotes a member of a partnership, a shareholder in an LP firm organized as a professional corporation, or a member of an association authorized to practice as LPs.

(l) "Reasonable" or "reasonably" when used in relation to conduct by an LP denotes the conduct of a reasonably prudent and competent LP.

(m) "Reasonable belief" or "reasonably believes" when used in reference to an LP denotes that the LP believes the matter in question and that the circumstances are such that the belief is reasonable.

(n) "Reasonably should know" when used in reference to an LP denotes that an LP of reasonable prudence and competence would ascertain the matter in question.

(o) "Screened" denotes the isolation of an LP from any participation in a matter through the timely imposition of procedures within a firm that are reasonably adequate under the circumstances to protect information that the isolated LP is obligated to protect under these Rules or other law.

(p) "Substantial" when used in reference to degree or extent denotes a material matter of clear and weighty importance.

(q) "Tribunal" denotes a court, an arbitrator in a binding arbitration proceeding or a legislative body, administrative agency or other body acting in an adjudicative capacity. A legislative body, administrative agency or other body acts in an adjudicative capacity when a neutral official, after the presentation of evidence or legal argument by a party or parties, will render a binding legal judgment directly affecting a party's interests in a particular matter.

(r) "Writing" or "written" denotes a tangible or electronic record of a communication or representation, including handwriting, typewriting, printing, photostatting, photography, audio or videorecording and electronic communications. A "signed" writing includes an electronic sound, symbol or process attached to or logically associated with a writing and executed or adopted by a person with the intent to sign the writing.

Adopted 01/01/05
Amended 01/01/14: “Electronic communications” substituted for “email.”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule replaces DR 10-101 and is significantly more expansive. Some DR 10-101 definitions were retained, but others were not incorporated into this rule.

The definition of “firm member” was eliminated as not necessary, but a reference to “of counsel” was retained in the definition of “firm.” The definition of “firm” also distinguishes office sharers and lawyers working in a firm on a limited basis.

The concept of “full disclosure” is replaced by “informed consent,” which, in some cases, must be “confirmed in writing.”

The definition of “professional legal corporation” was deleted, as the term does not appear in any of the rules and does not require explanation.

The definitions of “person” and “state” were also eliminated as being unnecessary.

CLIENT-LP RELATIONSHIP

RULE 1.1 COMPETENCE

An LP shall provide competent representation to a client. Competent representation requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.

Adopted 01/01/05
Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):
“Reasonably”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule is identical to DR 6-101(A).

RULE 1.2 SCOPE OF REPRESENTATION AND ALLOCATION OF AUTHORITY BETWEEN CLIENT AND LP

(a) Subject to paragraphs (b) and (c), an LP shall abide by a client's decisions concerning the objectives of representation and, as required by Rule 1.4, shall consult with the client as to the means by which they are to be pursued. An LP may take such action on behalf of the client as is impliedly authorized to carry out the representation. An LP shall abide by a client's decision whether to settle a matter.

(b) An LP may limit the scope of the representation if the limitation is reasonable under the circumstances and the client gives informed consent.

(c) An LP shall not counsel a client to engage, or assist a client, in conduct that the LP knows is illegal or fraudulent, but an LP may discuss the legal consequences of any proposed course of conduct with a client and may counsel or assist a client to make a good faith effort to determine the validity, scope, meaning or application of the law within the scope of the LP's authorized areas of practice.

(d) Notwithstanding paragraph (c), an LP may counsel and assist a client regarding Oregon's marijuana-related laws. In the event Oregon law conflicts with federal or tribal law, the LP shall also advise the client regarding related federal and tribal law and policy.

Adopted 01/01/05
Amended 02/19/15: Paragraph (d) added
Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):
“Fraudulent”
“Informed consent”
“Knows”
“Matter”
“Reasonable”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule has no real counterpart in the Oregon Code. Subsection (a) is similar to DR 7-101(A) and (B), but expresses more clearly that lawyers must defer to the client’s decisions about the objectives of the representation and whether to settle a matter.

Subsection (b) is a clarification of the lawyer’s right to limit the scope of a representation. Subsection (c) is similar to DR 7-102(A)(7), but recognizes that counseling a client about the meaning of a law or the consequences of proposed illegal or fraudulent conduct is not the same as assisting the client in such conduct. Paragraph (d) had no counterpart in the Oregon Code.
RULE 1.3 DILIGENCE
An LP shall not neglect a legal matter entrusted to the LP.
Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0)
“Matter”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule is identical to DR 6-101(B).

RULE 1.4 COMMUNICATION
(a) An LP shall keep a client reasonably informed about the status of a matter and promptly comply with reasonable requests for information
(b) An LP shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation.
Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):
“Knows”
“Reasonable”
“Reasonably”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule has no counterpart in the Oregon Code, although the duty to communicate with a client may be inferred from other rules and from the law of agency.

RULE 1.5 FEES
(a) An LP shall not enter into an agreement for, charge or collect an illegal or clearly excessive fee or a clearly excessive amount for expenses.
(b) A fee is clearly excessive when, after a review of the facts, a lawyer or LP of ordinary prudence would be left with a definite and firm conviction that the fee is in excess of a reasonable fee. Factors to be considered as guides in determining the reasonableness of a fee include the following:
   (1) the time and labor required, the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill requisite to perform the legal service properly;
   (2) the likelihood, if apparent to the client, that the acceptance of the particular employment will preclude other employment by the LP;
   (3) the fee customarily charged in the locality for similar legal services;
   (4) the amount involved and the results obtained;
   (5) the time limitations imposed by the client or by the circumstances;
   (6) the nature and length of the professional relationship with the client; and
   (7) the experience, reputation, and ability of the LP or LPs performing the services;
   (8) [not used]
(c) An LP shall not enter into an arrangement for, charge or collect:
   (1) any fee in a domestic relations matter, the payment or amount of which is contingent upon the securing of a divorce or upon the amount of spousal or child support or a property settlement;
   (2) [not used]
   (3) a fee denominated as "earned on receipt," "nonrefundable" or in similar terms unless it is pursuant to a written agreement signed by the client which explains that:
      (i) the funds will not be deposited into the LP’s trust account, and
      (ii) the client may discharge the LP at any time and in that event may be entitled to a refund of all or part of the fee if the services for which the fee was paid are not completed.
(d) A division of a fee between LPs and other LPs or lawyers who are not in the same firm may be made only if:
   (1) the client gives informed consent to the fact that there will be a division of fees, and
   (2) the total fee of the LPs and lawyers for all legal services they rendered the client is not clearly excessive.
(e) Paragraph (d) does not prohibit payments to a former firm member pursuant to a separation or retirement agreement, or payments to a selling LP for the sale of an LP practice pursuant to Rule 1.17.
(f) Before providing any services, an LP must provide the client with a written agreement, signed by the client(s), that:
   (1) states the purpose for which the LP has been retained;
   (2) identifies the services to be performed;
   (3) identifies the rate or fee for the services to be performed and whether and to what extent the client will be responsible for any costs, expenses or disbursements in the course of the representation;
(4) includes a statement printed in 12-point boldface type that the LP is not an attorney and is limited to practice in only those areas in which the LP is licensed;

(5) includes a provision stating that the client may report complaints relating to an LP or the unauthorized practice of law to the Client Assistance Office of the Oregon State Bar, including a toll-free number and Internet website.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 12/01/10: Paragraph (c)(3) added.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Firm”
“Information”
“Matter”
“Reasonable”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraphs (a), (b) and (c)(1) and (2) are taken directly from DR 2-106, except that paragraph (a) is amended to include the Model Rule prohibition against charging a “clearly excessive amount for expenses.” Paragraph (c)(3) had no counterpart in the Code. Paragraph (d) retains the substantive obligations of DR 2-107(A) but is rewritten to accommodate the new concepts of “informed consent” and “clearly excessive.” Paragraph (e) is essentially identical to DR 2-107(B).

RULE 1.6 CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION

(a) An LP shall not reveal information relating to the representation of a client unless the client gives informed consent, the disclosure is impliedly authorized in order to carry out the representation or the disclosure is permitted by paragraph (b).

(b) An LP may reveal information relating to the representation of a client to the extent the LP reasonably believes necessary:

(1) to disclose the intention of the LP’s client to commit a crime and the information necessary to prevent the crime;

(2) to prevent reasonably certain death or substantial bodily harm;

(3) to secure legal advice about the LP’s compliance with these Rules;

(4) to establish a claim or defense on behalf of the LP in a controversy between the LP and the client, to establish a defense to a criminal charge or civil claim against the LP based upon conduct in which the client was involved, or to respond to allegations in any proceeding concerning the LP’s representation of the client;

(5) to comply with other law, court order, or as permitted by these Rules; or

(6) in connection with the sale of an LP practice under Rule 1.17 or to detect and resolve conflicts of interest arising from the LP’s change of employment or from changes in the composition or ownership of a firm. In those circumstances, an LP may disclose with respect to each affected client the client’s identity, the identities of any adverse parties, the nature and extent of the legal services involved, and fee and payment information, but only if the information revealed would not compromise the LP-client privilege or otherwise prejudice any of the clients. The lawyer or LP or lawyers or LPs receiving the information shall have the same responsibilities as the disclosing LP to preserve the information regardless of the outcome of the contemplated transaction.

(7) to comply with the terms of a diversion agreement, probation, conditional reinstatement or conditional admission pursuant to BR 2.10, BR 6.2, BR 8.7 or Rule for Admission Rule 6.15. A lawyer or LP serving as a monitor of an LP on diversion, probation, conditional reinstatement or conditional admission shall have the same responsibilities as the monitored LP to preserve information relating to the representation of the monitored LP’s clients, except to the extent reasonably necessary to carry out the monitoring lawyer’s responsibilities under the terms of the diversion, probation, conditional reinstatement or conditional admission and in any proceeding relating thereto.

(c) An LP shall make reasonable efforts to prevent the inadvertent or unauthorized disclosure of, or unauthorized access to, information relating to the representation of a client.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 12/01/06: Paragraph (b)(6) amended to substitute “information relating to the representation of a client” for “confidences and secrets.”

Amended 01/20/09: Paragraph (b)(7) added.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Believes”
“Firm”
Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule replaces DR 4-101(A) through (C). The most significant difference is the substitution of “information relating to the representation of a client” for “confidences and secrets.” Paragraph (a) includes the exceptions for client consent found in DR 4-101(C)(1) and allows disclosures “impliedly authorized” to carry out the representation, which is similar to the exception in DR 4-101(C)(2).

The exceptions to the duty of confidentiality set forth in paragraph (b) incorporate those found in DR 4-101(C)(2) through (C)(5). There are also two new exceptions not found in the Oregon Code: disclosures to prevent “reasonably certain death or substantial bodily harm” whether or not the action is a crime, and disclosures to obtain legal advice about compliance with the Rules of Professional Conduct.

Paragraph (b)(6) in the Oregon Code pertained only to the sale of a law practice.

Paragraph (b)(7) had no counterpart in the Oregon Code.

RULE 1.7 CONFLICT OF INTEREST: CURRENT CLIENTS

(a) Except as provided in paragraph (b), an LP shall not represent a client if the representation involves a current conflict of interest. A current conflict of interest exists if:

(1) the representation of one client will be directly adverse to another client;

(2) there is a significant risk that the representation of one or more clients will be materially limited by the LP’s responsibilities to another client, a former client or a third person or by a personal interest of the LP; or

(3) the LP is related to another lawyer or LP, as parent, child, sibling, spouse or domestic partner, in a matter adverse to a person whom the LP knows is represented by the other lawyer or LP in the same matter.

(b) Notwithstanding the existence of a current conflict of interest under paragraph (a), an LP may represent a client if:

(1) the LP reasonably believes that the LP will be able to provide competent and diligent representation to each affected client;

(2) the representation is not prohibited by law;

(3) the representation does not obligate the LP to contend for something on behalf of one client that the LP has a duty to oppose on behalf of another client; and

(4) each affected client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Believes”

“Confirmed in writing”

“Informed consent”

“Knows”

“Matter”

“Reasonably believes”

Comparison to Oregon Code

The current conflicts of interest prohibited in paragraph (a) are the self-interest conflicts currently prohibited by DR 5-101(A) and current client conflicts prohibited by DR 5-105(E). Paragraph (a)(2) refers only to a “personal interest” of a lawyer, rather than the specific “financial, business, property or personal interests” enumerated in DR 5-101(A)(1). Paragraph (a)(3) incorporates the “family conflicts” from DR 5-101(A)(2).

Paragraph (b) parallels DR 5-101(A) and DR 5-105(F) in permitting a representation otherwise prohibited if the affected clients give informed consent, which must be confirmed in writing. Paragraph (b)(3) incorporates the “actual conflict” definition of DR 5-105(A)(1) to make it clear that that a lawyer cannot provide competent and diligent representation to clients in that situation.

Paragraph (b) also allows consent to simultaneous representation “not prohibited by law,” which has no counterpart in the Oregon Code. According to the official Comment to MR 1.7 this would apply, for instance, in jurisdictions that prohibit a lawyer from representing more than one defendant in a capital case, to certain representations by former government lawyers, or when local law prohibits a government client from consenting to a conflict of interest.

RULE 1.8 CONFLICT OF INTEREST: CURRENT CLIENTS: SPECIFIC RULES

(a) An LP shall not enter into a business transaction with a client or knowingly acquire an ownership, possessory, security or other pecuniary interest adverse to a client unless:

(1) the transaction and terms on which the LP acquires the interest are fair and reasonable to the client and are fully disclosed and transmitted in writing in a manner that can be reasonably understood by the client;

(2) the client is advised in writing of the desirability of seeking and is given a reasonable opportunity to seek the advice of independent legal counsel on the transaction; and

(3) the client gives informed consent, in a writing signed by the client, to the essential terms of the transaction and the LP’s role in the transaction, including whether the LP is representing the client in the transaction.

(b) An LP shall not use information relating to representation of a client to the disadvantage of the client unless the client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing, except as permitted or required under these Rules.

(c) An LP shall not solicit any substantial gift from a client, including a testamentary gift, or prepare on behalf of a client an instrument giving the LP or a person related to the LP any substantial gift, unless the LP or other recipient of the gift is related to the client. For purposes of this paragraph, related persons include a spouse, domestic partner, child, grandchild, parent, grandparent, or other relative or individual with whom the LP or the client maintains a close familial relationship.

(d) Prior to the conclusion of representation of a client, an LP shall not make or negotiate an agreement giving the LP literary or media rights to a portrayal or account based in substantial part on information relating to the representation.

(e) An LP shall not provide financial assistance to a client in connection with pending or contemplated litigation, except that:

(1) [not used]

(2) an LP representing an indigent client may pay court costs and expenses of litigation on behalf of the client.

(f) An LP shall not accept compensation for representing a client from one other than the client unless:

(1) the client gives informed consent;

(2) there is no interference with the LP’s independence of professional judgment or with the client-LP relationship; and

(3) information related to the representation of a client is protected as required by Rule 1.6.

(g) An LP who represents two or more clients shall not participate in making an aggregate settlement of the claims of or against the clients, unless each client gives informed consent, in a writing signed by the client. The LP’s disclosure shall include the existence and nature of all the claims involved and of the participation of each person in the settlement.

(h) An LP shall not:

(1) make an agreement prospectively limiting the LP’s liability to a client for malpractice unless the client is independently represented in making the agreement;

(2) settle a claim or potential claim for such liability with an unrepresented client or former client unless that person is advised in writing of the desirability of seeking and is given a reasonable opportunity to seek the advice of independent legal counsel in connection therewith;

(3) enter into any agreement with a client regarding arbitration of malpractice claims without informed consent, in a writing signed by the client; or

(4) enter into an agreement with a client or former client limiting or purporting to limit the right of the client or former client to file or to pursue any complaint before the Oregon State Bar.

(i) An LP shall not acquire a proprietary interest in the cause of action or subject matter of litigation the LP is conducting for a client, except that the LP may:

(1) acquire a lien authorized by law to secure the LP’s fee or expenses.

(2) [not used]

(j) An LP shall not have sexual relations with a current client of the LP unless a consensual sexual relationship existed between them before the client-LP relationship commenced; or have sexual relations with a representative of a current client of the LP if the sexual relations would, or would likely, damage or prejudice the client in the representation. For purposes of this rule:

(1) "sexual relations" means sexual intercourse or any touching of the sexual or other intimate parts of a person or causing such person to touch the sexual or other intimate parts of the LP for the purpose of arousing or gratifying the sexual desire of either party; and

(2) "LP" means any LP who assists in the representation of the client, but does not include other firm members who provide no such assistance.

(k) While LPs are associated in a firm, a prohibition in the foregoing paragraphs (a) through (i) that applies to any one of them shall apply to all of them.

Adopted 01/01/05
RULE 1.9 DUTIES TO FORMER CLIENTS

(a) An LP who has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter represent another person in the same or a substantially related matter in which that person’s interests are materially adverse to the interests of the former client unless each affected client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.

(b) An LP shall not knowingly represent a person in the same or a substantially related matter in which a firm with which the LP formerly was associated had previously represented a client:

(1) whose interests are materially adverse to that person; and

(2) about whom the LP had acquired information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter, unless each affected client gives informed consent, confirmed in writing.

(c) An LP who has formerly represented a client in a matter or whose present or former firm has formerly represented a client in a matter shall not thereafter:

(1) use information relating to the representation to the disadvantage of the former client except as these Rules would permit or require with respect to a client, or when the information has become generally known; or

(2) reveal information relating to the representation except as these Rules would permit or require with respect to a client.

(d) For purposes of this rule, matters are “substantially related” if (1) the LP’s representation of the current client will injure or damage the former client in connection with the same transaction or legal dispute in which the LP previously represented the former client; or (2) there is a substantial risk that confidential factual information as would normally have been obtained in the prior representation of the former client would materially advance the current client’s position in the subsequent matter.

Adopted 01/01/05
Amended 12/01/06: Paragraph (d) added.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Confirmed in writing”
“Informed consent”
“Firm”
“Knowingly”
“Known”
“Matter”
“Reasonable”
“Substantial”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule replaces DR 5-105(C), (D) and (H). Like Rule 1.7, this rule is a significant departure from the language and structure of the Oregon Code provisions on conflicts. Paragraph (a) replaces the sometimes confusing reference to “actual or likely conflict” between current and former client with the simpler “interests [that are] materially adverse.” The prohibition applies to matters that are the same or “substantially related,” which is virtually identical to the Oregon Code standard of “significantly related.”

Paragraph (b) replaces the limitation of DR 5-105(H), but is an arguably clearer expression of the prohibition. The new language makes it clear that a lawyer who moves to a new firm is prohibited from being adverse to a client of the lawyer’s former firm. The prohibition applies to cases in which the former firm is not prohibited from representing a person with interests materially adverse to the client. Paragraph (b) is substantially the same as DR 5-105(D) but is an arguably clearer expression of the prohibition.

Paragraph (c) makes clear that the duty not to use confidential information to the client’s disadvantage continues after the conclusion of the representation, except where the information “has become generally known.”

Paragraph (d) defines “substantially related.” The definition is taken in part from former DR 5-105(D) and in part from Comment [3] to ABA Model Rule 1.9.

RULE 1.10 IMPUTATION OF CONFLICTS OF INTEREST; SCREENING

(a) While LPs are associated in a firm, none of them shall knowingly represent a client when any one of them practicing alone would be prohibited from doing so by Rules 1.7 or 1.9, unless the prohibition is based on a personal interest of the prohibited LP or on Rule 1.7(a)(3) and does not present a significant risk of materially limiting the representation of the client by the remaining LPs or lawyers in the firm.

(b) When an LP has terminated an association with a firm, the firm is not prohibited from thereafter representing a person with interests materially adverse to those of a client represented by the formerly associated LP and not currently represented by the firm, unless:

(1) the matter is the same or substantially related to that in which the formerly associated LP represented the client; and

(2) any LP or lawyer remaining in the firm has information protected by Rules 1.6 and 1.9(c) that is material to the matter.

(c) When an LP becomes associated with a firm, no LP or lawyer associated in the firm shall knowingly represent a person in a matter in which that LP is disqualified under Rule 1.9, unless the personally disqualified LP is promptly screened from any form of participation or representation in the matter and written notice of the screening procedures employed is promptly given to any affected former client.

(d) A disqualification prescribed by this rule may be waived by the affected clients under the conditions stated in Rule 1.7.

(e) The disqualification of LPs associated in a firm with former or current government lawyers LPs is governed by Rule 1.11. Amended 01/01/05

Amended 12/01/06: Paragraph (a) amended to include reference to Rule 1.7(a)(3).

Amended 01/01/14: Paragraph (c) revised to eliminate detailed screening requirements and to require notice to the affected client rather than the lawyer’s former firm.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Firm”
“Know”
“Knowingly”
“Law firm”
“Matter”
“Screened”
“Substantial”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a) is similar to the vicarious disqualification provisions of DR 5-105(G), except that it does not apply when the disqualification is based only on a “personal interest” of the disqualified lawyer that will not limit the ability of the other lawyers in the firm to represent the client.

Paragraph (b) is substantially the same as DR 5-105(J).

Paragraph (d) is similar to DR 5-105 in allowing clients to consent to what would otherwise be imputed conflicts.

Paragraph (e) has no counterpart in the Oregon Code because the Oregon Code does not have a special rule addressing government lawyer conflicts.

The title was changed to include “Screening.”

RULE 1.11 SPECIAL CONFLICTS OF INTEREST FOR FORMER AND CURRENT GOVERNMENT OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

(a) Except as Rule 1.12, Rule 6.5, or law may otherwise expressly permit, an LP who has formerly served as a public officer or employee of the government:

(1) is subject to Rule 1.9(c); and Oregon Rules of Professional Conduct

(2) shall not otherwise represent a client in connection with a matter in which the LP participated personally and substantially as a public officer or employee, unless the appropriate government agency gives its informed consent, confirmed in writing, to the representation.

(b) When an LP is disqualified from representation under paragraph (a), no LP or lawyer in a firm with which that LP is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter unless:

(1) the disqualified LP is timely screened from any participation in the matter substantially in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rule 1.10(c); and

(2) written notice is promptly given to the appropriate government agency to enable it to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.

(c) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, an LP having information that the LP knows is confidential government information about a person acquired when the LP was a public officer or employee, may not represent a private client whose interests are adverse to that person in a matter in which the information could be used to the material disadvantage of that person. As used in this Rule, the term "confidential government information" means information that has been obtained under governmental authority and which, at the time this Rule is applied, the government is prohibited by law from disclosing to the public or has a legal privilege not to disclose and which is not otherwise available to the public. A firm with which that LP is associated may undertake or continue representation in the matter only if the disqualified LP is timely screened from any participation in the matter substantially in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rule 1.10(c).

(d) Except as law may otherwise expressly permit, an LP currently serving as a public officer or employee:

(1) is subject to Rules 1.7 and 1.9; and

(2) shall not:

(i) use the LP’s public position to obtain, or attempt to obtain, special advantage in legislative matters for the LP or for a client.

(ii) use the LP’s public position to influence, or attempt to influence, a tribunal to act in favor of the LP or of a client.

(iii) accept anything of value from any person when the LP knows or it is obvious that the offer is for the purpose of influencing the LP’s action as a public official.

(iv) either while in office or after leaving office use information the LP knows is confidential government information obtained while a public official to represent a private client.

(v) participate in a matter in which the LP participated personally and substantially while in private practice or nongovernmental employment, unless the LP’s former client and the appropriate government agency give informed consent, confirmed in writing; or

(vi) negotiate for private employment with any person who is involved as a party, an LP, or as lawyer for a party in a matter in which the LP is participating personally and substantially, except that an LP serving as a law clerk or staff LP to or otherwise assisting in the official duties of a judge, other adjudicative officer or arbitrator may negotiate for private employment as permitted by Rule 1.12(b) and subject to the conditions stated in Rule 1.12(b).

(e) Notwithstanding any Rule of Professional Conduct, and consistent with the "debate" clause, Article IV, section 9, of the Oregon Constitution, or the "speech or debate" clause, Article I, section 6, of the United States Constitution, an LP-legislator shall not be subject to discipline for words uttered in debate in either house of the Oregon Legislative Assembly or for any speech or debate in either house of the United States Congress.

(f) A member of an LP-legislator’s firm shall not be subject to discipline for representing a client in any claim against the State of Oregon provided:

(1) the LP-legislator is screened from participation or representation in the matter in accordance with the procedure set forth in Rule 1.10(c) (the required affidavits shall be served on the Attorney General); and

(2) the LP-legislator shall not directly or indirectly receive a fee for such representation.

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule has no exact counterpart in the Oregon Code, under which the responsibilities of government lawyers are addressed in DR 5-109 and DR 8-101, as well as in the general conflict limitations of DR 5-105. This rule puts all the requirements for government lawyers in one place.

Paragraph (a) is essentially the same as DR 5-109(B).

Paragraph (b) imputes a former government lawyer’s unconsented-to conflicts to the new firm unless the former government lawyer is screened from participation in the matter, as would be allowed under DR 5-105(I).

Paragraph (c) incorporates the prohibitions in DR 8-101(A)(1), (A)(4) and (B). It also allows screening of the disqualified lawyer to avoid disqualification of the entire firm.

Paragraph (d) applies concurrent and former client conflicts to lawyers currently serving as a public officer or employee; it also incorporates in (d)(2) (i) – (iv) the limitations in DR 8-101(A)(1)-(4), with the addition in (d)(2)(iv) of language from MR 1.11 that a lawyer is prohibited from using only that government information that the lawyer knows is confidential. Paragraph (d)(2)(v) is the converse of DR 5-109(B), and has no counterpart in the Oregon Code other than the general former client conflict provision of DR 5-105. Paragraph (d)(2)(vi) has no counterpart in the Oregon Code; it is an absolute bar to negotiating for private employment while a serving in a non-judicial government position for anyone other than a law clerk or staff lawyer assisting in the official duties of a judicial officer.

Paragraph (e) is taken from DR 8-101(C) to retain a relatively recent addition to the Oregon Code.

Paragraph (f) is taken from DR 8-101(D), also to retain a relatively recent addition to the Oregon Code.

RULE 1.12 FORMER JUDGE, ARBITRATOR, MEDIATOR OR OTHER THIRD-PARTY NEUTRAL

(a) Except as stated in paragraph (d) and Rule 2.4(b), an LP shall not represent anyone in connection with a matter in which the LP participated personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer or law clerk to such a person or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral, unless all parties to the proceeding give informed consent, confirmed in writing.

(b) An LP shall not negotiate for employment with any person who is involved as a party or as lawyer or LP for a party in a matter in which the LP is participating personally and substantially as a judge or other adjudicative officer or as an arbitrator, mediator or other third-party neutral. An LP serving as a law clerk or staff lawyer to or otherwise assisting in the official duties of a judge or other adjudicative officer may negotiate for employment with a party or lawyer or LP involved in a matter in which the clerk is participating personally and substantially, but only after the LP has notified the judge or other adjudicative officer.

(c) If an LP is disqualified by paragraph (a), no lawyer or LP in a firm with which that LP is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in the matter unless:

1) the disqualified LP is timely screened from any participation in the matter substantially in accordance with the procedures set forth in Rule 1.10(c); and

2) written notice is promptly given to the parties and any appropriate tribunal to enable them to ascertain compliance with the provisions of this rule.

(d) An arbitrator selected as a partisan of a party in a multimember arbitration panel is not prohibited from subsequently representing that party.

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a) is essentially the same as DR 5-109(A), with an exception created for lawyers serving as mediators under Rule 2.4(b).

Paragraph (b) has no equivalent rule in the Oregon Code; like Rule 1.11(d)(2)(vi) it address the conflict that arises when a person serving as, or as a clerk or staff lawyer to, a judge or other third party neutral, negotiates for employment with a party or a party’s lawyer. This situation is covered under DR 5-101(A), but its application may not be as clear.

Paragraph (c) applies the vicarious disqualification that would be imposed under DR 5-105(G) to a DR 5-109 conflict; the screening provision is broader than DR 5-105(I), which is limited to lawyers moving between firms.

Paragraph (d) has no counterpart in the Oregon Code.
RULE 1.13 ORGANIZATION AS CLIENT

(a) An LP employed or retained by an organization represents the organization acting through its duly authorized constituents.

(b) If an LP for an organization knows that an officer, employee or other person associated with the organization is engaged in action, intends to act or refuses to act in a matter related to the representation that is a violation of a legal obligation to the organization, or a violation of law which reasonably might be imputed to the organization, and that is likely to result in substantial injury to the organization, then the LP shall proceed as is reasonably necessary in the best interest of the organization. Unless the LP reasonably believes that it is not necessary in the best interest of the organization to do so, the LP shall refer the matter to higher authority in the organization, including, if warranted by the circumstances, referral to the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization as determined by applicable law.

(c) Except as provided in paragraph (d), if

(1) despite the LP’s efforts in accordance with paragraph (b) the highest authority that can act on behalf of the organization insists upon or fails to address in a timely and appropriate manner an action or a refusal to act, that is clearly a violation of law, and

(2) the LP reasonably believes that the violation is reasonably certain to result in substantial injury to the organization, then the LP may reveal information relating to the representation whether or not Rule 1.6 permits such disclosure, but only if and to the extent the LP reasonably believes necessary to prevent substantial injury to the organization.

(d) [Not used]

(e) An LP who reasonably believes that he or she has been discharged because of the LP’s actions taken pursuant to paragraphs (b) or (c), or who withdraws under circumstances that require or permit the LP to take action under either of those paragraphs, shall proceed as the LP reasonably believes necessary to assure that the organization’s highest authority is informed of the LP’s discharge or withdrawal.

(f) In dealing with an organization’s directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, an LP shall explain the identity of the client when the LP knows or reasonably should know that the organization’s interests are adverse to those of the constituents with whom the LP is dealing.

(g) An LP representing an organization may also represent any of its directors, officers, employees, members, shareholders or other constituents, subject to the provisions of Rule 1.7. If the organization’s consent to the dual representation is required by Rule 1.7, the consent may only be given by an appropriate official of the organization other than the individual who is to be represented, or by the shareholders.

This rule has no counterpart in the Oregon Code.

RULE 1.14 CLIENT WITH DIMINISHED CAPACITY

(a) When a client’s capacity to make adequately considered decisions in connection with a representation is diminished, whether because of minority, mental impairment or for some other reason, the LP shall, as far as reasonably possible, maintain a normal client-LP relationship with the client.

(b) When the LP reasonably believes that the client has diminished capacity, is at risk of substantial physical, financial or other harm unless action is taken and cannot adequately act in the client’s own interest, the LP may take reasonably necessary protective action within the scope of the LP license (if any), and may consult with individuals or entities that have the ability to take action to protect the client and, in appropriate cases, seek the appointment of a guardian ad litem.

(c) Information relating to the representation of a client with diminished capacity is protected by Rule 1.6. When taking protective action pursuant to paragraph (b), the LP is impliedly authorized under Rule 1.6(a) to reveal information about the client, but only to the extent reasonably necessary to protect the client’s interests.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Believes”
“Information relating to the representation of a client”
“Reasonably”
“Reasonably believes”
“Substantial”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (b) is similar to DR 7-101(C), but offers more guidance as to the circumstances when a lawyer can take protective action in regard to a client. Paragraph (a) and (c) have no counterparts in the Oregon Code, but provide helpful guidance for lawyers representing clients with diminished capacity.

RULE 1.15-1 SAFEKEEPING PROPERTY

(a) An LP shall hold property of clients or third persons that is in an LP’s possession separate from the LP’s own property. Funds, including advances for costs and expenses and escrow and other funds held for another, shall be kept in a separate “Lawyer Trust Account” maintained in the jurisdiction where the LP’s office is situated. Each lawyer trust account shall be an interest bearing account in a financial institution selected by the LP or law firm in the exercise of reasonable care. Lawyer trust accounts shall conform to the rules in the jurisdictions in which the accounts are maintained. Other property shall be identified as such and appropriately safeguarded. Complete records of such account funds and other property shall be kept by the LP and shall be preserved for a period of five years after termination of the representation.

(b) An LP may deposit the LP’s own funds in a lawyer trust account for the sole purposes of paying bank service charges or meeting minimum balance requirements on that account, but only in amounts necessary for those purposes.

(c) An LP shall deposit into a lawyer trust account legal fees and expenses that have been paid in advance, to be withdrawn by the LP only as fees are earned or expenses incurred, unless the fee is denominated as “earned on receipt,” “nonrefundable” or similar terms and complies with Rule 1.5(c)(3).

(d) Upon receiving funds or other property in which a client or third person has an interest, an LP shall promptly notify the client or third person. Except as stated in this rule or otherwise permitted by law or by agreement with the client, an LP shall promptly deliver to the client or third person any funds or other property that the client or third person is entitled to receive and, upon request by the client or third person, shall promptly render a full accounting regarding such property.

(e) When in the course of representation an LP is in possession of property in which two or more persons (one of whom may be the LP) have interests, the property shall be kept separate by the LP until the dispute is resolved. The LP shall promptly distribute all portions of the property as to which the interests are not in dispute.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 11/30/05: Paragraph (a) amended to eliminate permission to have trust account “elsewhere with the consent of the client” and to require accounts to conform to jurisdiction in which located. Paragraph (b) amended to allow deposit of lawyer funds to meet minimum balance requirements.

Amended 12/01/10: Paragraph (c) amended to create an exception for fees “earned on receipt” within the meaning of Rule 1.5(c)(3).

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Law firm”
“Reasonable”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraphs (a)-(e) contain all of the elements of DR 9-101(A)-(C) and (D)(1), albeit in slightly different order. The rule is broader than DR 9-101 in that it also applies to the property of prospective clients and third persons received by a lawyer. Paragraph (c) makes it clear that fees and costs paid in advance must be held in trust until earned unless the fee is denominated “earned on receipt” and complies with the requirements of Rule 1.5(c)(3).

RULE 1.15-2 IOLTA ACCOUNTS AND TRUST ACCOUNT OVERDRAFT NOTIFICATION

(a) A lawyer trust account for client funds that cannot earn interest in excess of the costs of generating such interest (“net interest”) shall be referred to as an IOLTA (Interest on Lawyer Trust Accounts) account. IOLTA accounts shall be operated in accordance with this rule and with operating regulations and procedures as may be established by the Oregon State Bar with the approval of the Oregon Supreme Court.

(b) All client funds shall be deposited in the LP’s or firm’s IOLTA account unless a particular client’s funds can earn net interest. All interest earned by funds held in the IOLTA account shall be paid to the Oregon Law Foundation as provided in this rule.

(c) Client funds that can earn net interest shall be deposited in an interest bearing trust account for the client’s benefit and the net interest earned by funds in such an account shall be held in trust as property of the client in the same manner as is provided in paragraphs (a) through (d) of Rule 1.15-1 for the principal funds of the client. The interest bearing account shall be either:
(1) a separate account for each particular client or client matter; or
(2) a pooled lawyer trust account with subaccounting which will provide for computation of interest earned by each client’s funds and the payment thereof, net of any bank service charges, to each client.

(d) In determining whether client funds can or cannot earn net interest, the LP or law firm shall consider the following factors:

(1) the amount of the funds to be deposited;
(2) the expected duration of the deposit, including the likelihood of delay in the matter for which the funds are held;
(3) the rates of interest at financial institutions where the funds are to be deposited;
(4) the cost of establishing and administering a separate interest bearing lawyer trust account for the client’s benefit, including service charges imposed by financial institutions, the cost of the LP’s or law firm’s services, and the cost of preparing any tax-related documents to report or account for income accruing to the client’s benefit;
(5) the capability of financial institutions, the LP lawyer or the law firm to calculate and pay income to individual clients; and
(6) any other circumstances that affect the ability of the client’s funds to earn a net return for the client.

(e) The LP or firm shall review the IOLTA account at reasonable intervals to determine whether circumstances have changed that require further action with respect to the funds of a particular client.

(f) If an LP or firm determines that a particular client’s funds in an IOLTA account either did or can earn net interest, the LP shall transfer the funds into an account specified in paragraph (c) of this rule and request a refund for the lesser of either: any interest earned by the client’s funds and remitted to the Oregon Law Foundation; or the interest the client’s funds would have earned had those funds been placed in an interest bearing account for the benefit of the client at the same bank.

(1) The request shall be made in writing to the Oregon Law Foundation within a reasonable period of time after the interest was remitted to the Foundation and shall be accompanied by written verification from the financial institution of the interest amount.
(2) The Oregon Law Foundation will not refund more than the amount of interest it received from the client’s funds in question. The refund shall be remitted to the financial institution for transmittal to the LP or firm, after appropriate accounting and reporting.

(g) No earnings from a lawyer trust account shall be made available to an LP or the LP’s firm.

(h) An LP or firm may maintain a lawyer trust account only at a financial institution that:

(1) is authorized by state or federal banking laws to transact banking business in the state where the account is maintained;
(2) is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or an analogous federal government agency;
(3) has entered into an agreement with the Oregon Law Foundation:

(i) to remit to the Oregon Law Foundation, at least quarterly, interest earned by the IOLTA account, computed in accordance with the institution’s standard accounting practices, less reasonable service charges, if any; and
(ii) to deliver to the Oregon Law Foundation a report with each remittance showing the name of the LP or firm for whom the remittance is sent, the number of the IOLTA account as assigned by the financial institution, the average daily collected account balance or the balance on which the interest remitted was otherwise computed for each month for which the remittance is made, the rate of interest applied, the period for which the remittance is made, and the amount and description of any service charges deducted during the remittance period; and

(4) has entered into an overdraft notification agreement with the Oregon State Bar requiring the financial institution to report to the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Counsel when any properly payable instrument is presented against such account containing insufficient funds, whether or not the instrument is honored.

(i) Overdraft notification agreements with financial institutions shall require that the following information be provided in writing to Disciplinary Counsel within ten banking days of the date the item was returned unpaid:

(1) the identity of the financial institution;
(2) the identity of the LP or firm;
(3) the account number; and
(4) either (i) the amount of the overdraft and the date it was created; or (ii) the amount of the returned instrument and the date it was returned.

(j) Agreements between financial institutions and the Oregon State Bar or the Oregon Law Foundation shall apply to all branches of the financial institution. Such agreements shall not be canceled except upon a thirty-day notice in writing to OSB Disciplinary Counsel in the case of a trust account overdraft notification agreement or to the Oregon Law Foundation in the case of an IOLTA agreement.

(k) Nothing in this rule shall preclude financial institutions which participate in any trust account overdraft notification program from charging LPs or firms for the reasonable costs incurred by the financial institutions in participating in such program.

(l) Every LP who receives notification from a financial institution that any instrument presented against his or her lawyer trust account was presented against insufficient funds, whether or not the instrument was honored, shall promptly notify Disciplinary Counsel in writing of the same information required by paragraph (i). The LP shall include a full explanation of the cause of the overdraft.

(m) For the purposes of paragraph (h)(3), “service charges” are limited to the institution’s following customary check and deposit processing charges: monthly maintenance fees, per item check charges, items deposited charges and per deposit charges. Any other fees or transactions costs are not “service charges” for purposes of paragraph (h)(3) and must be paid by the lawyer or law firm.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 11/30/05: Paragraph (a) amended to clarify scope of rule. Paragraph (h) amended to allow remittance of interest to OLF in accordance with bank’s standard accounting practice, and to report either the average daily collected account balance or the balance on which interest was otherwise computed. Paragraph (j) amended to require notice to OLF of cancellation of IOLTA agreement. Paragraph (m) and (n) added.

Amended 01/01/12: Requirement for annual certification, formerly paragraph (m), deleted and obligation moved to ORS Chapter 9.

Amended 01/01/14: Paragraph (f) revised to clarify the amount of interest that is to be refunded if client funds are mistakenly placed in an IOLTA account.

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule is a significant revision of the IOLTA provisions of DR 9-101 and the trust account overdraft notification provisions of DR 9-102. The original changes were prompted by the US Supreme Court’s decision in Brown v. Washington Legal Foundation that clients are entitled to “net interest” that can be earned on funds held in trust. Additional changes were made to conform the rule to banking practice and to clarify the requirement for annual certification.

RULE 1.16 DECLINING OR TERMINATING REPRESENTATION

(a) Except as stated in paragraph (c), an LP shall not represent a client or, where representation has commenced, shall withdraw from the representation of a client if:

(1) the representation will result in violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct for Licensed Paralegals or other law;

(2) the LP’s physical or mental condition materially impairs the LP’s ability to represent the client; or

(3) the LP is discharged; or

(4) the continued representation will exceed the LP’s limited license.

(b) Except as stated in paragraph (c), an LP may withdraw from representing a client if:

(1) withdrawal can be accomplished without material adverse effect on the interests of the client;

(2) the client persists in a course of action involving the LP’s services that the LP reasonably believes is criminal or fraudulent;

(3) the client has used the LP’s services to perpetrate a crime or fraud;

(4) the client insists upon taking action that the LP considers repugnant or with which the LP has a fundamental disagreement;

(5) the client fails substantially to fulfill an obligation to the LP regarding the LP’s services and has been given reasonable warning that the LP will withdraw unless the obligation is fulfilled;

(6) the representation will result in an unreasonable financial burden on the LP or has been rendered unreasonably difficult by the client; or
(7) other good cause for withdrawal exists.

(c) An LP must comply with applicable law requiring notice to or permission of a tribunal when terminating a representation. When ordered to do so by a tribunal, an LP shall continue representation notwithstanding good cause for terminating the representation.

(d) Upon termination of representation, an LP shall take steps to the extent reasonably practicable to protect a client’s interests, such as giving reasonable notice to the client, allowing time for employment of other representation, surrendering papers and property to which the client is entitled and refunding any advance payment of fee or expense that has not been earned or incurred. The LP may retain papers, personal property and money of the client to the extent permitted by other law.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Fraudulent”
“Reasonable”
“Reasonably”
“Reasonably believes”
“Substantial”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule is essentially the same as DR 2-110, except that it specifically applies to declining a representation as well as withdrawing from representation. Paragraph (a) parallels the circumstances in which DR 2-110(B) mandates withdrawal, and also includes when the client is acting “merely for the purpose of harassing or maliciously injuring” another person, which is prohibited in DR 2-109(A)(1) and DR 7-102(A)(1).

Paragraph (b) is similar to DR 2-110(C) regarding permissive withdrawal. It allows withdrawal for any reason if it can be accomplished without “material adverse effect” on the client. Withdrawal is also allowed if the lawyer considers the client’s conduct repugnant or if the lawyer fundamentally disagrees with it.

Paragraph (c) is like DR 2-110(A)(1) in requiring compliance with applicable law requiring notice or permission from the tribunal; it also clarifies the lawyer’s obligations if permission is denied.

Paragraph (d) incorporates DR 2-110(A)(2) and (3). The final sentence has no counterpart in the Oregon Code; it recognizes the right of a lawyer to retain client papers and other property to the extent permitted by other law. The “other law” includes statutory lien rights as well as court decisions determining lawyer ownership of certain papers created during a representation. A lawyer’s right under other law to retain papers and other property remains subject to other obligations, such as the lawyer’s general fiduciary duty to avoid prejudicing a former client, which might supersede the right to claim a lien.

RULE 1.17 SALE OF LAW PRACTICE

(a) An LP or LP firm may sell or purchase all or part of an LP practice, including goodwill, in accordance with this rule.

(b) The selling LP, or the selling LP’s legal representative, in the case of a deceased or disabled LP, shall provide written notice of the proposed sale to each current client whose legal work is subject to transfer, by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the client’s last known address. The notice shall include the following information:

(1) that a sale is proposed;

(2) the identity of the purchasing lawyer or law firm or LP or LP firm, including the office address(es), and a brief description of the size and nature of the purchasing lawyer’s or law firm’s or LP’s or LP firm’s practice;

(3) that the client may object to the transfer of its legal work, may take possession of any client files and property, and may retain counsel other than the purchasing lawyer or law firm or purchasing LP or LP firm;

(4) that the client’s legal work will be transferred to the purchasing lawyer or law firm or LP or LP firm, who will then take over the representation and act on the client’s behalf, if the client does not object to the transfer within forty-five (45) days after the date the notice was mailed; and

(5) whether the selling LP will withdraw from the representation not less than forty-five (45) days after the date the notice was mailed, whether or not the client consents to the transfer of its legal work.

(c) The notice may describe the purchasing lawyer or law firm’s or LP’s or LP firm’s qualifications, including the selling LP’s opinion of the purchasing lawyer or law firm’s or LP or LP firm’s suitability and competence to assume representation of the client, but only if the selling LP has made a reasonable effort to arrive at an informed opinion.

(d) If certified mail is not effective to give the client notice, the selling lawyer shall take such steps as may be reasonable under the circumstances to give the client actual notice of the proposed sale and the other information required in subsection (b).
(e) A client’s consent to the transfer of its legal work to the purchasing lawyer or law firm will be presumed if no objection is received within forty-five (45) days after the date the notice was mailed.

(f) If substitution of counsel is required by the rules of a tribunal in which a matter is pending, the selling lawyer shall assure that substitution of counsel is made.

(g) The fees charged clients shall not be increased by reason of the sale except upon agreement of the client.

(h) The sale of a law practice may be conditioned on the selling lawyer’s ceasing to engage in the private practice of law or some particular area of practice for a reasonable period within the geographic area in which the practice has been conducted.

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule continues DR 2-111 which, when adopted in 1995, was derived in large part from Model Rule 1.17.

RULE 1.18 DUTIES TO PROSPECTIVE CLIENT

(a) A person who consults with an LP about the possibility of forming a client-LP relationship with respect to a matter is a prospective client.

(b) Even when no client-LP relationship ensues, an LP who has learned information from a prospective client shall not use or reveal that information, except as Rule 1.9 would permit with respect to information of a former client.

(c) An LP subject to paragraph (b) shall not represent a client with interests materially adverse to those of a prospective client in the same or a substantially related matter if the LP received information from the prospective client that could be significantly harmful to that person in the matter, except as provided in paragraph (d). If an LP is disqualified from representation under this paragraph, no LP or lawyer in a firm with which that LP is associated may knowingly undertake or continue representation in such a matter, except as provided in paragraph (d).

(d) When the LP has received disqualifying information as defined in paragraph (c), representation is permissible if:

(1) both the affected client and the prospective client have given informed consent, confirmed in writing, or:

(2) the LP who received the information took reasonable measures to avoid exposure to more disqualifying information than was reasonably necessary to determine whether to represent the prospective client; and

(i) the disqualified LP is timely screened from any participation in the matter; and

(ii) written notice is promptly given to the prospective client

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 12/11/09: Paragraph (d) amended to conform to ABA Model Rule 1.18 except for prohibition against disqualified lawyer being apportioned a part of the fee.

Amended 01/01/14: Paragraphs (a) and (b) amended slightly to conform to changes in the Model Rule.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Informed consent”
“Firm”
“Knowingly”
“Matter”
“Screened”
“Substantial”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule has no counterpart in the Oregon Code. It is consistent with the rule of lawyer-client privilege that defines a client to include a person “who consults a lawyer with a view to obtaining professional legal services.” OEC 503(1)(a). The rule also codifies a significant body of case law and other authority that has interpreted the duty of confidentiality to apply to prospective clients.
COUNSELOR

RULE 2.1 ADVISOR
In representing a client, an LP shall exercise independent professional judgment and render candid advice. In rendering advice, an LP may refer not only to law but to other considerations such as moral, economic, social and political factors, that may be relevant to the client’s situation.

Adopted 01/01/05

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule has no counterpart in the Oregon Code, although it codifies the concept of exercising independent judgment that is fundamental to the role of the lawyer and which is mentioned specifically in DRs 2-103, 5-101, 5-104, 5-108 and 7-101.

RULE 2.2 [RESERVED]

RULE 2.3 EVALUATION FOR USE BY THIRD PERSONS
(a) An LP may provide an evaluation of a matter affecting a client for the use of someone other than the client if the LP reasonably believes that making the evaluation is compatible with other aspects of the LP’s relationship with the client.

(b) When the LP knows or reasonably should know that the evaluation is likely to affect the client’s interests materially and adversely, the LP shall not provide the evaluation unless the client gives informed consent.

(c) Except as disclosure is authorized in connection with a report of an evaluation, information relating to the evaluation is otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):
“Believes”
“Informed consent”
“Knows”
“Matter”
“Reasonably believes”
“Reasonably should know”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule is similar to DR 7-101(D), which was adopted in 1997 based on former ABA Model Rule 2.3. Paragraph (b) is new in 2002 to require client consent only when the evaluation poses a risk of material and adverse affect on the client. Under paragraph (a), when there is no such risk, the lawyer needs only to determine that the evaluation is compatible with other aspects of the relationship.

RULE 2.4 LAWYER SERVING AS MEDIATOR
(a) An LP serving as a mediator:
(1) shall not act as an LP for any party against another party in the matter in mediation or in any related proceeding; and
(2) must clearly inform the parties of and obtain the parties’ consent to the LP’s role as mediator.

(b) An LP serving as a mediator:
(1) may prepare documents that memorialize and implement the agreement reached in mediation;
(2) shall recommend that each party seek independent legal advice before executing the documents; and

(c) The requirements of Rule 2.4(a)(2) and (b)(2) shall not apply to mediation programs established by operation of law or court order.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 01/01/14: Original paragraph (c) relating to firm representation deleted to eliminate conflict with RPC 1.12.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):
“Matter”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule retains much of former DR 5-106.

ADVOCATE

RULE 3.1 MERITORIOUS CLAIMS AND CONTENTIONS
In representing a client or the LP’s own interests, an LP shall not knowingly bring or defend a proceeding, assert a position therein, delay a trial or take other action on behalf of a client, unless there is a basis in law and fact for doing so that is not frivolous, which includes a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law, except that the respondent in a proceeding that could result in incarceration may, nevertheless so defend the proceeding as to require that every element of the case be established.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 12/01/06: Paragraph (a) amended to make applicable to a lawyer acting in the lawyer’s own interests.
Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knowingly”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule retains the essence of DR 2-109(A)(2) and DR 7-102(A)(2), although neither Oregon rule expressly confirms the right of a criminal defense lawyer to defend in a manner that requires establishment of every element of the case.

RULE 3.2 [RESERVED]

RULE 3.3 CANDOR TOWARD THE TRIBUNAL

(a) An LP shall not knowingly:

(1) make a false statement of fact or law to a tribunal or fail to correct a false statement of material fact or law previously made to the tribunal by the LP;

(2) fail to disclose to the tribunal legal authority in the controlling jurisdiction known to the LP to be directly adverse to the position of the client and not disclosed by opposing counsel;

(3) offer evidence that the LP knows to be false. If an LP, the LP’s client, or a witness called by the LP, has offered material evidence and the LP comes to know of its falsity, the LP shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if permitted, disclosure to the tribunal. An LP may refuse to offer evidence that the LP reasonably believes is false;

(4) conceal or fail to disclose to a tribunal that which the LP is required by law to reveal; or

(5) engage in other illegal conduct or conduct contrary to these Rules.

(b) An LP who represents a client in an adjudicative proceeding and who knows that a person intends to engage, is engaging or has engaged in criminal or fraudulent conduct related to the proceeding shall take reasonable remedial measures, including, if permitted, disclosure to the tribunal.

(c) The duties stated in paragraphs (a) and (b) continue to the conclusion of the proceeding, but in no event require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

(d) In an ex parte proceeding, an LP shall inform the tribunal of all material facts known to the LP that will enable the tribunal to make an informed decision, whether or not the facts are adverse.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 12/01/10: Paragraphs (a)(3) and (b) amended to substitute “if permitted” for “if necessary,” paragraph (c) amended to make it clear that remedial measures do not require disclosure of information protected by Rule 1.6.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Believes”

“Fraudulent”

“Knowingly”

“Known”

“Knows”

“Matter”

“Reasonable”

“Tribunal”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a)(1) is similar to DR 7-102(A)(5), but also requires correction of a previously made statement that turns out to be false.

Paragraph (a)(2) is the same as DR 7-106(B)(1).

Paragraph (a)(3) combines the prohibition in DR 7-102(A)(4) against presenting perjured testimony or false evidence with the remedial measures required in DR 7-102(B). The rule clarifies that only materially false evidence requires remedial action. While the rule allows a criminal defense lawyer to refuse to offer evidence the lawyer reasonably believes is false, it recognizes that the lawyer must allow a criminal defendant to testify.

Paragraphs (a)(4) and (5) are the same as DR 7-102(A)(3) and (8), respectively.

Paragraph (b) is similar to and consistent with the interpretations of DR 7-102(B)(1).

Paragraph (c) continues the duty of candor to the end of the proceeding, but, notwithstanding the language in paragraphs (a)(3) and (b), does not require disclosure of confidential client information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

Paragraph (d) has no equivalent in the Oregon Code.
RULE 3.4 FAIRNESS TO OPPOSING PARTY AND COUNSEL

An LP shall not:

(a) knowingly and unlawfully obstruct another party's access to evidence or unlawfully alter, destroy or conceal a document or other material having potential evidentiary value. An LP shall not counsel or assist another person to do any such act;

(b) falsify evidence; counsel or assist a witness to testify falsely; offer an inducement to a witness that is prohibited by law; or pay, offer to pay, or acquiesce in payment of compensation to a witness contingent upon the content of the witness's testimony or the outcome of the case; except that an LP may advance, guarantee or acquiesce in the payment of:

1. expenses reasonably incurred by a witness in attending or testifying;
2. reasonable compensation to a witness for the witness's loss of time in attending or testifying; or
3. a reasonable fee for the professional services of an expert witness.

(c) knowingly disobey an obligation under the rules of a tribunal, except for an open refusal based on an assertion that no valid obligation exists;

(d) in pretrial procedure, knowingly make a frivolous discovery request or fail to make reasonably diligent effort to comply with a legally proper discovery request by an opposing party;

(e) in trial, allude to any matter that the LP's does not reasonably believe is relevant or that will not be supported by admissible evidence, assert personal knowledge of facts in issue except when testifying as a witness, or state a personal opinion as to the justness of a cause, the credibility of a witness, or the culpability of a civil litigant;

(f) advise or cause a person to secrete himself or herself or to leave the jurisdiction of a tribunal for purposes of making the person unavailable as a witness therein; or

(g) threaten to present criminal charges to obtain an advantage in a civil matter unless the LP reasonably believes the charge to be true and if the purpose of the LP is to compel or induce the person threatened to take reasonable action to make good the wrong which is the subject of the charge.

Adopted 01/01/05

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a) is similar to DR 7-109(A).
Paragraph (b) includes the rules regarding witness contact from DR 7-109, and also the prohibition against falsifying evidence that is found in DR 7-102(A)(6).
Paragraph (c) is generally equivalent to DR 7-106(C)(7).
Paragraph (d) has no equivalent in the Oregon Code.
Paragraph (e) is the same as DR 7-106(C)(1), (3) and (4).
Paragraph (f) retains the language of DR 7-109(B).
Paragraph (g) retains DR 7-105.

RULE 3.5 IMPARTIALITY AND DECORUM OF THE TRIBUNAL

An LP shall not:

(a) seek to influence a judge, juror, prospective juror or other official by means prohibited by law;

(b) communicate ex parte on the merits of a cause with such a person during the proceeding unless authorized to do so by law or court order;

(d) engage in conduct intended to disrupt a tribunal.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 12/01/06: Paragraph (b) amended to add "on the merits of the cause."

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Known”
“Tribunal”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a) has no counterpart in the Oregon Code.
Paragraph (b) replaces DR 7-110, making ex parte contact subject only to law and court order, without additional notice requirements.
Paragraph (c) is similar to DR 7-108(A)-(F).
Paragraph (d) is similar to DR 7-106(C)(6).
Paragraph (e) retains the DR 7-108(G).

RULE 3.6 TRIAL PUBLICITY

(a) An LP who is participating or has participated in the investigation or litigation of a matter shall not make an extrajudicial statement that the LP knows or reasonably should know will be disseminated by means of public communication and will have a substantial likelihood of materially prejudicing an adjudicative proceeding in the matter.

(b) Notwithstanding paragraph (a), an LP may state:

(1) the claim, offense or defense involved and, except when prohibited by law, the identity of the persons involved;

(2) information contained in a public record;

(3) that an investigation of a matter is in progress;

(4) the scheduling or result of any step in litigation;

(5) a request for assistance in obtaining evidence and information necessary thereto;

(6) a warning of danger concerning the behavior of a person involved, when there is reason to believe that there exists the likelihood of substantial harm to an individual or to the public interest.

c) Notwithstanding paragraph (a), an LP may:

(1) reply to charges of misconduct publicly made against the LP; or

(2) participate in the proceedings of legislative, administrative or other investigative bodies.

d) No LP associated in a firm or government agency with a lawyer or LP subject to paragraph (a) shall make a statement prohibited by paragraph (a).

e) An LP shall exercise reasonable care to prevent the LP’s employees from making an extrajudicial statement that the LP would be prohibited from making under this rule.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knows”
“Reasonable”
“Reasonably should know”
“Substantial”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a) replaces DR 7-107(A).

Paragraph (b) has no counterpart in the Oregon Code.

Paragraphs (c)(1) and (2) retain the exceptions in DR 7-107(B) and (C).

Paragraph (d) applies the limitation of the rule to other members in the subject lawyer’s firm or government agency.

Paragraph (e) retains the requirement of DR 7-107(C).

RULE 3.7 LP AS WITNESS

Paragraph (a) is essentially the same as DR 7-103(A).

Paragraph (d) is essentially the same as DR 7-103(B), with the addition of an exception for protective orders.

RULE 3.9 ADVOCATE IN NONADJUDICATIVE PROCEEDINGS

An LP representing a client before a legislative body or administrative agency in a nonadjudicative proceeding shall disclose that the appearance is in a representative capacity and shall conform to the provisions of Rule 3.3(a) through (c), 3.4(a) through (c), and 3.5.

Adopted 01/01/05

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule has no counterpart in the Oregon Code.

RULE 4.1 TRUTHFULNESS IN STATEMENTS TO OTHERS

In the course of representing a client an LP shall not knowingly:

(a) make a false statement of material fact or law to a third person; or

(b) fail to disclose a material fact when disclosure is necessary to avoid assisting in an illegal or fraudulent act by a client, unless disclosure is prohibited by Rule 1.6.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Fraudulent”

“Knowingly”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule has no direct counterpart in Oregon, but it expresses prohibitions found in DR 1-102(A)(3), DR 7-102(A)(5) and DR 1-102(A)(7).

RULE 4.2 COMMUNICATION WITH PERSON REPRESENTED BY COUNSEL

In representing a client or the LP’s own interests, an LP shall not communicate or cause another to communicate on the subject of the representation with a person the LP knows to be represented by a lawyer or LP on that subject unless:

(a) the LP has the prior consent of a lawyer or LP representing such other person;

(b) the LP is authorized by law or by court order to do so; or

(c) a written agreement requires a written notice or demand to be sent to such other person, in which case a copy of such notice or demand shall also be sent to such other person’s lawyer or LP.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knows”

“Written”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule retains the language of DR 7-104(A), except that the phrase “or on directly related subjects” has been deleted. The application of the rule to a lawyer acting in the lawyer’s own interests has been moved to the beginning of the rule.
RULE 4.3 DEALING WITH UNREPRESENTED PERSONS

In dealing on behalf of a client or the LP’s own interests with a person who is not represented by counsel, an LP shall not state or imply that the LP is disinterested. When the LP knows or reasonably should know that the unrepresented person misunderstands the LP’s role in the matter, the LP shall make reasonable efforts to correct the misunderstanding. The LP shall not give legal advice to an unrepresented person, other than the advice to secure counsel, if the LP knows or reasonably should know that the interests of such a person are or have a reasonable possibility of being in conflict with the interests of the client or the LP’s own interests.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knows”
“Matter”
“Reasonable”
“Reasonably should know”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule replaces DR 7-104(B). It is expanded to parallel Rule 4.2 by applying to situations in which the lawyer is representing the lawyer’s own interests. The rule is broader than DR 7-104(B) in that it specifically prohibits a lawyer from stating or implying that the lawyer is disinterested. It also imposes an affirmative requirement on the lawyer to correct any misunderstanding an unrepresented person may have about the lawyer’s role. The rule continues the prohibition against giving legal advice to an unrepresented person.

RULE 4.4 RESPECT FOR THE RIGHTS OF THIRD PERSONS; INADVERTENTLY SENT DOCUMENTS

(a) In representing a client or the LP’s own interests, an LP shall not use means that have no substantial purpose other than to embarrass, delay, harass or burden a third person, or knowingly use methods of obtaining evidence that violate the legal rights of such a person.

(b) An LP who receives a document or electronically stored information relating to the representation of the LP’s client and knows or reasonably should know that the document or electronically stored information was inadvertently sent shall promptly notify the sender.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 12/01/06: Paragraph (a) amended to make applicable to a lawyer acting in the lawyer’s own interests.

Amended 01/01/14: Paragraph (b) amended to expand scope to electronically stored information.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knowingly”
“Knows”
“Reasonably should know”
“Substantial”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule had no equivalent in the Oregon Code, although paragraph (a) incorporates aspects of DR 7-102(A)(1).

An LP shall be responsible for another LP’s violation of these Rules of Professional Conduct if:

( a) the LP orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or

( b) the LP has managerial authority in the LP firm in which the other LP practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other LP, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knowledge”
“Knows”

RULE 5.2 RESPONSIBILITIES OF A SUBORDINATE LP

(a) An LP is bound by the Rules of Professional Conduct for Licensed Paralegals notwithstanding that the LP acted at the direction of another person.

(b) A subordinate LP does not violate the Rules of Professional Conduct for Licensed Paralegals if that LP acts in accordance with a supervisory lawyer’s or LP’s reasonable resolution of an arguable question of professional duty.

Adopted 01/01/05

“Reasonable”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a) is identical to DR 1-102(C).

Paragraph (b) has no equivalent in the Oregon Code.

(a) an LP having direct supervisory authority over the nonLP shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the person's conduct is compatible with the professional obligations of the LP; and

(b) except as provided by Rule 8.4(b), an LP shall be responsible for conduct of such a person that would be a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if engaged in by an LP if:

(1) the LP orders or, with the knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or

(2) the LP has direct supervisory authority over the person, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 01/01/14: Title changed from “Assistants” to “Assistance” in recognition of the broad range of nonlawyer services that can be utilized in rendering legal services.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knows”

“Law firm”

“Reasonable”

Comparison to Oregon Code

RULE 5.4 PROFESSIONAL INDEPENDENCE OF AN LP

(a) An LP or LP firm shall not share legal fees with a nonlawyer or nonLP, except that:

(1) an agreement by an LP with the LP’s firm or firm members may provide for the payment of money, over a reasonable period of time after the LP’s death, to the LP’s estate or to one or more specified persons.

(2) an LP who purchases the practice of a deceased, disabled, or disappeared LP may, pursuant to the provisions of Rule 1.17, pay to the estate or other representative of that LP the agreed-upon purchase price.

(4) an LP may share court-awarded legal fees with a nonprofit organization that employed, retained or recommended employment of the LP in the matter; and

(5) an LP may pay the usual charges of a bar-sponsored or operated not-for-profit LP referral service, including fees calculated as a percentage of legal fees received by the LP from a referral.

(b) An LP shall not form a partnership with a nonlawyer or non-LP if any of the activities of the partnership consist of the practice of law.

(c) An LP shall not permit a person who recommends, employs, or pays the LP to render legal services for another to direct or regulate the LP’s professional judgment in rendering such legal services.

(d) An LP shall not practice with or in the form of a professional corporation or association authorized to practice law for a profit, if:

(1) a nonlawyer other than an LP owns any interest therein, except that a fiduciary representative of the estate of an LP or lawyer may hold the stock or interest of the LP or lawyer for a reasonable time during administration;
(2) a nonlawyer other than an LP is a corporate director or officer thereof or occupies the position of similar responsibility in any form of association other than a corporation, except as authorized by law; or

(3) a nonlawyer other than an LP has the right to direct or control the professional judgment of an LP.

(e) An LP shall not refer a client to a nonlawyer other than another LP with the understanding that the LP will receive a fee, commission or anything of value in exchange for the referral, but an LP may accept gifts in the ordinary course of social or business hospitality.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 01/01/13: Paragraph (a)(5) added.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Firm”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a)(1) is the same as DR 3-102(A)(1).
Paragraph (a)(2) is similar to DR 3-102(A)(2), except that it addresses the purchase of a deceased, disabled or departed lawyer’s practice and payment of an agreed price, rather than only authorizing reasonable compensation for services rendered by a deceased lawyer. Paragraph (a)(3) is identical to DR 3-102(A)(3). Paragraphs (a)(4) and 9a)(5) have no counterpart in the Oregon Code.

Paragraph (b) is identical to DR 3-103.
Paragraph (c) is identical to DR 5-108(B).
Paragraph (d) is essentially identical to DR 5-108(D).
Paragraph (e) is the same as DR 2-105, approved by the Supreme Court in April 2003.

RULE 5.5 UNAUTHORIZED PRACTICE OF LAW; MULTIJURISDICTIONAL PRACTICE

(a) An LP shall not practice law outside the scope of their limited license or assist another in doing so, or practice law in a jurisdiction in violation of the regulation of the legal profession in that jurisdiction, or assist another in doing so.

(b) An LP who is not admitted to practice in this jurisdiction shall not:

(1) except as authorized by these Rules or other law, establish an office or other systematic and continuous presence in this jurisdiction for the practice of law; or

(2) hold out to the public or otherwise represent that the LP is admitted to practice law in this jurisdiction.

(c) An LP admitted in another jurisdiction, and not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may provide legal services on a temporary basis in this jurisdiction that:

(1) are undertaken in association with an LP or lawyer who is admitted to practice in this jurisdiction and who actively participates in the matter;

(3) are in or reasonably related to a pending or potential arbitration, mediation, or other alternate dispute resolution proceeding in this or another jurisdiction, if the services arise out of or are reasonably related to the LP’s practice in a jurisdiction in which the LP is admitted to practice and are not services for which the forum requires pro hac vice admission;

(4) are not within paragraphs (c)(2) or (c)(3) and arise out of or are reasonably related to the LP’s practice in a jurisdiction in which the LP is admitted to practice; or

(5) are provided to the LP’s employer or its organizational affiliates and are not services for which the forum requires pro hac vice admission.

(d) An LP admitted in another jurisdiction, and not disbarred or suspended from practice in any jurisdiction, may provide legal services in this jurisdiction that are services that the LP is authorized to provide by federal law or other law of this jurisdiction.

(e) An LP who provides legal services in connection with a pending or potential arbitration proceeding to be held in his jurisdiction under paragraph (c)(3) of this rule must, upon engagement by the client, certify to the Oregon State Bar that:

(1) the LP is in good standing in every jurisdiction in which the LP is admitted to practice; and

(2) unless the LP is employed in-house or an employee of a government client in the matter, that the LP

(i) carries professional liability insurance substantially equivalent to that required of Oregon LPs, or
(ii) has notified the LP's client in writing that the LP does not have such insurance and that Oregon law requires Oregon LPs to have such insurance.

The certificate must be accompanied by the administrative fee for the appearance established by the Oregon State Bar and proof of service on the arbitrator and other parties to the proceeding.

Adopted 01/01/05
Amended 01/01/12: Paragraph (e) added.
Amended 02/19/15: Phrase “United States” deleted from paragraphs (c) and (d), to allow foreign-licensed lawyers to engage in temporary practice as provided in the rule.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):
“Matter”
“Reasonably” “Tribunal”

Comparison to Oregon Code
Paragraph (a) contains the same prohibitions as DR 3-101(A) and (B).
Paragraph (b), (c), (d) and (e) have no counterpart in the Oregon Code.

RULE 5.6 RESTRICTIONS ON RIGHT TO PRACTICE
An LP shall not participate in offering or making:
(a) a partnership, shareholders, operating, employment, or other similar type of agreement that restricts the right of an LP to practice after termination of the relationship, except an agreement concerning benefits upon retirement; or
(b) an agreement in which a direct or indirect restriction on the LP's right to practice is part of the settlement of a client controversy.
Adopted 01/01/05
Comparison to Oregon Code
Paragraph (a) is similar to DR 2-108(A), but in addition to partnership or employment agreements, includes shareholders and operating “or other similar type of agreements,” in recognition of the fact that lawyers associate together in organizations other than traditional law firm partnerships.
Paragraph (b) is similar to DR 2-108(B).

RULE 5.7 [RESERVED]

PUBLIC SERVICE

RULE 6.1 [RESERVED]

RULE 6.2 [RESERVED]

RULE 6.3 MEMBERSHIP IN LEGAL SERVICES ORGANIZATION
An LP may serve as a director, officer or member of a legal services organization, apart from the firm in which the LP practices, notwithstanding that the organization serves persons having interests adverse to a client of the LP. The LP shall not knowingly participate in a decision or action of the organization:
(a) if participating in the decision or action would be incompatible with the LP's obligations to a client under Rule 1.7; or
(b) where the decision or action could have a material adverse effect on the representation of a client of the organization whose interests are adverse to a client of the LP.
Adopted 01/01/05
Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):
“Knowingly”
“Law firm”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule is similar to DR 5-108(C)(10 and (2).

RULE 6.4 LAW REFORM ACTIVITIES AFFECTING CLIENT INTERESTS
An LP may serve as a director, officer or member of an organization involved in reform of the law or its administration, notwithstanding that the reform may affect the interest of a client of the LP. When the LP knows that the interest of a client may be materially benefited by a decision in which the LP participates, the LP shall disclose that fact but need not identify the client.

RULE 6.5 NONPROFIT AND COURT-ANNEXED LIMITED LEGAL SERVICES PROGRAMS

(a) An LP who, under the auspices of a program sponsored by a nonprofit organization or court, provides short-term limited legal services to a client without expectation by either the LP or the client that the LP will provide continuing representation in the matter:

(1) is subject to Rule 1.7 and 1.9(a) only if the LP knows that the representation of the client involves a conflict of interest; and

(2) is subject to Rule 1.10 only if the LP knows that another LP or lawyer associated with the LP in an LP or law firm is disqualified by Rule 1.7 or 1.9(a) with respect to the matter.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2), Rule 1.10 is inapplicable to a representation governed by this Rule.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knows”
“Law firm”
“Matter”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule has no equivalent in the Oregon Code. It was adopted by the ABA in 2002 to address concerns that strict application of conflict of interest rules might be deterring lawyers from volunteering in programs that provide short-term limited legal services to clients under the auspices of a non-profit or court-annexed program.

INFORMATION ABOUT LEGAL SERVICES

RULE 7.1 COMMUNICATION CONCERNING AN LP’S SERVICES

An LP shall not make a false or misleading communication about the LP or the LP’s services. A communication is false or misleading if it contains a material misrepresentation of fact or law, or omits a fact necessary to make the statement considered as a whole not materially misleading.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 12/01/06: Paragraph (a)(5) reworded to conform to former DR 2-101(A)(5).

Amended 01/01/14: Model Rule 7.1 language substituted for former RPC 7.1.

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule retains DR 2-103’s permission for advertising in various media, provided the communications are not false or misleading and do not involve improper in-person contact. It retains the prohibition against paying another to recommend or secure employment, with the exception of a legal service plan or not-for-profit lawyer referral service. The rule also continues the requirement that communications contain the name and office address of the lawyer or firm.

RULE 7.2 ADVERTISING

(a) Subject to the requirements of Rules 7.1 and 7.3, an LP may advertise services through written, recorded or electronic communication, including public media.

(b) An LP shall not give anything of value to a person for recommending the LP’s services except that an LP may:

(1) pay the reasonable costs of advertisements or communications permitted by this Rule;

(2) pay the usual charges of a legal service plan or an LP referral service;

(3) pay for an LP practice in accordance with Rule 1.17; and

(4) give nominal gifts as an expression of appreciation that are neither intended nor reasonably expected to be a form of compensation for recommending an LP’s services.

(c) Any communication made pursuant to this rule shall include the name and contact information of at least one LP or lawyer or LP firm or law firm responsible for its content.

Adopted 01/01/05

Amended 01/01/14: Revised to track more closely Model Rule 7.2 and eliminate redundant language.

Amended 01/01/17: Revised to remove “not-for-profit” from (2) and to require listing “contact information” in lieu of “office address.”

Amended 01/13/20. Revised to add subsection (b)(4) an incorporate exception for giving “nominal gifts.”

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Law firm”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule retains the essential prohibition against false or misleading communications, but not the specifically enumerated types of communications deemed misleading.
RULE 7.3 SOLICITATION OF CLIENTS
An LP shall not solicit professional employment by any means when:

(a) the LP knows or reasonably should know that the physical, emotional or mental state of the subject of the solicitation is such that the person could not exercise reasonable judgment in employing an LP;

(b) the person who is the subject of the solicitation has made known to the LP a desire not to be solicited by the LP; or

(c) the solicitation involves coercion, duress or harassment.

Adopted 01/01/05
Amended 01/01/14: The title is changed and the phrase “target of the solicitation” or the word “anyone” is substituted for “prospective client” to avoid confusion with the use of the latter term in RPC 1.8. The phrase “Advertising Material” is substituted for “Advertising” in paragraph (c).
Amended 01/01/17: Deleting requirement that lawyer place “Advertising Material” on advertising.
Amended 01/11/18: Deleting requirements specific to “in-person, telephone or real-time electronic contact” and deleting exception for prepaid and group legal service plans

“Reasonably should know”
“Written”

Comparison to Oregon Code
This rule incorporates elements of DR 2-101(D) and (H) and DR 2-104.

RULE 7.5 FIRM NAMES AND LETTERHEADS
(a) An LP shall not use an LP firm name, letterhead or other professional designation that violates Rule 7.1, including, but not limited to, stating, suggesting, or implying that the LP or LP firm is authorized to provide legal services outside the scope of the LP’s or LP firm’s limited scope of practice. A trade name may be used by an LP in private practice if it does not imply a connection with a government agency or with a public or charitable legal services organization and is not otherwise in violation of Rule 7.1.

(b) An LP firm with offices in more than one jurisdiction may use the same name or other professional designation in each jurisdiction, but identification of the LPs in an office of the firm shall indicate the jurisdictional limitations on those not licensed to practice in the jurisdiction where the office is located.

(c) The name of an LP holding a public office shall not be used in the name of an LP firm, or in communications on its behalf, during any substantial period in which the LP is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm.

(d) LPs may state or imply that they practice in a partnership or other organization only when that is a fact.

(e) [not used]

Adopted 01/01/05
Amended 01/01/14: The rule was modified to mirror the ABA Model Rule.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

This rule retains much of the essential content of DR 2-102.

RULE 7.6 [RESERVED]

MAINTAINING THE INTEGRITY OF THE PROFESSION

RULE 8.1 BAR ADMISSION AND DISCIPLINARY MATTERS
(a) An applicant for licensure as an LP, or an LP in connection with an LP licensure application or in connection with a disciplinary matter, shall not:

(1) knowingly make a false statement of material fact; or

(2) fail to disclose a fact necessary to correct a misapprehension known by the person to have arisen in the matter, or knowingly fail to respond to a lawful demand for information from an admissions or disciplinary authority, except that this rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6.

(b) An LP admitted to practice in this state shall, within 30 days after receiving notice thereof, report in writing to the disciplinary counsel of the Oregon State Bar the commencement against the LP of any disciplinary proceeding in any other jurisdiction.

(c) An LP who is the subject of a complaint or referral to the State Lawyers Assistance Committee shall, subject to the exercise of any applicable right or privilege, cooperate with the committee and its designees, including:

(1) responding to the initial inquiry of the committee or its designees;
(2) furnishing any documents in the LP’s possession relating to the matter under investigation by the committee or its designees;
(3) participating in interviews with the committee or its designees; and
(4) participating in and complying with a remedial program established by the committee or its designees.

RULE 8.2 JUDICIAL AND LEGAL OFFICIALS

(a) An LP shall not make a statement that the LP knows to be false or with reckless disregard to its truth or falsity concerning the qualifications or integrity of a judge or adjudicatory officer, or of a candidate for election or appointment to a judicial or other adjudicatory office.

(b) An LP who is a candidate for judicial office shall comply with the applicable provisions of the Code of Judicial Conduct.

RULE 8.3 REPORTING PROFESSIONAL MISCONDUCT

(a) An LP who knows that another LP or lawyer has committed a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct that raises a substantial question as to that LP’s or lawyer’s honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as an LP or lawyer in other respects shall inform the Oregon State Bar Client Assistance Office.

(b) An LP who knows that a judge has committed a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct that raises a substantial question as to the judge’s fitness for office shall inform the appropriate authority.

(c) This rule does not require disclosure of information otherwise protected by Rule 1.6 or ORS 9.460(3), or apply to LPs who obtain such knowledge or evidence while:

(1) acting as a member, investigator, agent, employee or as a designee of the State Lawyers Assistance Committee;
(2) acting as a board member, employee, investigator, agent or LP for or on behalf of the Professional Liability Fund or as a Board of Governors liaison to the Professional Liability Fund; or
(3) participating in the loss prevention programs of the Professional Liability Fund, including the Oregon Attorney Assistance Program.

(d) This rule does not require disclosure of mediation communications otherwise protected by ORS 36.220.

Adopted 01/01/05
Amended 1/11/2018 to add subsection “d” relating to mediation communications.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Knows”

Comparison to Oregon Code

Paragraph (a) is essentially the same as DR 8-102(A) and (B), although the Oregon rule prohibits “accusations” rather than “statements” and applies only to statements about the qualifications of the person.
RULE 8.4 MISCONDUCT
(a) It is professional misconduct for an LP to:

(1) violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assist or induce another to do so, or do so through the acts of another;

(2) commit a criminal act that reflects adversely on the LP's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as an LP in other respects;

(3) engage in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation that reflects adversely on the LP's fitness to practice law;

(4) engage in conduct that is prejudicial to the administration of justice;

(5) state or imply an ability to influence improperly a government agency or official or to achieve results by means that violate these Rules or other law, or

(6) knowingly assist a judge or judicial officer in conduct that is a violation of applicable rules of judicial conduct or other law.

(7) in the course of representing a client, knowingly intimidate or harass a person because of that person's race, color, national origin, religion, age, sex, gender identity, gender expression, sexual orientation, marital status, or disability.

(b) Notwithstanding paragraphs (a)(1), (3) and (4) and Rule 3.3(a)(1), it shall not be professional misconduct for an LP to advise clients or others about, or to supervise lawful covert activity, in the investigation of violations of civil or criminal law or constitutional rights, provided the LP's conduct is otherwise in compliance with these Rules of Professional Conduct. "Covert activity," as used in this rule, means an effort to obtain information on unlawful activity through the use of misrepresentations or other subterfuge. "Covert activity" may be commenced by an LP or involve an LP as an advisor or supervisor only when the LP in good faith believes there is a reasonable possibility that unlawful activity has taken place, is taking place or will take place in the foreseeable future.

(c) Notwithstanding paragraph (a)(7), an LP shall not be prohibited from engaging in legitimate advocacy with respect to the bases set forth therein.

Adopted 01/01/05
Amended 12/01/06: Paragraph (a)(5) added.
Amended 02/19/15: Paragraphs (a)(7) and (c) added.

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Believes”
“Fraud” “Knowingly”
“Reasonable”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule is essentially the same as DR 1-102(A).

RULE 8.5 DISCIPLINARY AUTHORITY; CHOICE OF LAW

(a) Disciplinary Authority. An LP admitted to practice in this jurisdiction is subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, regardless of where the LP's conduct occurs. An LP not admitted in this jurisdiction is also subject to the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction if the LP provides or offers to provide any legal services in this jurisdiction. An LP may be subject to the disciplinary authority of both this jurisdiction and another jurisdiction for the same conduct.

(b) Choice of Law. In any exercise of the disciplinary authority of this jurisdiction, the Rules of Professional Conduct to be applied shall be as follows:

(1) for conduct in connection with a matter pending before a tribunal, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the tribunal sits, unless the rules of the tribunal provide otherwise; and

(2) for any other conduct, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the LP's conduct occurred, or, if the predominant effect of the conduct is in a different jurisdiction, the rules of that jurisdiction shall be applied to the conduct. An LP shall not be subject to discipline if the LP's conduct conforms to the rules of a jurisdiction in which the LP reasonably believes the predominant effect of the LP's conduct will occur.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Believes”
“Matter”
“Reasonably believes”
“Tribunal”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule has no counterpart in the Oregon Code. A similar version based on former ABA Model Rule 8.5 was adopted by the Supreme Court in 1996 as Bar Rule of Procedure 1.4.

BR 1.4(a) specifically provides that the Supreme Court’s jurisdiction over a lawyer’s conduct continues whether or not the lawyer retains authority to practice law in Oregon and regardless of where the lawyer resides.

BR 1.4(b)(1) is essentially the same as 8.5(b)(1).

BR 1.4(b)(2) applies the Oregon Code if the lawyer is licensed only in Oregon. If the lawyer is licensed in Oregon and another jurisdiction, the rules of the jurisdiction in which the lawyer principally practices apply, or if the conduct has its predominant effect in another jurisdiction in which the lawyer is licensed, then the rules of that jurisdiction will apply.

RULE 8.6 WRITTEN ADVISORY OPINIONS ON PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT; CONSIDERATION GIVEN IN DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS

(a) The Oregon State Bar Board of Governors may issue formal written advisory opinions on questions under these Rules. The Oregon State Bar Legal Ethics Committee and General Counsel’s Office may also issue informal written advisory opinions on questions under these Rules. The General Counsel’s Office of the Oregon State Bar shall maintain records of both OSB formal and informal written advisory opinions and copies of each shall be available to the Oregon Supreme Court, Disciplinary Board, State Professional Responsibility Board, and Disciplinary Counsel. The General Counsel’s Office may also disseminate the bar’s advisory opinions as it deems appropriate to its role in educating LPs about these Rules.

(b) In considering alleged violations of these Rules, the Disciplinary Board and Oregon Supreme Court may consider any LP’s good faith effort to comply with an opinion issued under paragraph (a) of this rule as:

(1) a showing of the LP’s good faith effort to comply with these Rules; and

(2) a basis for mitigation of any sanction that may be imposed if the LP is found to be in violation of these Rules.

(c) This rule is not intended to, and does not, preclude the Disciplinary Board or the Oregon Supreme Court from considering any other evidence of either good faith or basis for mitigation in a bar disciplinary proceeding.

Adopted 01/01/05

Defined Terms (see Rule 1.0):

“Written”

Comparison to Oregon Code

This rule is identical to DR 1-105, amended only to refer to “General Counsel’s Office” in the second sentence of paragraph (a), rather than only to “General Counsel,” to make it clear that opinions of assistant general counsel are covered by the rule.

Accreditation Standards

5.050 Written Materials.

(a) For the purposes of accreditation as a group CLE activity under MCLE Rule 5.1(c), written material may be provided in an electronic or computer-based format, provided the material is available for the member to retain for future reference.

(b) Factors to be considered by the MCLE Program Manager in determining whether a group CLE activity has substantial educational value without written materials include, but are not limited to: the qualifications and experience of the program sponsor; the credentials of the program faculty; information concerning program content provided by program attendees or monitors; whether the subject matter of the program is such that comprehension and retention by members is likely without written materials; and whether accreditation previously was given for the same or substantially similar program.

5.100 Category I Activities

(a) Credit for legislative service may be earned at a rate of 1.0 general credit for each week or part thereof while the legislature is in session.

(b) Lawyer members who serve as mentors in the NLMP may earn a total of 8.0 CLE credits, including 2.0 ethics credits and 6.0 general credits, upon filing of a NLMP Completion Certificate. If a member serves as a mentor for more than one new lawyer, the member may claim up to 16.0 total credits, including 4.0 ethics credits, during the three year reporting cycle. If another lawyer assists with the NLMP completion, the mentoring credits must be apportioned between lawyers in a proportionate manner agreed upon by the NLMP mentors.

(c) Upon successful completion of the NLMP, new lawyer admittees earn 6.0 general/practical skills credits, which may be applied to the MCLE requirements of their first three-year MCLE reporting period.

5.200 Category II Activities

(a) Teaching credit may be claimed at a ratio of one credit hour for each sixty minutes of actual instruction.

(b) With the exception of panel presentations, when calculating credit for teaching activities pursuant to MCLE Rule 5.6, for presentations where there are multiple presenters for one session, the number of minutes of actual instruction will be divided by the number of presenters unless notified otherwise by the presenter. Members who participate in panel presentations may receive credit for the total number of minutes of actual instruction.

(c) For the purposes of accreditation of Legal Research and Writing, all credit hours shall be deemed earned on the date of publication or issuance of the written work.

(d) One hour of credit may be claimed for each sixty minutes of research and writing, but no credit may be claimed for time spent on stylistic editing.

(e) Credit may be claimed for Legal Research and Writing that supplements an existing CLE publication. Research alone may be accredited if the applicant provides a statement from the publisher confirming that research on the existing publication revealed no need for supplementing the publication’s content.

(f) Credit for Committee and Council Service pursuant to Rule 5.10. Members may claim three (3) general credits for each 12 months of committee and council service so long as the member regularly attends and participates in the work related to the functions of the committee.

(g) Service as a Bar Examiner. Three (3) credits may be claimed for writing a bar exam or local component question and three (3) credits may be claimed for grading a bar exam or local component question.

(h) Legal Ethics Service. Members may claim two ethics credits for each twelve months of service on committees and boards listed in Rule 5.9.

(i) Service as a Judge Pro Tempore. Members may claim one (1) general credits for every 2 hours of volunteer time spent on the bench as a judge pro tempore.

5.300 Category III Activities

(a) Personal Management Assistance. Credit may be claimed for programs that provide assistance with issues that could impair a lawyer’s professional competence (examples include but are not limited to programs addressing burnout, procrastination, gambling or other addictions or compulsive behaviors, and... other health related issues). Credit may also be claimed for programs designed to improve or enhance a lawyer’s professional effectiveness and competence (examples include but are not limited to programs addressing time and stress management, career satisfaction and transition, and interpersonal/relationship skill-building).

(b) Other Volunteer Activities. Credit may be claimed for volunteer activities for which accreditation is not available pursuant to Rules 5.3, 5.4, 5.5, 5.6, 5.7, 5.8, 5.9, 5.10, or 5.11. Credit may be claimed at a ratio of one credit hour for each two hours of uncompensated volunteer activities provided that the MCLE Program Manager determines the primary purpose of such activity is the provision of legal services or legal expertise. Such activities include but are not limited to:

1. Providing direct pro bono representation to low-income clients referred by certified pro bono programs;
2. Serving as a judge, evaluator, mentor or coach in any type of mock trial, moot court, congressional hearing or client legal-counseling competition, law-related class or law-related program at the high school level and above; and
3. Teaching a legal education activity offered primarily to nonlawyers high school age and older.

(c) Business Development and Marketing Activities. Credit may be claimed for courses devoted to business development and marketing that are specifically tailored to the delivery or marketing of legal services and focus on use of the discussed techniques and strategies in law practices. Examples include but are not limited to courses focusing on business development approaches, strategies and techniques available to attorneys, marketing to clients seeking legal services, and website development to promote one’s practice.

5.400 Access to Justice. A program is eligible for accreditation as an access to justice activity even if it is limited to a discussion of substantive law, provided the substantive law relates to access to justice issues involving age, culture, disability, ethnicity, gender and gender identity or expression, geographic location, national origin, race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, veteran status, immigration status, and socioeconomic status.

(a) Access to justice programming should be guided by these three principles:

1. Promoting accessibility by eliminating systemic barriers that prevent people from understanding and exercising their rights.
2. Ensuring fairness by delivering fair and just outcomes for all parties, including those facing financial and other disadvantages.
3. Addressing systemic failures that lead to a lack of confidence in the justice system by creating meaningful and equitable opportunities to be heard.

(b) The presenters of access to justice and introductory access to justice programs should have the following qualifications in the topic being presented:

1. Lived experience;
2. Professional experience; or
3. Substantial training.

5.500 Independent Study. Members may earn credit through independent screening or viewing of audio- or video-tapes of programs originally presented to live group audiences, or through online programs designed for presentation to a wide audience. A lawyer who is licensed in a jurisdiction that allows credit for reading and successfully completing an examination about specific material may use such credits to meet the Oregon requirement. No credit will be allowed for independent reading of material selected by a member except as part of an organized and accredited group program.

5.600 Child and Elder Abuse Reporting. In order to be accredited as a child abuse and elder abuse reporting activity, the one-hour session must include discussion of an Oregon attorney’s requirements to report child abuse and elder abuse and the exceptions to those requirements.

6.1 In General.

(a) Category I Activities. Credits in this category are unlimited. (b) Category II Activities. For lawyer members, credits in this category are limited to 20 in a three-year reporting period and 10 in a shorter reporting period. For LP members, credits in this category are limited to 12 in a three year reporting period and 6 in a shorter reporting period. No accreditation application is required.

(c) Category III Activities. For lawyer members, credits in this category are limited to 6 in a three-year reporting period and 3 in a shorter reporting period. For LP members, credits in this category are limited to 5 in a three-year reporting period and 2 in a shorter reporting period. No accreditation application is required.

(d) An active lawyer member may carry forward 15 or fewer unused credit hours from the reporting period during which the credit hours were earned to the next reporting period. An active LP may carry forward 10 or fewer unused credit hours from the reporting period during which the hours were earned to the next reporting period.

Regulations to MCLE Rule 6

Credit Limitations

6.100 Carry Over Credit. No more than six ethics credits can be carried over for application to the subsequent reporting period requirement. Ethics credits in excess of the carry over limit may be carried over as general credits for lawyer members. Abuse reporting education credits earned in excess of the reporting period requirement may be carried over as general credits for lawyer members, but a new abuse reporting education credit must be earned in each reporting period in which the credit is required. Access to justice credits may be carried over as general credits for lawyer members, but new access to justice credits must be earned in the reporting period in which they are required. Carry over credits from a reporting period in which the credits were completed by the member may not be carried forward more than one reporting period.

6.200 Credits Earned in Excess of Credit Limitations. Any credits earned in excess of the credit limitations... set forth in MCLE Rule Six may not be claimed in the reporting period in which they are completed or as carry over credits in the next reporting period.

Rule Seven

Compliance

7.1 Reports. Every active member shall electronically certify and submit their completed compliance report on or before 5:00 p.m. on May 31 of the year the active member’s reporting period ends.

7.2 Recordkeeping.

(a) Every active member shall maintain records of participation in CLE activities for use in completing a compliance report and shall retain these records for a period of twelve months after the end of the member’s reporting period.

(b) The MCLE Program Manager may maintain records of active members’ participation in CLE activities as necessary to verify compliance with the MCLE requirement.

7.3 Audits of Bar Members.

(a) The MCLE Program Manager may audit compliance reports selected because of facial defects or by random selection or other appropriate method.

(b) For the purpose of conducting audits, the MCLE Program Manager may request and review records of participation in CLE activities reported by active members.

(c) Failure to substantiate participation in CLE activities in accordance with applicable rules and regulations after request by the MCLE Program Manager shall result in disallowance of credits for the reported activity and, in certain situations, assessment of the late filing fee specified in 7.5(b).

(d) The MCLE Program Manager shall refer active members to the Oregon State Bar Disciplinary Counsel for further action where questions of dishonesty in reporting occur.

7.4 Noncompliance.

(a) Grounds. The following are considered grounds for a finding of non-compliance with these Rules:

   (1) Failure to complete the MCLE requirement for the applicable reporting period.

   (2) Failure to electronically certify and submit a completed compliance report on time.

   (3) Failure to provide sufficient records of participation in CLE activities to substantiate credits reported, after request by the MCLE Program Manager.

(b) Notice. In the event of a finding of noncompliance, the MCLE Program Manager shall send a written notice of noncompliance to the affected active member’s electronic mail address on file with the bar pursuant to Bar Rules of Procedure. The notice shall set forth the deadline to cure noncompliance, established by the Chief Executive Officer, which is not less than 21 days from the date of the notice. The MCLE Program Manager shall send the notice by mail to any member who is not required to have an electronic mail address on file.

7.5 Cure.

(a) Noncompliance for failure to electronically certify and submit a completed compliance report by the due date can be cured by filing the completed report demonstrating completion of the MCLE requirement during the applicable reporting period, together with the late fee specified in MCLE Regulation 7.200, no later than the deadline set forth in the notice of noncompliance.
(b) Noncompliance for failure to complete the MCLE requirement during the applicable reporting period can be cured by doing the following no later than the deadline set forth in the notice of noncompliance:

(1) Completing the credit hours necessary to satisfy the MCLE requirement for the applicable reporting period;

(2) Electronically certifying and submitting the completed compliance report; and

(3) Paying the late filing fee specified in MCLE Regulation 7.200.

(c) Noncompliance for failure to provide the MCLE Program Manager with sufficient records of participation in CLE activities to substantiate credits reported can be cured by providing the MCLE Program Manager with sufficient records, together with the late fee specified in MCLE Regulation 7.200, no later than the deadline set forth in the notice of noncompliance.

(d) Credit hours applied to a previous reporting period for the purpose of curing noncompliance as provided in Rule 7.5(b) may only be used for that purpose and may not be used to satisfy the MCLE requirement for any other reporting period.

(e) When it is determined that the noncompliance has been cured, the MCLE Program Manager shall notify the affected active member that he or she has complied with the MCLE requirement for the applicable reporting period. Curing noncompliance does not prevent subsequent audit and action specified in Rule 7.3.

7.6 Suspension. If the noncompliance is not cured within the deadline specified in the notice of noncompliance, the MCLE Program Manager shall recommend to the Supreme Court that the affected active member be suspended from membership in the bar.

7.7 Audits of Sponsors.

(a) The MCLE Program Manager may audit sponsors of CLE activities for compliance with these MCLE Rules and Regulations.

(b) The MCLE Program Manager may request materials and information related to the sponsor’s CLE activities and accreditation application during an audit. If a sponsor declines to comply with the MCLE Program Manager’s requests for materials and information during an audit, the MCLE Program Manager may revoke or withhold accreditation of the sponsor’s CLE activities.

(c) The MCLE Program Manager may revoke accreditation of any CLE activity or withhold accreditation of future CLE activities if the audit determines the sponsor is not compliant with the MCLE Rules and Regulations.

(d) A sponsor may seek review of the MCLE Program Manager’s decision to withhold or revoke accreditation under Rules 8.1.

7.8 Removal of NLMP Mentors

(a) Within 14 days of receipt by OSB of notice of charges against an NLMP mentor pursuant to 2.4(d) or suspension of an NLMP mentor pursuant to BR 7.1, the NLMP Coordinator shall provide written notice by email to the NLMP mentor and new admittee that the NLMP mentor is removed from serving as a mentor pursuant to MCLE Rule 2.4(d).

(b) Within 30 days, or as soon as reasonably practical, of removal of an NLMP mentor pursuant to Rule 2.4(d), the NLMP Coordinator shall select a new mentor for the new admittee pursuant to the criteria set forth in Regulation 3.700(b), and shall issue a notice to the new admittee and new NLMP mentor as soon as a new NLMP match is confirmed.
Regulations to MCLE Rule 7
Compliance

7.050 Electronically Certifying and Submitting Compliance Reports. Timely electronically certifying and submitting a completed compliance report as required by Rule 7.1 and 7.4(a)(2) is defined as the electronic certification and submission by the active bar member of their completed MCLE transcript through the electronic system provided by the Oregon State Bar via the internet on or before 5:00 p.m. on May 31 of the year the active member’s reporting period ends. If May 31 is a Saturday or legal holiday, including Sunday, or a day that the Oregon State Bar office is closed, the due date shall be the next regular business day. The electronic system for certifying and submitting MCLE transcripts can be accessed through the Oregon State Bar website (https://hello.osbar.org/).

7.100. Member Records of Participation.
(a) In furtherance of its audit responsibilities, the MCLE Program Manager may review an active member’s records of participation in Category I CLE activities. Records which may satisfy such a request include, but are not limited to, certificates of attendance or transcripts issued by sponsors, MCLE recordkeeping forms, NLMP mentoring plan checklist, canceled checks or other proof of payment for registration fees or audio or video tapes, course materials, notes or annotations to course materials, or daily calendars for the dates of CLE activities. For individually screened presentations, contemporaneous records of screening dates and times shall be required.

(b) Members claiming credit for Category II activities should keep course descriptions, course schedules or other documentation verifying the number of minutes of actual instruction, along with a sample of the written materials prepared, if applicable. Members claiming Legal Research and Writing credit should keep a log sheet indicating the dates and number of hours engaged in legal research and writing in addition to a copy of the written product.

(c) Members claiming credit for Category III activities should keep log sheets indicating the dates and number of hours engaged in pro-bono representation and other volunteer activities, along with course descriptions and course schedules, if applicable. Members claiming credit for direct pro-bono representation to low-income clients should also keep documentation establishing the referral by a certified pro bono provider.

7.200 Late Fees. Members who complete any portion of the minimum credit requirement after the end of the reporting period or who fail to file a completed compliance report by the filing deadline set forth in Rule 7.1 must pay a $200 late fee.

7.250 Service of Notices of Noncompliance. Notices of Noncompliance served by the MCLE Program Manager pursuant to Rule 7.4(b) shall be sent via electronic mail to the member’s last designated email address on file with the bar on the date of the notice. Notices shall be sent by regular mail (to the last designated business or residence address on file with the Oregon State Bar) to any member who is exempt from having an email address on file with the bar.

Rule Eight
Review and Enforcement

8.1 Review.
(a) Decisions of the MCLE Program Manager. A decision, other than a suspension recommended pursuant to Rule 7.6, affecting any active member or sponsor is final unless a request for review is filed with the MCLE Program Manager within 21 days after notice of the decision is mailed. The request for review may be by letter and requires no special form, but it shall state the decision to be reviewed and give the reasons for review. The matter shall be reviewed by the BOG or, if one has been appointed, the MCLE Committee, at its next regular meeting. An active member or sponsor shall have the right, upon request, to be heard, and any such hearing request shall be made in the initial letter. The hearing shall be informal. On review, the BOG or the MCLE Committee shall have authority to take whatever action consistent with these rules is deemed proper. The MCLE Program Manager shall notify the member or sponsor in writing of the decision on review and the reasons therefor.

(b) Decisions of the MCLE Committee. If a decision of the MCLE Program Manager is initially reviewed by the MCLE Committee, the decision of the MCLE Committee may be reviewed by the BOG on written request of the affected active member or sponsor made within 21 days of the issuance of the MCLE Committee’s decision. The decision of the BOG shall be final.

(c) Suspension Recommendation of the MCLE Program Manager. A recommendation for suspension pursuant to Rule 7.6 shall be subject to the following procedures:

1. A copy of the MCLE Program Manager’s recommendation to the Supreme Court that a member be suspended from membership in the bar shall be sent by regular mail and email to the member.

2. If the recommendation of the MCLE Program Manager is approved, the court shall enter its order and an effective date for the member’s suspension shall be stated therein.

8.2 Reinstatement. An active member suspended for noncompliance with the MCLE requirement shall be reinstated only upon completion of the MCLE requirement, submission of a completed compliance report to the bar, payment of the late filing and reinstatement fees, and compliance with the applicable provisions of the Rules of Procedure.

Regulations to MCLE Rule 8
Review and Enforcement

8.100 Review Procedure.

(a) The MCLE Program Manager shall notify the active member or sponsor of the date, time and place of the BOG or MCLE Committee meeting at which the request for review will be considered. Such notice must be sent no later than 14 days prior to such meeting. If the request for review is received less than 14 days before the next regularly scheduled meeting, the request will be considered at the following regularly scheduled meeting of the BOG or MCLE Committee, unless the member or sponsor waives the 14 day notice.

(b) A hearing before the MCLE Committee may be recorded at the request of the active member or sponsor or the MCLE Committee. In such event, the party requesting that the matter be recorded shall bear the expense of such recording. The other party shall be entitled to a copy of the record of the proceedings at their own expense.

(c) The MCLE Program Manager shall notify the active member or sponsor of the decision and the reasons therefor within 28 days of the date of the review. A decision of the MCLE Committee shall be subject to BOG review as provided in Rule 8.1.

(2) For any other conduct,

(A) If the attorney is licensed to practice only in Oregon, the rules to be applied shall be the Oregon Code of Professional Responsibility and the Bar Act; and

The regional chairpersons shall serve until a replacement appointment has been made by the court.

(c) Resignation and Replacement. The court may remove, at its discretion, or accept the resignation of, any member of the Disciplinary Board and appoint a successor. Any person so appointed to serve in a position that has term shall serve the unexpired term of the member who is replaced.

(2) The following individuals shall not serve on the Disciplinary Board:

(A) A member of the Board or the SPRB shall not serve on the Disciplinary Board during the member’s term of office. This disqualification also precludes an attorney or public member from serving on the Disciplinary Board while any member of his or her firm is serving on the Board or the SPRB.

(B) No member of the Disciplinary Board shall sit on a trial panel with regard to a subject matter considered by the Board or the SPRB while he or she was a member thereof or with regard to subject matter considered by any member of his or her firm while a member of the Board or the SPRB.

(2) Unless disqualified after a challenge for cause pursuant to BR 2.4(g), the Adjudicator shall serve as trial panel chairperson for each trial panel adjudicating a formal proceeding, a contested reinstatement proceeding, or a proceeding brought pursuant to BR 3.5; and shall preside in every proceeding brought pursuant to BR 3.1 or 3.4. Upon the stipulation of the Bar and a respondent or applicant, the Adjudicator shall serve as the sole adjudicator in a disciplinary proceeding, a contested reinstatement proceeding, or a proceeding brought pursuant to BR 3.5 and shall have the same duties and authority under these rules as a three-member trial panel. In the event the Adjudicator is disqualified or otherwise unavailable to serve as trial panel chairperson, the regional chairperson shall appoint another attorney member of the Disciplinary Board to serve on the trial panel, with all the duties and responsibilities as the Adjudicator as to that proceeding from the date of appointment forward.

(3) The Adjudicator shall rule on all motions for default filed pursuant to BR 5.8.

(4) The Adjudicator shall determine the timeliness of and, as appropriate, grant or deny peremptory challenges and resolve all challenges for cause to the qualifications of all trial panel members other than the Adjudicator appointed pursuant to BR 2.4(e)(2), BR 2.4(e)(9), and BR 2.4(f).

(5) Upon receipt of written notice from the Disciplinary Board Clerk of a Supreme Court referral pursuant to BR 8.8, the Adjudicator shall appoint an attorney member and a public member from an appropriate region to serve on the trial panel with the Adjudicator. The Adjudicator shall give written notice to Disciplinary Counsel, Bar Counsel, and the applicant of such appointments and a copy of the notice shall be filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk.

(6) The Adjudicator shall appoint an attorney member of the Disciplinary Board to conduct prehearing conferences as provided in BR 4.6.

(7) The Adjudicator may appoint Disciplinary Board members from any region to conduct prehearing conferences pursuant to BR 4.6, to participate with the Adjudicator in a show cause hearing pursuant to BR 6.2(d), to serve on trial panels to resolve matters submitted to the Disciplinary Board for consideration by the court, or when an insufficient number of members is available within a region for a particular proceeding.

(8) Upon receiving notice from the Disciplinary Board Clerk of a regional chairperson’s appointment of an attorney member and a public member pursuant to BR 2.4(f)(1), and upon determining that either no timely challenge pursuant to BR 2.4(g) was filed or that a timely-filed challenge pursuant to BR 2.4(g) has either been denied or resulted in the appointment of a substitute member or members, the Adjudicator shall promptly establish the date and time of hearing pursuant to BR 5.4 and notify, in writing, the Disciplinary Board Clerk and the parties of the date and place of hearing. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall provide to the trial panel members a copy of the formal complaint or statement of objections and, if one has been filed, the answer of the respondent or applicant.

(9) The Adjudicator shall rule on all questions of procedure and discovery, including such questions that may arise prior to the filing of a formal complaint, except as specifically provided elsewhere in these rules. The Adjudicator may convene the parties or their counsel before the hearing, to discuss the parties’ respective estimates of time necessary to present evidence, the availability and scheduling of witnesses, the preparation of trial exhibits, and other issues that may facilitate an efficient hearing. The Adjudicator may thereafter issue an order regarding agreements or rulings made at such prehearing meeting.

(10) The Adjudicator shall convene the trial panel hearing, oversee the orderly conduct of the same and timely file with the Disciplinary Board Clerk the written opinion of the trial panel. In all trial panels in which the Adjudicator is a member of the majority, the Adjudicator shall author the trial panel opinion.

(11) In matters involving final decisions of the Disciplinary Board under BR 10.1, the Adjudicator shall review statements of costs and disbursements and objections thereto and shall fix the amount of actual and necessary costs and disbursements to be recovered by the prevailing party.

(12) The Adjudicator shall preside in all matters involving the filing of a petition for suspension pursuant to BR 7.1.
(13) Upon appointment by the court, the Adjudicator shall perform the duties of the court set forth in BR 3.2.

(14) In the event of the Adjudicator’s unavailability to perform the functions set forth above, and upon written request made by General Counsel, the regional chairperson shall exercise the duties and responsibilities of the Adjudicator during the Adjudicator’s unavailability. The regional chairperson’s authority under this subsection shall cease upon order of the Adjudicator or the court. Unavailability for the purposes of this rule means the Adjudicator has taken a planned leave of more than 14 days, or is unavailable because of death or then existing physical or mental illness or infirmity.

(f) Duties of Regional Chairperson.

(1) Upon receipt of written notice from Disciplinary Counsel pursuant to BR 4.1(f) or written notice from the Adjudicator pursuant to BR 3.5(g) or 5.8(a), the regional chairperson shall appoint an attorney member and a public member to serve with the Adjudicator on the trial panel from the members of the regional panel. The regional chairperson shall give written notice to Disciplinary Counsel, Bar Counsel, and the respondent of such appointments, and a copy of the notice shall be filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk. In the event a member is disqualified pursuant to BR 2.4(g) or becomes unavailable to serve, the regional chairperson shall appoint a replacement member, giving written notice of such appointment as is given of initial appointments.

(2) The regional chairperson shall rule on all challenges for cause to the Adjudicator or to any attorney appointed to the role of Adjudicator pursuant to this paragraph brought pursuant to BR 2.4(g). In the event the Adjudicator is disqualified for cause or is otherwise unavailable to chair a trial panel, the regional chairperson shall appoint an attorney member from within the region to serve in place of the Adjudicator who has all the duties and responsibilities of the Adjudicator in that proceeding. In the event no attorney member from within the region is available to serve in place of the Adjudicator, the regional chairperson shall so notify the Disciplinary Board Clerk, who will ask another regional chairperson to appoint an attorney member pursuant to the authority granted the Adjudicator in BR 2.4(e)(9). The attorney member so appointed shall have all the duties and responsibilities of the Adjudicator in that proceeding.

(3) The regional chairperson may serve on trial panels during his or her term of office.

(4) Upon written request from the General Counsel pursuant to BR 2.4(e)(14), the regional chairperson shall exercise the duties and responsibilities of the Adjudicator until such authority is terminated by order of the Adjudicator or the court.

(g) Challenges. The Bar and a respondent or applicant shall be entitled to one peremptory challenge of either the attorney member who is not the Adjudicator or the public member. A peremptory challenge shall be timely if filed in writing within ten days following that member’s appointment to the trial panel with the Disciplinary Board Clerk. A challenge for cause as may arise under the Code of Judicial Conduct may be filed by the Bar, the respondent, or an applicant as to any member of the trial panel. A challenge for cause shall state the reason for the challenge and is timely if filed in writing within ten days following the date of the member’s appointment to the trial panel or the date the trial panel member discloses to the parties information raising a disqualification issue, whichever is later. For purposes of this paragraph, the Adjudicator is deemed appointed to the trial panel on the same date that the regional chairperson appoints the other two members of the trial panel pursuant to BR 2.4(f)(1). The written ruling on a challenge shall be filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, who shall send copies of the ruling to all parties. The Bar and a respondent or applicant may waive a disqualification of a member in the same manner as in the case of a judge under the Code of Judicial Conduct.

(h) Duties of Trial Panel.

(1) Trial. The trial panel to which a disciplinary or contested reinstatement proceeding has been referred has a duty to promptly try the issues.
(2)

(A) Opinions. The trial panel shall issue a written opinion identifying the concurring members of the trial panel. A dissenting member shall be identified and may file a dissenting opinion attached to the majority opinion. The majority opinion shall include specific findings of fact, conclusions of law, and a disposition. In any matter in which the Adjudicator is not a member of the majority, the other attorney member shall author the trial panel opinion. The Adjudicator shall file the original opinion with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, and the Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies to the parties. The opinion shall be filed within 28 days after the conclusion of the hearing, the settlement of the transcript if required under BR 5.3(e), or the filing of briefs if requested by the Adjudicator pursuant to BR 4.8, whichever is later.

(B) Extensions of Time to File Opinions. If the trial panel requires additional time to issue its opinion, the Adjudicator may so notify the parties, indicating the anticipated date by which an opinion shall be issued, not to exceed 90 days after the date originally due. If no opinion has been issued within 90 days after the date originally due, either party may file a motion with the Disciplinary Board, seeking issuance of an opinion. Upon the filing of such a motion, the Adjudicator shall enter an order establishing a date by which the opinion shall be issued, not to exceed 120 days after the date it was originally due. If no opinion has been issued by 120 days after the date originally due, either party may petition the court to enter an order compelling the Disciplinary Board to issue an opinion by a date certain.

(3) Record. The trial panel shall keep a record of all proceedings before it, including a transcript of the proceedings and exhibits offered and received, and shall promptly file the record with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, after the hearing concludes.

(4) Notice. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall promptly notify the parties of receipt of the trial panel opinion.

(i) Publications.

(1) Disciplinary Counsel shall cause to be prepared, on a periodic basis, a reporter service containing the full text of all Disciplinary Board decisions not reviewed by the court.

(2) Disciplinary Counsel shall have printed in the Bar Bulletin, on a periodic basis, summaries of the court’s disciplinary proceeding, contested admission, and contested reinstatement decisions, and summaries of all Disciplinary Board decisions not reviewed by the court.

Rule 2.5 Intake and Review of Inquiries and Complaints by Client Assistance Office.

(a) Client Assistance Office. The Bar shall maintain a Client Assistance Office, separate from that of Disciplinary Counsel. The Client Assistance Office shall, to the extent possible and resources permitting, receive, review, and respond to all inquiries from the public concerning the conduct of attorneys and LPs and may refer inquirers to other resources. The Client Assistance Office will consider inquiries submitted in person, by telephone or by e-mail, but may require the complainant to submit the matter in writing before taking any action. The Client Assistance Office will determine the manner and extent of review required for the appropriate disposition of any inquiry.

(b) Disposition by Client Assistance Office.

(1) If the Client Assistance Office determines that, even if true, an inquiry does not allege misconduct, it shall dismiss the inquiry with written notice to the complainant and to the attorney or LP named in the inquiry.

(2) If the Client Assistance Office determines, after reviewing the inquiry and any other information deemed relevant, that there is sufficient evidence to support a reasonable belief that misconduct may have occurred, the inquiry shall be referred to Disciplinary Counsel as a grievance. Otherwise, the inquiry shall be dismissed with written notice to the complainant and the attorney or LP.

(3) The Client Assistance Office may, at the request of the complainant, contact the attorney or LP and attempt to assist the parties in resolving the complaint’s concerns, but the provision of such assistance does not preclude a referral to Disciplinary Counsel of any matter brought to the attention of the Client Assistance Office.

(c) Review by General Counsel. Any inquiry dismissed by the Client Assistance Office may be reviewed by General Counsel upon written request of the complainant. General Counsel may request additional information from the complainant or the attorney or LP and, after review, shall either affirm the Client Assistance Office dismissal or refer the inquiry to Disciplinary Counsel as a grievance. General Counsel may affirm the dismissal by adopting the reasoning of the Client Assistance Office without additional discussion. The decision of General Counsel is final.

Rule 2.6 Investigations

(a) Review of Grievance by Disciplinary Counsel.

(1) For grievances referred to Disciplinary Counsel by the Client Assistance Office pursuant to BR 2.5(a)(2), Disciplinary Counsel shall, within 14 days after receipt of the grievance, mail a copy of the grievance to the attorney or LP, if the Client Assistance Office has not already done so, and notify the attorney or LP that he or she must respond to the grievance in writing to Disciplinary Counsel within 21 days of the date Disciplinary Counsel requests such a response. Disciplinary Counsel may grant an extension of time to respond for good cause shown upon the written request of the attorney or LP. An attorney or LP need not respond to the grievance if he or she provided a response to the Client Assistance Office and is notified by Disciplinary Counsel that further information from the attorney or LP is not necessary.

(2) If the attorney or LP fails to respond to Disciplinary Counsel or to provide records requested by Disciplinary Counsel within the time allowed, Disciplinary Counsel may file a petition with the Disciplinary Board to suspend the attorney or LP from the practice of law, pursuant to the procedure set forth in BR 7.1. Notwithstanding the filing of a petition under this rule, Disciplinary Counsel may investigate the grievance.

(3) Disciplinary Counsel may, if appropriate, offer to enter into a diversion agreement with the attorney or LP pursuant to BR 2.10. If Disciplinary Counsel chooses not to offer a diversion agreement to the attorney or LP pursuant to BR 2.10 and does not dismiss the grievance pursuant to BR 2.6(b), Disciplinary Counsel shall refer the grievance to the SPRB at a scheduled meeting.

(b) Dismissal of Grievance by Disciplinary Counsel. If, after considering a grievance, the response of the attorney or LP, and any additional information deemed relevant, Disciplinary Counsel determines that probable cause does not exist to believe misconduct has occurred, Disciplinary Counsel shall dismiss the grievance. Disciplinary Counsel shall notify the complainant and the attorney or LP of the dismissal in writing. A complainant may contest in writing the action taken by Disciplinary Counsel in dismissing his or her grievance, in which case Disciplinary Counsel shall submit a report on the grievance to the SPRB at a scheduled meeting. The SPRB shall thereafter take such action as it deems appropriate.

(c) Review of Grievance by SPRB.

(1) The SPRB shall evaluate a grievance based on the report of Disciplinary Counsel to determine whether probable cause exists to believe misconduct has occurred. The SPRB shall either dismiss the grievance, admonish the attorney or LP, direct Disciplinary Counsel to file a formal complaint by the Bar against the attorney or LP, or take action within the discretion granted to the SPRB by these rules.

(A) If the SPRB determines that probable cause does not exist to believe misconduct has occurred, the SPRB shall dismiss the grievance and Disciplinary Counsel shall notify the complainant and the attorney or LP of the dismissal in writing.

(B) If the SPRB determines that the attorney or LP should be admonished, Disciplinary Counsel shall so notify the attorney or LP within 14 days of the SPRB’s meeting. If an attorney or LP refuses to accept the admonition within the time specified by Disciplinary Counsel, Disciplinary Counsel shall file a formal complaint against the attorney or LP on behalf of the bar. Disciplinary Counsel shall notify the complainant in writing of the admonition of the attorney or LP.

(C) If the SPRB determines that the complaint should be investigated further, Disciplinary Counsel shall conduct the investigation and notify the complainant and the attorney or LP in writing of such action.
(d) Reconsideration; Discretion to Rescind.

(1) An SPRB decision to dismiss a grievance or allegation of misconduct against an attorney or LP shall not preclude reconsideration or further proceedings on such grievance or allegation, if evidence that is not available or submitted at the time of such dismissal justifies, in the judgment of not less than a majority of SPRB, such reconsideration or further proceedings.

(2) The SPRB may rescind a decision to file a formal complaint against an attorney or LP only when, to the satisfaction of a majority of the entire SPRB, good cause exists. Good cause is:

(A) new evidence that would have clearly affected the SPRB’s decision to file a formal complaint; or

(B) legal authority, not known to the SPRB at the time of its last consideration of the matter, that establishes that the SPRB’s decision to file a formal complaint was incorrect.

(e) Approval of Filing of Formal Complaint.

(1) If the SPRB determines that a formal complaint should be filed against an attorney or LP, or if an attorney or LP rejects an admonition offered by the SPRB, Disciplinary Counsel may appoint Bar Counsel. Disciplinary Counsel shall notify the attorney or LP and the complainant in writing of such action.

(2) Notwithstanding an SPRB determination that probable cause exists to believe misconduct has occurred, the SPRB shall have the discretion to direct that the Bar take no further action on a grievance or allegation of misconduct if one or more of the following circumstances exist:

(A) the attorney or LP is no longer an active member of the Bar or is not engaged in the practice of law, and is required under BR 8.1 to demonstrate good moral character and general fitness to practice law before resuming active membership status or the practice of law in Oregon;

(B) other disciplinary proceedings are pending that are likely to result in the attorney’s or LP’s disbarment;

(C) other disciplinary charges are authorized or pending and the anticipated sanction, should the Bar prevail on those charges, is not likely to be affected by a finding of misconduct in the new matter or on an additional charge; or

(D) formal disciplinary proceedings are impractical in light of the circumstances or the likely outcome of the proceedings.

An exercise of discretion under this rule to take no further action on a grievance or allegation of misconduct shall not preclude further SPRB consideration or proceedings on such grievance or allegation in the future.

(3) Notwithstanding an SPRB determination that probable cause exists to believe misconduct has occurred, the SPRB shall have the discretion to dismiss a grievance or allegation of misconduct if the SPRB, considering the facts and circumstances as a whole, determines that dismissal would further the interests of justice and would not be harmful to the interests of clients or the public. Factors the SPRB may take into account in exercising that discretion include, but are not limited to:

(A) the attorney’s or LP’s mental state;

(B) whether the misconduct is an isolated event or part of a pattern of misconduct;

(C) the potential or actual injury caused by the attorney’s or LP’s misconduct;

(D) whether the attorney or LP fully cooperated in the investigation of the misconduct; and
(E) whether the attorney or LP previously was admonished or disciplined for misconduct.

Misconduct that adversely reflects on the attorney’s or LP’s honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness to practice law shall not be subject to dismissal under this rule.

(f) Investigation of Inquiries Involving Disciplinary Counsel, General Counsel, or other Bar agents. Inquiries that allege misconduct concerning Disciplinary Counsel or General Counsel of the Bar, or that Bar Counsel has engaged in misconduct while acting on the Bar’s behalf, shall be referred to the chairperson of the SPRB within seven days of their receipt by the Bar.

(1) If the SPRB chairperson determines that probable cause does not exist to believe misconduct has occurred, the SPRB chairperson shall dismiss the inquiry and notify the parties of the dismissal in writing. A complainant may contest the dismissal in writing, in which case the matter shall be submitted to the SPRB at a scheduled meeting. The SPRB shall thereafter take such action as it deems appropriate.

(2) If the SPRB chairperson determines the inquiry should be investigated, the SPRB chairperson may appoint an investigator of his or her choice to investigate the matter and to report on the matter directly to the SPRB. The same procedure shall, as far as practicable, apply to the investigation of such grievances as apply to members of the Bar generally.

Rule 2.7 Investigations Of Alleged Misconduct Other Than By Inquiry.

Allegations or instances of alleged misconduct that are brought or come to the attention of the Bar other than through the receipt of a written inquiry shall be evaluated using the procedure specified in BR 2.6 except as that rule may be inapplicable due to the lack of a written grievance or a complainant with whom to communicate.

(Rule 2.8 amended by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)

Rule 2.9 Requests For Information And Assistance.

The Bar may request a complainant or applicant to supply and disclose to the investigating authorities of the Bar all documentary and other evidence in his or her possession, and the names and addresses of witnesses Rule 2.10 Diversion.

(a) Diversion Offered by Disciplinary Counsel. As an alternative to seeking authority from the SPRB to offer an attorney or LP an admonition or to file a formal complaint, Disciplinary Counsel may offer to the attorney or LP to divert a grievance on the condition that the attorney or LP enter into a diversion agreement in which the attorney or LP agrees to participate in a remedial program as set forth in the agreement. An attorney or LP does not have a right to have a grievance diverted under this rule.

(b) Diversion Eligibility. Disciplinary Counsel may consider diversion of a grievance if:

1. The misconduct does not involve the misappropriation of funds or property; fraud, dishonesty, deceit or misrepresentation; or the commission of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude or a felony under Oregon law;

2. The misconduct appears to be the result of inadequate law office management, chemical dependency, a physical or mental health condition, negligence, or a lack of training, education or other similar circumstance; and

3. There appears to be a reasonable likelihood that the successful completion of a remedial program will prevent the recurrence of conduct by the attorney or LP similar to that under consideration for diversion.

(c) Offer of Diversion.

1. If, after investigation, Disciplinary Counsel determines that an attorney or LP may have committed misconduct and that the matter is appropriate for diversion under this rule, Disciplinary Counsel may offer a diversion agreement to the attorney or LP. The attorney or LP has 30 days from the date diversion is offered to accept and enter into the diversion agreement. Disciplinary Counsel may grant an extension of time to the attorney or LP for good cause shown.

2. An attorney or LP may decline to enter into a diversion agreement, in which case Disciplinary Counsel shall refer the grievance to the SPRB for review pursuant to Rule 2.6.

(d) Diversion Agreement.

1. A diversion agreement shall require the attorney or LP to participate in a specified remedial program to address the apparent cause of the misconduct. Such a remedial program may include, but is not limited to: appointment of a diversion supervisor; assistance or training in law office management; chemical dependency treatment; counseling or peer support meetings; oversight by an experienced practicing attorney; voluntary limitation of areas of practice for the period of the diversion agreement; restitution; or a prescribed course of continuing legal education. The attorney or LP shall pay the costs of a remedial program.

2. A diversion agreement shall require the attorney or LP to stipulate to a set of facts concerning the complaint or allegation of misconduct being diverted and to agree that, in the event the attorney or LP fails to comply with the terms of the diversion agreement, the stipulated facts shall be deemed true in any subsequent disciplinary proceeding.

3. A diversion agreement may be amended at any time by agreement between Disciplinary Counsel and the attorney or LP. Disciplinary Counsel is not obligated to amend a diversion agreement to incorporate additional complaints or allegations of misconduct made against the attorney or LP subsequent to the date of the original agreement.

(4) The term of a diversion agreement shall be no more than 24 months following the date of the last amendment to the agreement.

(5) In a diversion agreement, the attorney or LP shall agree that a diversion supervisor, treatment provider or any other person to whom the attorney or LP has been referred pursuant to the remedial program specified in the agreement shall report to Disciplinary Counsel any failure by the attorney or LP to comply with the terms of the agreement.

(6) If a diversion agreement is entered into between Disciplinary Counsel and the attorney or LP, Disciplinary Counsel shall so notify the complainant in writing.

(e) Compliance and Disposition.

(1) If it appears to Disciplinary Counsel that an attorney or LP has failed to comply with the terms of a diversion agreement and Disciplinary Counsel determines that the allegation of noncompliance, if true, warrants the termination of the diversion agreement, Disciplinary Counsel shall provide the attorney or LP an opportunity to be heard, through written submission, concerning the alleged noncompliance. Thereafter, Disciplinary Counsel shall determine whether to terminate the diversion agreement and, if so, shall refer the matter to the SPRB for review pursuant to BR 2.6.

(2) If an attorney or LP fulfills the terms of a diversion agreement, Disciplinary Counsel thereafter shall dismiss the grievance with written notice to the complainant and the attorney or LP. The dismissal of a grievance after diversion shall not be considered a prior disciplinary offense in any subsequent proceeding against the attorney or LP.

(f) Public Records Status. The Bar shall treat records relating to a grievance diverted under this rule, a diversion agreement, or a remedial program as official records of the Bar, subject to the Oregon Public Records Law and also subject to any applicable exemption.

Title 3 — Special Proceedings

Rule 3.1 Interlocutory Suspension During Pendency Of Disciplinary Proceedings.

(a) Petition for Interlocutory Suspension. At any time after Disciplinary Counsel has determined probable cause exists that an attorney or LP has engaged in misconduct, has evidence sufficient to establish a probable violation of one or more rules of professional conduct or the Bar Act, and reasonably believes that clients or others will suffer immediate and irreparable harm by the continued practice of law by the attorney or LP, Disciplinary Counsel shall petition the Adjudicator for an order for interlocutory suspension of the attorney’s or LP’s license to practice law pending the outcome of the disciplinary proceeding.

(b) Contents of Petition; Notice to Answer; Service. A petition for the suspension of an attorney or LP under this rule shall set forth the acts and violations of the rules of professional conduct or statutes submitted by the Bar, together with an explanation of why interlocutory suspension is warranted under BR 3.1(a). If a formal complaint has been filed against the attorney or LP, a copy shall be attached. The petition may be supported by documents or affidavits. The notice to answer shall provide that an answer to the petition must be filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk within 14 days of service and that, absent the timely filing of an answer with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, the relief sought can be obtained. Disciplinary Counsel shall file the petition with the Disciplinary Board Clerk and shall serve a copy, along with the notice of answer, on the attorney or LP pursuant to BR 1.8.

(c) Answer by Attorney or LP. The attorney or LP shall file an answer to the Bar’s petition with the Disciplinary Board Clerk within 14 days of service. The attorney or LP shall mail a copy of the answer to Disciplinary Counsel and file proof of mailing with the Disciplinary Board Clerk.

(d) Default; Entry of Order. The failure of the attorney or LP to answer the Bar’s petition within the time provided in BR 3.1(c) constitutes a waiver of the attorney’s or LP’s right to contest the Bar’s petition, and all factual allegations contained in the petition shall be deemed true. Not earlier than 14 days after service of the petition and in the absence of an answer filed by the attorney or LP named in the petition, the Adjudicator shall review the sufficiency of the petition. If the petition establishes a probable violation of one or more rules of professional conduct or the Bar Act, and a reasonable belief that clients or others will suffer immediate or irreparable harm by the continued practice of law by the attorney or LP, the Adjudicator shall enter an appropriate interlocutory order suspending the attorney’s or LP’s license to practice law until further order of the Adjudicator or the Supreme Court. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies of the order to the parties.

(e) Answer filed; Setting hearing on interlocutory suspension. Upon the timely filing of the attorney’s or LP’s answer pursuant to BR 3.1(c), the Adjudicator shall hold a hearing on the Bar’s petition not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date the answer is filed. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall promptly notify Disciplinary Counsel and the attorney or LP named in the petition of the date, time, and location of the hearing. The hearing shall take place consistently with BR 5.3(a), (b), (c), and (d). At the hearing, the Bar must prove by clear and convincing evidence that one or more rules of professional conduct or provision of the Bar Act has been violated by the attorney or LP named in the petition and that clients or others will suffer immediate or irreparable harm by the continued practice of law by the attorney or LP. Proof that clients or others will suffer immediate or irreparable harm by the continued practice of law by the attorney or LP may include, but is not limited to, establishing within the preceding 12-month period:

1. theft or conversion of funds held by the attorney or LP in any fiduciary capacity, including but not limited to funds that should have been maintained in a lawyer or LP trust account;

2. three or more instances of failure to appear in court on behalf of a client notwithstanding having notice of the setting; or

3. abandoning a practice with no provision of new location or contact information to 3 or more clients.

If the attorney or LP, having been notified of the date, time, and location of the hearing, fails to appear, the Adjudicator may enter an order finding the attorney or LP in default, deeming the allegations contained in the petition to be true, proceed on the basis of that default consistent with BR 3.1(d), and enter an appropriate order. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies of the order to the parties.

(f) Order of Adjudicator; Suspension; Restrictions on Trust Account; Notice to Clients; Custodian; Other Orders. The Adjudicator, upon the record pursuant to BR 3.1(d) or after the hearing provided in 3.1(e), shall enter an appropriate order. If the Adjudicator grants the Bar’s petition and interlocutorily suspends the attorney’s or LP’s license to practice law, the order of suspension shall state an effective date. The suspension shall remain in effect until further order of the Adjudicator or the court. The Adjudicator may enter such other orders as appropriate to protect the interests of the suspended attorney or LP, the suspended attorney’s or LP’s clients, and the public, including, but not limited to:

1. an order that, when served upon a financial institution, serves as an injunction prohibiting withdrawals from the attorney’s or LP’s trust account or accounts except in accordance with restrictions set forth in the Adjudicator’s order.
(2) an order directing the attorney or LP to notify current clients and any affected courts of the attorney’s or LP’s suspension; and to take such steps as are necessary to deliver client property, withdraw from pending matters, and refund any unearned fees.

(3) an order appointing another attorney or LP as custodian to take possession of and inventory the files of the suspended attorney or LP and take such further action as necessary to protect the interests of the suspended attorney’s or LP’s clients. Any attorney or LP so appointed by the court shall not disclose any information contained in any file without the consent of the affected client, except as is necessary to carry out the order of the Adjudicator.

The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies of the order to the parties.

(g) Costs and Expenses. The Adjudicator may direct that the costs and expenses associated with any proceeding under this rule be awarded to the prevailing party. The procedure for the recovery of such costs shall be governed by BR 10.7 as practicable.

(h) Duties of Attorney or LP. An attorney suspended from practice under this rule shall comply with the requirements of BR 6.3(a) and (b). An attorney or LP whose suspension under this rule exceeds 6 months must comply with BR 8.1 to be reinstated. An attorney or LP whose suspension under this rule is 6 months or less must comply with BR 8.2 in order to be reinstated.

(i) Application of Other Rules. Except as specifically provided herein, Title 4, Title 5, and Title 6 of the Rules of Procedure do not apply to proceedings brought pursuant to BR 3.1.

(j) Accelerated Proceedings Following Interlocutory Suspension. When an attorney or LP has been interlocutorily suspended by order entered pursuant to BR 3.1(f), the related formal complaint filed by the Bar shall thereafter proceed and be determined as an accelerated case, without unnecessary delay. The interlocutory suspension shall expire 45 days after date of entry, unless the SPRB authorizes the filing of a formal complaint against the attorney or LP for one or more acts described in the petition as a basis for seeking the interlocutory petition. Unless extended by stipulation of the Bar and the attorney or LP, and approved by the Adjudicator, the further order contemplated by BR 3.1(f) shall be entered not later than 270 days following the entry of the order of interlocutory suspension, subject to continuance for an additional period not to exceed 90 days upon motion filed by the Bar, served upon the attorney or LP, and granted by the Adjudicator.

(k) Supreme Court Review. No later than 14 days after the entry of an order pursuant to BR 3.1(f), Disciplinary Counsel or the attorney or LP who is the subject of an order entered pursuant to BR 3.1(f) may request the Supreme Court to review the Adjudicator’s order, including conducting a de novo review on the record, on an expedited basis. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, an interlocutory order of suspension, if entered, shall remain in effect until the court issues its decision.

(l) Termination of Interlocutory Suspension. In the event the further order of the court contemplated by BR 3.1(f) is not entered within the time provided by BR 3.1(j), the order of interlocutory suspension shall automatically terminate without prejudice to any pending or further disciplinary proceeding against the attorney.

Rule 3.2 Mental Incompetency Or Addiction—
Involuntary Transfer To Inactive Membership Status.

(a) Summary Transfer to Inactive Status.

(1) The Supreme Court may summarily order, upon ex parte application by the Bar, that an attorney or LP be placed on inactive membership status until reinstated by the court if the attorney or LP has been adjudged by a court of competent jurisdiction to be mentally ill or incapacitated.

(2) A copy of the order shall be personally served on the attorney or LP in the same manner as provided by the Oregon Rules of Civil Procedure for service of summons and mailed to his or her guardian, conservator and attorney of record in any guardianship or conservatorship proceeding.

(b) Petition by Bar.

(1) The Bar may petition the court to determine whether an attorney or LP is disabled from continuing to practice law due to:

(A) a personality disorder; or

(B) mental infirmity or illness; or

(C) diminished capacity; or

(D) addiction to drugs, narcotics or intoxicants.

The Bar’s petition shall be mailed to the attorney or LP and to his or her guardian, conservator, and attorney of record in any guardianship or conservatorship proceeding.

(A) On the filing of such a petition, the court may take or direct such action as it deems necessary or proper to determine whether an attorney or LP is disabled. Such action may include, but is not limited to, examination of such attorney or LP by the qualified experts as the court shall designate.

(B) A copy of an order requiring an attorney or LP to appear, for examination or otherwise, shall be mailed by the State Court Administrator to the attorney or LP and to his or her guardian, conservator and attorney of record in any guardianship or conservatorship proceeding and to Disciplinary Counsel.

(C) In the event of a failure by the attorney or LP to appear at the appointed time and place for examination, the court may place the attorney or LP on inactive membership status until further order of the court.

(D) If, upon consideration of the reports of the designated experts or otherwise, the court finds that probable cause exists that the attorney or LP is disabled under the criteria set forth in BR 3.2(b)(1) from continuing to practice law, the court may order the attorney or LP to appear before the court or its designee to show cause why the attorney or LP should not be placed by the court on inactive membership status until reinstated by the court. The State Court Administrator shall mail such a show cause order to the attorney or LP and his or her guardian, conservator and attorney of record in any guardianship or conservatorship proceeding and to Disciplinary Counsel.

(E) After any show cause hearing as the court deems appropriate, if the court finds that the attorney or LP is disabled from continuing to practice law, the court may order the attorney or LP placed on inactive membership status. The State Court Administrator shall mail a copy of an order placing the attorney or LP on inactive membership status to the attorney or LP and his or her guardian, conservator, and attorney of record in any guardianship or conservatorship proceeding, and to Disciplinary Counsel.

(3) Any disciplinary investigation or proceeding pending against an attorney or LP placed by the court on inactive membership status under this rule shall be suspended and held in abeyance until further order of the court.

(c) Disability During Disciplinary Proceedings.

(1) The court may order that an attorney or LP be placed on inactive membership status until reinstated by the court if, during the course of a disciplinary investigation or disciplinary proceeding, the attorney or LP files a petition with the court, with notice to Disciplinary Counsel, alleging that he or she is disabled from understanding the nature of the proceeding against him or her, assisting and cooperating with his or her attorney, or from participating in his or her defense due to:

(A) a personality disorder; or

(B) mental infirmity or illness; or

(C) diminished capacity; or

(D) addiction to drugs, narcotics or intoxicants.

(2) The court shall take or direct such action as it deems necessary or proper as provided in BR 3.2(b) to determine if the attorney or LP is disabled.

(3) The State Court Administrator shall mail a copy of the court’s order to Disciplinary Counsel, Bar Counsel, and the attorney or LP and his or her guardian, conservator, and attorney of record in any guardianship or conservatorship proceeding, and the attorney of record in the Bar’s disciplinary proceeding.

(4) Any disciplinary investigation or proceeding against an attorney or LP who the court places on inactive membership status under this rule shall be suspended and held in abeyance until further order by the court.

(5) If the court determines that the attorney or LP is not disabled under the criteria set forth in BR 3.2(c)(1), it may take such action as it deems necessary or proper, including the issuance of an order that any disciplinary investigation or proceeding against the attorney or LP that is pending or held in abeyance be continued or resumed.

(d) Appointment of Attorney. In any proceeding under this rule, the court may, on such notice as the court shall direct, appoint an attorney or attorneys to represent the attorney or LP if he or she is without representation.

(e) Custodians. In any proceeding under this rule, the court may, on such notice as the court shall direct, appoint an attorney or attorneys to inventory the files of the attorney or LP and to take such action as seems necessary to protect the interests of his or her clients. Any attorney so appointed by the court shall not disclose any information contained in any file without the consent of the affected client, except as is necessary to carry out the order of the court.

(f) Costs and Expenses. The court may direct that the costs and expenses associated with any proceeding under this rule be paid by the attorney or LP, or his or her estate, including compensation fixed by the court to be paid to any attorney or medical expert appointed under this rule. The court may order such hearings as it deems necessary or proper to determine the costs and expenses to be paid under this rule.

(g) Waiver of Privilege.
(1) Under this rule, an attorney’s or LP’s claim of disability in a disciplinary investigation or disciplinary proceeding, or the filing of an application for reinstatement as an active member by an attorney or LP placed on inactive membership status under this rule for disability, shall be deemed a waiver of any privilege existing between the attorney or LP and any doctor or hospital treating him or her during the period of the alleged disability.

(2) The attorney or LP shall, in his or her claim of disability or in his or her application for reinstatement, disclose the name of every doctor or hospital by whom he or she has been treated during his or her disability or since his or her placement on inactive membership status and shall furnish written consent to divulge all such information and all such doctor and hospital records as the Bar or the court may request.

(h) Application of Other Rules.

(1) The Rules of Procedure that apply to the resolution of a formal complaint or statement of objections do not apply to transfers from active to inactive membership status under BR 3.2. The placement of an attorney or LP on inactive membership status under BR 3.2 does not preclude the Bar from filing a formal complaint against the attorney or LP. An attorney or LP placed on inactive membership status under BR 3.2 must comply with the applicable provisions of Title 8 of these rules to obtain reinstatement to active membership status.

(A) An attorney or LP transferred to inactive status under this rule shall not practice law after the effective date of the transfer. This rule shall not preclude the attorney or LP from providing information on the facts of a case and its status to a succeeding attorney or LP, and such information shall be provided on request.

(B) An attorney or LP transferred to inactive status under this rule shall immediately take all reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to any client and to comply with all applicable laws and disciplinary rules.

(C) Notwithstanding BR 3.2(b)(3) and BR 3.2(c)(4), Disciplinary Counsel may petition the court to hold an attorney or LP transferred to inactive status under this rule in contempt for failing to comply with the provisions of BR 3.2(h)(2)(i) and (ii). The court may order the attorney or LP to appear and show cause, if any, why the attorney or LP should not be held in contempt of court and sanctioned accordingly.

(i) At the direction of the court, the duties of the court set forth in this rule may be fulfilled by the Adjudicator. In such instances the duties of the State Court Administrator shall be performed by the Disciplinary Board Clerk.

Rule 3.3 Allegations Of Criminal Conduct Involving Attorneys or LPs.

(a) If the SPRB directs the filing of a formal complaint that alleges acts involving the possible commission of a crime that do not appear to have been the subject of a criminal prosecution, Disciplinary Counsel shall report the possible crime to the appropriate investigatory authority.
(b) On the filing of an accusatory instrument against an attorney or LP for the commission of a misdemeanor that may involve moral turpitude or of a felony, Disciplinary Counsel shall determine whether a disciplinary investigation should be initiated against such attorney or LP.

(Rule 3.3 amended by Order dated March 31, 1989.)
(Rule 3.3(a) and 3.3(b) amended by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)

Rule 3.4 Conviction Of Attorneys or LPs.

(a) Petition for Interlocutory Suspension; Notice to Answer. Upon learning that an attorney or LP has been convicted in any jurisdiction of an offense that is a misdemeanor that may involve moral turpitude, a felony under the laws of this state, or a crime punishable by death or imprisonment under the laws of the United States and determining that immediate and irreparable harm to the attorney’s or LP’s clients or the public is likely to result if a suspension of the attorney’s or LP’s license to practice law is not ordered, Disciplinary Counsel shall petition the Disciplinary Board to interlocutorily suspend the attorney’s or LP’s license to practice law. The petition shall describe the conviction and explain the basis upon Disciplinary Counsel believes that immediate and irreparable harm to the attorney’s or LP’s clients or the public is likely to result if a suspension is not ordered. The petition shall include a copy of the documents that show the conviction and may be supported by documents or affidavits. A “conviction” for purposes of this rule shall be considered to have occurred upon entry of a plea of guilty or no contest or upon entry of a finding or verdict of guilty. The notice to answer shall provide that an answer to the petition must be filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk within 14 days of service and that, absent the timely filing of an answer with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, the relief sought can be obtained. Disciplinary Counsel shall file the petition with the Disciplinary Board Clerk and shall serve a copy, along with the notice to answer, on the attorney or LP pursuant to BR 1.8.

(b) Answer by Attorney or LP. The attorney or LP shall file an answer to the Bar’s petition with the Disciplinary Board Clerk within 14 days of service. The attorney or LP shall mail a copy of the answer to Disciplinary Counsel and file proof of mailing with the Disciplinary Board Clerk.

(c) Default; Entry of Order. The failure of the attorney or LP to answer the Bar’s petition within the time provided in BR 3.4(b) constitutes a waiver of the attorney’s or LP’s right to contest the Bar’s petition, and all factual allegations contained in the petition shall be deemed true. Not earlier than 14 days after service of the petition and in the absence of an answer filed by the attorney or LP named in the petition, the Adjudicator shall review the sufficiency of the petition. If the petition establishes the attorney’s or LP’s conviction of a category of offense described in BR 3.4(a) and a reasonable belief that clients or others will suffer immediate or irreparable harm by the attorney’s or LP’s continued practice of law, the Adjudicator shall enter an appropriate interlocutory order suspending the attorney’s or LP’s license to practice law until further order of the Adjudicator or the Supreme Court. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies of the order to the parties.

(d) Answer filed; Setting hearing on interlocutory suspension. Upon the timely filing of the attorney’s or LP’s answer pursuant to BR 3.4(b), the Adjudicator shall hold a hearing on the Bar’s petition not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after the date the answer is filed. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall promptly notify Disciplinary Counsel and the attorney or LP of the date, time, and location of the hearing. The hearing shall take place consistently with BR 5.3(a), (b), (c), and (d). At the hearing, the Bar must prove by clear and convincing evidence that the attorney or LP has been convicted of a category of offense described in BR 3.4(a) and that clients or others will suffer immediate or irreparable harm by the attorney’s or LP’s continued practice of law. Proof that clients or others will suffer immediate or irreparable harm by the attorney’s or LP’s continued practice of law may include, but is not limited to, establishing that a period of incarceration was imposed on the attorney or LP as a result of the conviction. If the attorney or LP, having been notified of the date, time, and location of the hearing, fails to appear, the Adjudicator may enter an order finding the attorney or LP in default, deeming the allegations contained in the petition to be true, proceed on the basis of that default consistent with BR 3.4(c), and enter an appropriate order.
(e) Order of Adjudicator; Suspension; Restrictions on Trust Account; Notice to Clients; Custodian; Other Orders. The Adjudicator, upon the record pursuant to BR 3.4(c) or after the hearing provided in BR 3.4(d), shall enter an appropriate order. If the Adjudicator grants the Bar’s petition and interlocutorily suspends the attorney’s or LP’s license to practice law, the order of suspension shall state an effective date. The suspension shall remain in effect until further order of the Adjudicator or the court. The Adjudicator may enter such other orders as appropriate to protect the interests of the suspended attorney or LP, the suspended attorney’s or LP’s clients, and the public, including, but not limited to:

1. an order that, when served upon a financial institution, serves as an injunction prohibiting withdrawals from the attorney’s or LP’s trust account or accounts except in accordance with restrictions set forth in the Adjudicator’s order.

2. an order directing the attorney or LP to notify current clients and any affected courts of the attorney’s or LP’s suspension; and to take such steps as are necessary to deliver client property, withdraw from pending matters, and refund any unearned fees.

3. an order appointing an attorney as custodian to take possession of and inventory the files of the suspended attorney or LP and take such further action as necessary to protect the interests of the suspended attorney’s or LP’s clients. Any attorney so appointed by the Adjudicator shall not disclose any information contained in any file without the consent of the affected client, except as is necessary to carry out the order of the Adjudicator.

The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies of the order to the parties.

(f) Costs and Expenses. The Adjudicator may direct that the costs and expenses associated with any proceeding under this rule be allowed to the prevailing party. The procedure for the recovery of such costs shall be governed by BR 10.7 as practicable.

(g) Duties of Attorney or LP. An attorney or LP suspended from practice under this rule shall comply with the requirements of BR 6.3(a), (b), and (c). An attorney or LP whose suspension under this rule exceeds 6 months must comply with BR 8.1 to be reinstated. An attorney or LP whose suspension under this rule is 6 months or less must comply with BR 8.2 to be reinstated.

(h) Application of Other Rules. Except as specifically provided herein, Title 4, Title 5, and Title 6 of the Rules of Procedure do not apply to proceedings brought pursuant to BR 3.4.

(i) Supreme Court Review. No later than 14 days of the entry of an order pursuant to BR 3.4(e), Disciplinary Counsel or the attorney or LP who is the subject of an order entered pursuant to BR 3.4(e) may request the Supreme Court to review the Adjudicator’s order, including conducting a de novo review on the record, on an expedited basis. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, an interlocutory order of suspension, if entered, shall remain in effect until the court issues its decision.

(j) Independent Charges. Whether or not interlocutory suspension is sought pursuant to BR 3.4(a), the SPRB may direct Disciplinary Counsel to file a formal complaint against the attorney or LP based upon the fact of the attorney’s or LP’s conviction or the underlying conduct.

(k) Relief From Suspension. If an attorney’s or LP’s conviction is reversed on appeal, and such reversal is not subject to further appeal or review, or the attorney or LP has been granted a new trial and the order granting a new trial has become final, any suspension or discipline previously ordered based solely on the conviction shall be vacated upon the Disciplinary Board’s receipt of the judgment of reversal or order granting the attorney or LP a new trial. Reversal of the attorney’s or LP’s conviction on appeal or the granting of a new trial does not require the termination of any disciplinary proceeding based upon the same facts which gave rise to the conviction.

(Rule 3.4(d) amended by Order dated March 13, 1989, effective April 1, 1989.)

Rule 3.5 Reciprocal Discipline.

(a) Petition; Notice to Answer. Upon learning that an attorney or LP has been disciplined for misconduct in another jurisdiction not predicated upon a prior discipline of the attorney or LP pursuant to these rules, Disciplinary Counsel shall file with the Disciplinary Board Clerk a petition seeking reciprocal discipline of the attorney or LP. The petition shall include a copy of the judgment, order, or determination of discipline in the other jurisdiction; may be supported by other documents or affidavits; and shall contain a recommendation as to the imposition of discipline in Oregon, based on the discipline in the jurisdiction whose action is reported, and such other information as the Bar deems appropriate. A plea of no contest, a stipulation for discipline, or a resignation while formal charges are pending is considered a judgment or order of discipline for the purposes of this rule. If the Bar seeks imposition of a sanction greater than that imposed in the other jurisdiction, it shall state with specificity the sanction sought and provide applicable legal authority to support its position. The notice to answer shall provide that an answer to the petition must be filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk within 21 days of service and that, absent the timely filing of an answer with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, the relief sought can be obtained. Disciplinary Counsel shall file the petition with the Disciplinary Board Clerk and shall serve a copy, along with the notice to answer, on the attorney or LP pursuant to BR 1.8.

(b) Order of Judgment; Sufficient Evidence of Misconduct; Rebuttable Presumption. A copy of the judgment, order, or determination of discipline shall be sufficient evidence for the purposes of this rule that the attorney or LP committed the misconduct on which the other jurisdiction’s discipline was based. There is a rebuttable presumption that the sanction to be imposed shall be equivalent, to the extent reasonably practicable, to the sanction imposed in the other jurisdiction.

(c) Answer of Attorney or LP. The attorney or LP has 21 days from service to file with the Disciplinary Board an answer addressing whether:

(1) The procedure in the jurisdiction which disciplined the attorney or LP was so lacking in notice or opportunity to be heard as to constitute a deprivation of due process;

(2) The conduct for which the attorney or LP was disciplined in the other jurisdiction is conduct that should subject the attorney or LP to discipline in Oregon; and

(3) The imposition of a sanction equivalent to the sanction imposed in the other jurisdiction would result in grave injustice or be offensive to public policy.

The attorney or LP shall mail a copy of his or her answer to Disciplinary Counsel and file proof of mailing with the Disciplinary Board Clerk.

(d) Default; Hearing. If no answer is timely filed, the Adjudicator may proceed to the entry of an appropriate judgment based upon review of the record. If an answer is timely filed that asserts a defense pursuant to BR 3.5(c)(1), (2), or (3), the Adjudicator, in his or her discretion, based upon a review of the petition, answer, and any supporting documents filed by either the Bar or the attorney or LP, may either determine on the basis of the record whether the attorney or LP should be disciplined in Oregon for misconduct in another jurisdiction and if so, in what manner, or may determine that testimony will be taken solely on the issues set forth in the answer pertaining to BR 3.5(c)(1), (2), and (3). The Adjudicator shall enter an appropriate order. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies of the order to the parties. The Adjudicator’s decision shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court, as authorized in Title 10 of these rules. On review by the court, the sanction imposed in the other jurisdiction may be a factor for consideration but does not operate as a rebuttable presumption.
(e) Burden of Proof. The attorney or LP has the burden of proving in any hearing held pursuant to BR 3.5(f) that due process of law was not afforded the attorney or LP in the other jurisdiction.

(f) Hearing by Trial Panel; Review by Supreme Court. If the Adjudicator decides to take testimony pursuant to BR 3.5(e), the Adjudicator shall request the regional chairperson to appoint an attorney member and a public member to serve on the trial panel. Upon receiving notice from the Disciplinary Board Clerk of a regional chairperson’s appointment of an attorney member and a public member pursuant to BR 2.4(f)(1), and upon determining that either no timely challenge pursuant to BR 2.4(g) was filed or that a timely filed challenge pursuant to BR 2.4(g) has either been denied or resulted in the appointment of a substitute member or members, the Adjudicator shall promptly establish the date and place of the evidentiary hearing no less than 21 days and no more than 42 days thereafter. BR 5.1 and BR 5.3 apply to the evidentiary hearing. The trial panel shall make a decision concerning the issues submitted to it. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies of the order to the parties. The trial panel’s decision shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court as authorized in Title 10 of these rules. On review by the court, the sanction imposed in the other jurisdiction may be a factor for consideration but does not operate as a rebuttable presumption.

(g) Application of Other Rules. Except as specifically provided herein, Title 4, Title 5, and Title 6 of the Rules of Procedure do not apply to proceedings brought pursuant to BR 3.5.

(h) Suspension or Disbarment. An attorney or LP suspended or disbarred under this rule shall comply with the requirements of BR 6.3(a), (b), and (c).

(i) Reinstatement Rules Apply. The rules on reinstatement apply to attorneys or LPs suspended or disbarred pursuant to the procedure set forth in BR 3.5(d), (e), and (f).

(j) Independent Charges. Nothing in this rule precludes the Bar from filing a formal complaint against an attorney or LP for misconduct in any jurisdiction.

Rule 3.6 Discipline By Consent.

(b) No Contest Plea. A plea of no contest to all causes or any cause of a formal complaint, or to allegations of misconduct if a formal complaint has not been filed, shall be verified by the respondent and shall include:

1. A statement that the respondent freely and voluntarily make the plea;
2. A statement that the respondent does not desire to defend against the formal complaint or any designated cause thereof, or against an allegation of misconduct not yet pled;
3. A statement that the respondent agrees to accept a designated form of discipline in exchange for the no contest plea; and
4. A statement of the respondent’s prior record of reprimand, suspension or disbarment, or absence of such record.

(c) Stipulation for Discipline. A stipulation for discipline shall be verified by the respondent and shall include:
3.6(h)(1), and 3.6(h)(2); Rule 3.6(a), 3.6(b), 3.6(c), 3.6(d), 3.6(e), 3.6(f), 3.6(g), 3.6(h), 3.6(i), 3.6(j), 3.6(k), 3.6(l), 3.6(m), 3.6(n), 3.6(o), 3.6(p), 3.6(q), 3.6(r), 3.6(s), 3.6(t), 3.6(u), 3.6(v), 3.6(w), 3.6(x), 3.6(y), 3.6(z), and 3.6(h) redesignated as Rule 3.6(b)(1), 3.6(b)(2), 3.6(b)(3), 3.6(b)(4), 3.6(c)(1), 3.6(c)(2), 3.6(c)(3), 3.6(c)(4), 3.6(h)(1), and 3.6(h)(2); Rule 3.6(a), 3.6(b), 3.6(b)(1), 3.6(b)(2), 3.6(b)(3), 3.6(b)(4), 3.6(c), 3.6(c)(1), 3.6(c)(2), 3.6(c)(3), 3.6(c)(4), 3.6(d), 3.6(e), 3.6(f), 3.6(g), 3.6(h), 3.6(h)(1), and 3.6(h)(2) amended by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)

(4) A statement of the respondent’s prior record of reprimand, suspension or disbarment, or absence of such record.

(d) Approval of SPRB. Pleas of no contest and stipulations shall be approved as to form by Disciplinary Counsel and approved in substance by the chairperson of the SPRB or a member of the SPRB designated by the chairperson. If the plea or stipulation is acceptable to the respondent and the SPRB chairperson or designated member, and if the full term of the discipline agreed upon does not exceed a 6-month suspension, Disciplinary Counsel shall submit it to the Disciplinary Board Clerk for review by the Adjudicator, acting on behalf of the Disciplinary Board. Otherwise, Disciplinary Counsel shall file the stipulation with the State Court Administrator for review by the Supreme Court.

(e) Review by Adjudicator or Supreme Court. The Adjudicator or the court, as the case may be, shall review the plea or stipulation. If the Adjudicator approves the plea or stipulation, an order shall be issued so stating and filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, and the Clerk shall provide copies to Disciplinary Counsel and the respondent. If the court approves the plea or stipulation, an order shall be issued so stating. If the plea or stipulation is rejected by the Adjudicator or the court, it may not be used as evidence of misconduct against the respondent in the pending or in any subsequent disciplinary proceeding.

(f) Costs. In matters submitted under this rule that are resolved by a decision of the Disciplinary Board, the Bar may file a cost bill with the Disciplinary Board Clerk within 21 days of the filing of the decision of the Disciplinary Board. The Bar must serve a copy of the cost bill on the respondent pursuant to BR 1.8. To contest the Bar’s statement of costs, the respondent must file an objection supported by a declaration under penalty of perjury with the Disciplinary Board Clerk within 7 days from the date of service. The respondent shall mail a copy of the objection to Disciplinary Counsel and file proof of mailing with the Disciplinary Board Clerk. If the matter is resolved by a decision of the court, the Bar’s cost bill and the respondent’s objections must be filed with the court within the same time period, accompanied by proof of service on the other party. (g) Supplementing Record. (h) Confidentiality. A plea or stipulation prepared for the Adjudicator or the court’s consideration shall not be subject to public disclosure:

(1) prior to Adjudicator or court approval of the plea or stipulation; or

(2) if rejected by the Adjudicator or court.

Title 4 — Prehearing Procedure

Rule 4.1 Formal Complaint.

(a) Designation of Counsel and Region. If the SPRB determines that probable cause exists to believe an attorney or LP has engaged in misconduct and that formal proceedings are warranted, it shall refer the matter to Disciplinary Counsel with instructions to file a formal complaint against the attorney or LP, who then becomes the respondent. Disciplinary Counsel, being so advised, may appoint Bar Counsel.

(b) Filing. Disciplinary Counsel shall prepare and file with the Disciplinary Board Clerk a formal complaint against the respondent on behalf of the Bar. The formal complaint shall be in substantially the form set forth in BR 13.1.

(c) Substance of Formal Complaint. A formal complaint shall be signed by Disciplinary Counsel, or his or her designee, and shall set forth succinctly the acts or omissions of the respondent, including the specific statutes or rules of professional conduct violated, so as to enable the respondent to know the nature of the charge or charges against the respondent. When more than one act or transaction is relied upon, the allegations shall be separately stated and numbered. The formal complaint need not be verified.

(d) Amendment of Formal Complaint. Disciplinary Counsel may amend the formal complaint on behalf of the Bar subject to the requirements of BR 4.4(b) as to any grievance the SPRB has instructed Disciplinary Counsel to file a formal complaint pursuant to BR 4.1(a) and BR 4.1(e).

(e) Consolidation of Charges and Proceedings. The Bar, at the SPRB’s direction, may consolidate in a formal complaint two or more causes of complaint against the same attorney or LP or attorneys or LPs, but shall file a separate formal complaint against each respondent. The findings and conclusions thereon may be either joint or separate, as the trial panel, in its discretion, may determine. The Bar, at the discretion of the SPRB, may also consolidate formal complaints against two or more attorneys or LPs for hearing before one trial panel.

(f) Appointment of Trial Panel. Within 30 days following respondent’s timely filing of an answer pursuant to BR 4.3, Disciplinary Counsel shall file a request with the Disciplinary Board Clerk that the regional chairperson appoint an attorney and a public member to serve on the trial panel with the Adjudicator.

(d) Service of Amended Formal Complaint. An amended formal complaint may be served by mail, provided the original formal complaint was served on the respondent in the manner provided by BR 4.2(a) or (b).
(e) Disregard of Error. Failure to comply with any provision of this rule or BR 1.12 shall not affect the validity of service if the respondent received actual notice of the substance and pendency of the disciplinary proceedings.

The Adjudicator shall respond to the request in writing and shall file a copy of the response with the Disciplinary Board Clerk.

(c) Form of Answer. The respondent’s answer shall be responsive to the formal complaint filed. General denials are not allowed. (b) Amendments.

(1) Disciplinary Counsel may amend a formal complaint at any time after filing, subject to any limitation that may be imposed by the Adjudicator as to timing or content in any prehearing order entered pursuant to BR 4.7, in amplification of the original charges, to add new charges, or to withdraw charges. If an amendment is made, the respondent shall file an answer to the amended formal complaint within 14 days of service. Upon request by respondent for good cause shown, the Adjudicator may give the respondent a reasonable time to procure evidence and to prepare to meet the matters raised by the amended formal complaint.

(2) The respondent may amend an answer at any time after filing, subject to any limitations that may be imposed by the Adjudicator as to timing or content in any prehearing order entered pursuant to BR 4.7. If an answer is amended, the Bar shall be given a reasonable time, set by the Adjudicator, to procure evidence and to prepare to meet the matters raised by the amended answer.

(c) Adjudicator Authority. Upon application of either the Bar or the respondent, the Adjudicator may extend the time for filing any pleading or for filing any document required or permitted to be submitted to the trial panel, except as otherwise provided in these rules.

Upon expiration of the time for response, the Adjudicator shall promptly rule on the motion, with or without argument at the Adjudicator’s discretion. Argument on any motion may be heard by conference telephone call. The Adjudicator shall file rulings on discovery motions with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, and the Clerk shall mail copies to the parties.

(e) Discovery Sanctions. For failure to provide discovery as required under BR 4.5, the Adjudicator may make such rulings as are just, including, but not limited to, the following:

(1) A ruling that the matters regarding which the ruling was made or any other designated fact are taken to be established for the purposes of the proceeding in accordance with the claim of the party obtaining the ruling; or

(2) A ruling refusing to allow the disobedient party to support or oppose designated claims or defenses, or prohibiting the disobedient party from introducing designated matters in evidence.
Any witness who testifies falsely, fails to appear when subpoenaed, or fails to produce any documents pursuant to subpoena is subject to the same orders and penalties to which a witness before a circuit court is subject. Upon notification from the Disciplinary Board Clerk that a timely request for a BR 4.6 conference has been filed, the Adjudicator shall appoint a member of the Disciplinary Board to serve as the presiding member and conduct the BR 4.6 conference. A conference shall be held no later than 21 days before the scheduled hearing date and shall not exceed one business day in length. The respondent, counsel for the respondent, if any, and Disciplinary Counsel must attend. The purpose of the conference is to narrow factual and legal issues in dispute for trial and to facilitate discussion regarding discipline by consent under BR 3.6, if appropriate. Except for those facts admitted and denied in the prehearing order, under BR 4.7, no oral or written statements or admissions made at or in connection with the prehearing conference shall be admitted as evidence in this or any subsequent Bar disciplinary proceeding. No member of the trial panel appointed in the proceeding shall conduct or participate in the prehearing conference.

(b) At the conclusion of the BR 4.6 conference, the presiding member shall enter an order setting forth agreed and disputed facts and elements of the violations alleged. In the absence of any agreement, the presiding member shall enter an order indicating that the BR 4.6 conference was held and that no agreements resulted. The presiding member shall file the order with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, with copies sent by the Disciplinary Board Clerk to the parties. Agreed facts shall be deemed admitted and need not be proven at the hearing before the trial panel.

Such prehearing conference is intended to facilitate the efficient conduct of the proceeding and may include discussing the parties’ respective estimates of time necessary to present evidence, the availability and scheduling of witnesses, and the preparation of trial exhibits; and the scheduling of pleading amendment and discovery deadlines.
(b) At the conclusion of a prehearing conference, the Adjudicator shall enter an order setting forth all matters discussed and addressed, including any deadlines imposed. The parties may employ the services of a mediator, other than a member of the Disciplinary Board, to determine the potential for, and to assist the parties in negotiating a settlement of issues in dispute. Mediation is voluntary; both parties must agree to participate in the mediation. The SPRB shall decide for the Bar whether to mediate.

(b) Time of Mediation. Mediation may occur at any time after the filing of the formal complaint, provided that the mediation shall not delay a hearing before a trial panel scheduled in accordance with BR 5.4. After a trial panel issues a written opinion in the proceeding pursuant to BR 2.4(i)(2), mediation may occur only if authorized by the Adjudicator.

Incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial, and unduly repetitious evidence should be excluded at any hearing conducted pursuant to these rules.
(b) Harmless Error. No error in procedure, in admitting or excluding evidence, or in ruling on evidentiary or discovery questions shall invalidate a finding or decision unless upon a review of the record as a whole, a determination is made that a denial of a fair hearing to either the Bar or the respondent has occurred.

(Rule 5.1(a) amended by Order dated February 23, 1988.)
(Rule 5.1(a) and 5.1(b) amended by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)

With the respondent’s consent, the hearing may be held elsewhere. For any proceeding brought pursuant to these rules other than Title 4 in which the attorney or LP the subject of the proceeding maintains an office or residence in Oregon, and for any proceeding brought pursuant to these rules in which the attorney or LP the subject of the proceeding does not maintain an office or residence in Oregon, the Adjudicator shall designate a location for the hearing.

Any witness who testifies falsely, fails to appear when subpoenaed, or fails to produce any documents pursuant to subpoena, is subject to the same orders and penalties to which a witness before a circuit court is subject. Subpoenas issued pursuant to this rule may be enforced by application of either party to any circuit court. The circuit court shall determine what sanction to impose, if any, for noncompliance.

(c) Board Members as Witnesses. Current members of the Board of Governors shall not testify as witnesses in any Bar admission, discipline or reinstatement proceeding except pursuant to subpoena.

(d) Testimony. Witnesses shall testify under oath or affirmation administered by any member of the Disciplinary Board or by any person authorized by law to administer an oath.

(e) Transcript of Proceedings; Correction of Errors; Settlement Order. Every disciplinary hearing shall be transcribed and shall comply with the Oregon Rules of Appellate Procedure as to form. The transcription shall be certified by the person preparing it. The reporter shall give written notice to Disciplinary Counsel, Bar Counsel, and the respondent of the filing of the transcripts with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, who shall provide copies to the Adjudicator. Within 14 days after the transcript is filed, the Bar or the respondent may move the Adjudicator for an order to correct any errors appearing in the transcript, by filing a motion with the Disciplinary Board Clerk and serving the other party. Within 7 days the Bar or the respondent, as the case may be, may file a response to the motion with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, serving a copy on the other party. The Adjudicator shall thereafter either deny the motion or direct the making of such corrections as may be appropriate. Upon the denial of the motion or the making of such corrections, the Adjudicator shall file with the Disciplinary Board Clerk an order settling the transcript and the Disciplinary Board clerk shall send copies to the parties.

(Rule 5.3(a) amended by Order dated July 22, 1991.)
Rule 5.4 Hearing Date; Continuances.

Except in matters of default pursuant to BR 5.8, the Adjudicator shall establish the hearing date, which shall not be less than 91 days nor more than 182 days following the date the Adjudicator notifies the parties of the date and time for hearing pursuant to BR 2.4(e)(8). The Adjudicator may grant continuances of the hearing date at any time prior to the hearing or upon a showing of compelling necessity therefor, the trial panel may grant continuances at the time of the hearing. In no event shall continuances exceed 56 days in the aggregate.

Rule 5.5 Prior Record.

(a) Defined. “Prior record” means any contested admission, disciplinary or reinstatement decision of the Disciplinary Board or the Supreme Court that has become final.

(b) Restrictions on Admissibility. At the fact-finding hearing in a disciplinary proceeding, a respondent’s prior record or lack thereof shall not be admissible to prove the character of a respondent or to impeach his or her credibility.

Rule 5.6 Evidence Of Prior Acts Of Misconduct.

Evidence of prior acts of misconduct on the part of a respondent is admissible in a disciplinary proceeding for such purposes as proof of motive, opportunity, intent, preparation, plan, knowledge, identity, or absence of mistake or accident.

Rule 5.7 Consideration Of Sanctions.

Trial panels may receive evidence relating to the imposition of a sanction during a hearing, but are not to consider that evidence until after a determination is made that the respondent is in violation of a rule of professional conduct or statute. Only when the Adjudicator considers it appropriate because of the complexity of the case or the seriousness of the charge or charges, the trial panel may be reconvened to consider evidence in aggravation or mitigation of the misconduct found to have occurred.

Rule 5.8 Default.

(a) Failure to Answer or Appear. If a respondent fails to resign or file an answer to a formal complaint within the time allowed by these rules, or if a respondent fails to appear at a hearing set pursuant to BR 2.4(e)(8), the Adjudicator may file with the Disciplinary Board Clerk an order finding the respondent in default under this rule and, if so, shall request the regional chairperson to appoint an attorney member and a public member to serve on the trial panel. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies of the order of default to the parties. The trial panel shall thereafter deem the allegations in the formal complaint to be true and either issue its written opinion based on the formal complaint, or, in its sole discretion, after considering evidence or legal authority limited to the issue of sanction. Following entry of an order of default, the respondent is not entitled to further notice in the disciplinary proceeding under consideration, except as may be required by these rules or by statute. The trial panel shall not, absent good cause, continue or delay proceedings due to a respondent’s failure to answer or appear.

(b) Setting Aside Default. At any time prior to a trial panel’s issuing its written opinion, the trial panel may set aside an order of default upon a showing by the respondent that the respondent’s failure to resign, answer, or appear timely was the result of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. If a trial panel has issued its opinion, a respondent must file any motion to set aside an order of default with the Supreme Court.

Rule 5.9 Attorney Assistance Evidence.

(a) Definition. For the purposes of this rule, an "attorney assistance program" is any treatment, counseling, training or remedial service, created under ORS 9.568 or otherwise, designed to provide assistance to attorneys or LPs who are suffering from impairment or other circumstances which may adversely affect their professional competence or conduct, or to provide advice and training to attorneys or LPs in practice management.

(b) Use of Evidence by Respondent. Subject to the provisions of BR 5.1(a) and this rule, the respondent may offer evidence at a disciplinary hearing concerning the respondent’s participation in or communication with an attorney assistance program. If the respondent fails to provide timely notice to Disciplinary Counsel as required under BR 5.9(c), the respondent may not offer evidence of the respondent’s participation in or communication with an attorney assistance program at the hearing.

(c) Prior Notice. If the respondent intends to offer evidence at a hearing concerning the respondent’s participation in or communication with an attorney assistance program, the respondent shall file with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, with proof of service on Disciplinary Counsel, written notice of such intent, not less than 63 days prior to the date the hearing is scheduled to commence. For good cause shown, the Adjudicator may permit the respondent to give the notice within a shorter period of time. The notice shall specify the identity of the attorney assistance program, the nature of the evidence that will be offered, the names of the service providers with whom the respondent dealt, and the names and addresses of witnesses the respondent intends to call to present the evidence. The notice shall also include the consent or waiver required by BR 5.9(d). The respondent shall provide a copy of the notice to the attorney assistance program.

(d) Discovery. In the event the respondent provides a notice to Disciplinary Counsel under BR 5.9(c), Disciplinary Counsel may conduct discovery concerning the respondent’s participation in or communication with the attorney assistance program. The respondent shall provide any consent or waiver necessary to permit Disciplinary Counsel to obtain discovery from the attorney assistance program or its service providers at the time the respondent provides the notice required by BR 5.9(c). Questions regarding the permissible scope of discovery under this rule shall be resolved by the Adjudicator on motion pursuant to BR 4.5(c).

(e) Discovery not Public. Records and information obtained by Disciplinary Counsel through discovery under this rule are not be subject to public disclosure pursuant to BR 1.7(b), consistent with ORS 9.568(3), and may be disclosed by the parties only in the disciplinary proceeding.

(f) Use of Evidence by Bar. The Bar shall have the right to introduce evidence obtained through discovery under this rule only if the respondent introduces evidence of participation in or communication with an attorney assistance program.
(g) Enforcement. The Adjudicator may issue a protective order and impose sanctions to enforce this rule pursuant to BR 4.5(d) and (e).

Title 6 — Sanctions And Other Remedies

Rule 6.1 Sanctions.

(a) Disciplinary Proceedings. The dispositions or sanctions in disciplinary proceedings or matters brought pursuant to BR 3.4 or 3.5 are

(1) dismissal of any charge or all charges;
(2) public reprimand;
(3) suspension for periods from 30 days to five years;
(4) a suspension for any period designated in BR 6.1(a)(3) which may be stayed in whole or in part on the condition that designated probationary terms are met; or
(5) disbarment.

In conjunction with a disposition or sanction referred to in this rule, a respondent may be required to make restitution of some or all of the money, property, or fees received by the respondent in the representation of a client, or reimbursement to the Client Security Fund.

(b) Contested Reinstatement Proceedings. In contested reinstatement cases a determination shall be made whether the applicant shall be

(1) denied reinstatement;
(2) reinstated conditionally, subject to probationary terms; or
(3) reinstated unconditionally.

(c) Time Period Before Application and Reapplication. The Supreme Court may require an applicant whose admission or reinstatement has been denied to wait a period of time designated by the court before reapplying for admission or reinstatement.

(d) Effect of Disbarment. An attorney disbarred as a result of a disciplinary proceeding commenced by formal complaint before January 1, 1996, may not apply for reinstatement until five years have elapsed from the effective date of his or her disbarment. An attorney or LP disbarred as a result of a disciplinary proceeding commenced by formal complaint after December 31, 1995, shall never be eligible to apply and shall not be considered for admission under ORS 9.220 or reinstatement under Title 8 of these rules.

(Rule 6.1(a) amended by Order dated February 5, 2001.)
(Rule 6.1(a)(iii) – 6.1(a)(v) and 6.1(b) – 6.1(d) amended by Order dated October 19, 2009.)
Rule 6.2 Probation.

(a) Authority in Disciplinary Proceedings. Upon determining that a respondent should be suspended, the trial panel may decide to stay execution of the suspension, in whole or in part, and place the respondent on probation for a period no longer than three years. The imposition of a probationary term shall not affect the criteria established by statute and these rules for Supreme Court review of trial panel decisions. Probation, if ordered, may be under such conditions as the trial panel or the court considers appropriate. Such conditions may include, but are not limited to, requiring alcohol or drug treatment; requiring medical care; requiring psychological or psychiatric care; requiring professional office practice or management counseling; and requiring periodic audits or reports. In any case where an attorney or LP is placed on probation pursuant to this rule, the Adjudicator or the court may appoint a suitable person or persons to supervise the probation. Cooperation with any person so appointed shall be a condition of the probation.

(b) Authority in Contested Reinstatement Proceedings. Upon determining that an applicant should be readmitted to membership in the Oregon State Bar, the trial panel may decide to place the applicant on probation for a period no longer than three years. The probationary terms may include, but are not limited to, those provided in BR 6.2(a). The court may adopt, in whole or in part, the trial panel’s decision regarding probation and enter an appropriate order upon a review of the proceeding. The court may appoint a suitable person or persons to supervise the probation. Cooperation with any person so appointed shall be a condition of the probation. An attorney or LP placed on probation pursuant to this rule may have his or her probation revoked for a violation of any probationary term by petition of Disciplinary Counsel in accordance with the procedures set forth in BR 6.2(d). An attorney or LP whose probation is revoked shall be suspended from the practice of law until further order of the court.

(c) Disciplinary Board. In all cases where the trial panel determines that the respondent should be suspended and the determination is not reviewed by the court, thereby resulting in such determination becoming final, the decision that the respondent be placed on probation under the conditions specified in the trial panel’s opinion shall be deemed adopted and made a part of the determination.

(d) Revocation Petition; Service; Trial Panel; Setting Hearing. Disciplinary Counsel may petition the Adjudicator or the court, as the case may be, to revoke the probation of any attorney or LP for violation of any probationary term imposed by a trial panel or the court, serving the attorney or LP with a copy of the petition pursuant to BR 1.8. The Adjudicator or the court, as the case may be, may order the attorney or LP to appear and show cause why probation should not be revoked and the original sanction imposed; the court also may refer the matter to the Disciplinary Board for hearing. When revocation of a trial panel probation is sought or the court has referred the matter to the Disciplinary Board for hearing, the Adjudicator shall appoint trial panel members pursuant to BR 2.4(e)(7) to serve with the Adjudicator on a trial panel that will conduct the show cause hearing and, where applicable, report back to the court. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall notify the attorney or LP and Disciplinary Counsel in writing of the members to serve on the trial panel. BR 2.4(g) applies. After any timely filed challenges have been ruled upon and any substitute members have been appointed, the Adjudicator shall promptly enter an order that the attorney or LP appear and show cause why probation should not be revoked and the original sanction imposed, and that establishes the date, place, and time of the show cause hearing, which must be held not less than 21 days later. The Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send the parties a copy of the show cause order. At the hearing, Disciplinary Counsel has the burden of proving by clear and convincing evidence that the attorney or LP has violated a material term of probation. If the attorney or LP, after being served with a copy of the petition and sent a copy of the show cause order, fails to appear at the hearing, the trial panel shall deem the allegations in the petition to be true and proceed to issue its written opinion based on the petition. If the revocation matter is within the jurisdiction of the Disciplinary Board, the trial panel’s decision shall be filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, and the Disciplinary Board Clerk shall send copies to the parties. If the revocation matter is within the court’s jurisdiction, the trial panel appointed to conduct the show cause hearing shall report back to the court, and the court shall thereafter rule on the petition. A petition for revocation of an attorney’s or LP’s probation shall not preclude the Bar from filing independent disciplinary charges based on the same conduct as alleged in the petition.
(e) Application of Other Rules. Except as specifically provided herein, Title 4 and Title 5 of the Rules of Procedure do not apply to proceedings brought pursuant to BR 6.2(d).

(Rule 6.2(b) amended by Order dated July 22, 1991.)
(Rule 6.2(d) amended by Order dated February 5, 2001. Amended by Order dated June 17, 2003, effective July 1, 2003.)
(Rule 6.2(a), 6.2(b), 6.2(c), and 6.2(d) amended and Rule 6.2(e) added by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)

Rule 6.3 Duties Upon Disbarment Or Suspension.

(a) Attorney or LP to Discontinue Practice. A disbarred or suspended attorney or LP shall not practice law after the effective date of disbarment or suspension. This rule shall not preclude a disbarred or suspended attorney or LP from providing information on the facts of a case and its status to a succeeding attorney or LP, and such information shall be provided on request.

(b) Responsibilities. It shall be the duty of a disbarred or suspended attorney or LP to immediately take all reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to any client and to comply with all applicable laws and disciplinary rules.

(c) Notice; Return of Client Property. When, as a result of the disbarment or suspension, any active client matter will be left for which no other active member of the Bar, with the consent of the client, has agreed to resume responsibility, the disbarred or suspended attorney or LP shall give written notice of the cessation of practice to the affected clients, opposing parties, courts, agencies, and any other person or entity having reason to be informed of the cessation of practice. Such notice shall be given no later than 14 days after the effective date of the disbarment or suspension. In the case of a disbarment or a suspension of more than 60 days, client property pertaining to any active client matter shall be delivered to the client or an active member of the Bar designated by the client as substitute counsel.

(d) Contempt. Disciplinary Counsel may petition the Supreme Court to hold a disbarred or suspended attorney or LP in contempt for failing to comply with the provisions of BR 6.3(a), (b), or (c). The court may order the attorney or LP to appear and show cause, if any, why the attorney or LP should not be held in contempt of court and sanctioned accordingly.

(Rule 6.3 amended by Order dated March 13, 1989, effective April 1, 1989.)
(Former Rule 6.3(c) redesignated as Rule 6.3(d); Rule 6.3(c) added; and Rule 6.3(d) amended by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)

Rule 6.4 Ethics School.

(a) An attorney or LP sanctioned under BR 6.1(a)(2), (a)(3) or (a)(i4) shall successfully complete a one-day course of study developed and offered by the Bar on the subjects of legal ethics, professional responsibility and law office management. Successful completion requires that the attorney or LP attend in person the course offered by the Bar and pay the attendance fee established by the Bar.

(b) An attorney or LP reprimanded under BR 6.1(a)(2) who does not successfully complete the course of study when the course is next offered by the Bar following the effective date of the reprimand may be suspended from the practice of law upon order of the Adjudicator, until the attorney or LP successfully completes the course.

(c) An attorney or LP suspended under BR 6.1(a)(iii) or (a)(iv) shall not be reinstated until the attorney or LP successfully completes the course of study, unless the course is not offered before the attorney’s or LP’s term of suspension expires, in which case the attorney or LP may be reinstated if otherwise eligible under applicable provisions of Title 8 of these Rules until the course is next offered by the Bar. If the attorney or LP does not successfully complete the course when it is next offered, the attorney or LP may be suspended from the practice of law upon order of the Adjudicator, until the attorney or LP successfully completes the course.
(d) Notwithstanding the provisions of BR 6.4(b) and (c), an extension of time in which to complete the ethics school requirement may be granted by the Bar or the Adjudicator, as the case may be, for good cause shown.

(Rule 6.4 added by Order dated December 10, 2010, effective June 1, 2011.)
(Rule 6.4(a), 6.4(b), 6.4(c), and 6.4(d) amended by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)

Title 7 — Suspension for Failure to Respond in a Disciplinary Investigation

Rule 7.1 Suspension for Failure to Respond to a Subpoena.

(a) Petition for Suspension. When an attorney or LP fails without good cause to timely respond to a request from Disciplinary Counsel for information or records, or fails to respond to a subpoena issued pursuant to BR 2.2(b)(2), Disciplinary Counsel may petition the Disciplinary Board for an order immediately suspending the attorney or LP until such time as the attorney or LP responds to the request or complies with the subpoena. A petition under this rule shall allege that the attorney or LP has not responded to requests for information or records or has not complied with a subpoena, and has not asserted a good-faith objection to responding or complying. The petition shall be supported by a declaration setting forth the efforts undertaken by Disciplinary Counsel to obtain the attorney’s or LP’s response or compliance.

(b) Procedure. Disciplinary Counsel shall file a petition under this rule with the Disciplinary Board Clerk. The Adjudicator shall have the authority to act on the matter for the Disciplinary Board. A copy of the petition and declaration shall be served on the attorney or LP as set forth in BR 1.8(a).

(c) Response. Within 7 business days after service of the petition, the attorney or LP may file a response with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, setting forth facts showing that the attorney or LP has responded to the requests or complied with the subpoena, or the reasons why the attorney or LP has not responded or complied. The attorney or LP shall serve a copy of the response upon Disciplinary Counsel pursuant to BR 1.8(b). Disciplinary Counsel may file a reply to any response with the Disciplinary Board Clerk within 2 business days after being served with a copy of the attorney’s or LP’s response and shall serve a copy of the reply on the attorney or LP.

(d) Review by the Disciplinary Board. Upon review, the Adjudicator shall issue an order that either denies the petition or immediately suspends the attorney or LP from the practice of law for an indefinite period. The Adjudicator shall file the order with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, who shall promptly send copies to Disciplinary Counsel and the attorney or LP.

(e) Duties upon Suspension. An attorney or LP suspended from practice under this rule shall comply with the requirements of BR 6.3(a) and (b).

(f) Independent Charges. Suspension of an attorney or LP under this rule is not discipline. Suspension or reinstatement under this rule shall not prevent the SPRB from directing Disciplinary Counsel to file a formal complaint against an attorney or LP alleging a violation of RPC 8.1(a)(2), arising from the failure to respond or comply as alleged in the petition for suspension filed under this rule.

(g) Reinstatement. Subject to BR 8.1(a)(8) and BR 8.2(a)(5), any attorney or LP who has been a member of the Bar or licensed as an LP but suspended under BR 7.1 solely for failure to respond to requests for information or records or to respond to a subpoena shall be reinstated by the Chief Executive Officer to the membership status from which the person was suspended upon the filing of a Compliance Declaration with Disciplinary Counsel as set forth in BR 13.10.

(Rule 7.1 deleted by Order dated October 19, 2009.)
(Rule 7.1 added by Order dated August 12, 2013, effective November 1, 2013.)
(Rule 7.1(a), 7.1(b), 7.1(c), 7.1(d), 7.1(f), and 7.1(g) amended by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)
(Rule 7.1(a) and 7.1(g) amended by Order dated May 22, 2019, effective September 1, 2019.)
Rule 8.1 Reinstatement — Formal Application Required.

(a) Applicants. Any person who has been a member of the Bar, but who has

(1) resigned under Form A of these rules prior to December 1, 2019, more than five years prior to the date of application for reinstatement and who has not been a member of the Bar during such period; or

(2) resigned under Form B of these rules prior to January 1, 1996; or

(3) been disbarred as a result of a disciplinary proceeding commenced by formal complaint before January 1, 1996; or

(4) been suspended for misconduct for a period of more than 6 months; or

(5) been suspended for misconduct for a period of 6 months or less but has remained in a suspended status for a period of more than 6 months prior to the date of application for reinstatement; or

(6) been enrolled voluntarily as an inactive or retired member for more than 5 years; or

(7) been involuntarily transferred to an inactive membership status; or

(8) been suspended for any reason and has remained in that status more than 5 years; or

(9) been in any status other than active, including active pro bono, inactive, resigned, retired, administratively suspended, suspended, or disbarred, for a combined total of more than 5 years prior to the date of application for reinstatement; and who desires to be reinstated as an active member or to resume the practice of law in Oregon shall be reinstated as an active member of the Bar only upon formal application and compliance with the Rules of Procedure in effect at the time of such application. Applicants for reinstatement under this rule must file a completed application with the Bar on a form prepared by the Bar for that purpose. The applicant shall attest that the applicant did not engage in the practice of law except where authorized to do so during the period of the applicant’s inactive or retired status, suspension, disbarment, or resignation. A reinstatement to inactive status is not allowed under this rule. An applicant who has been suspended for a period exceeding 6 months may not apply for reinstatement any earlier than 3 months before the earliest possible expiration of the period specified in the opinion or order imposing suspension.

(b) Required Showing; Effect of Noncooperation.

(1) Each applicant under this rule must show that the applicant has good moral character and general fitness to practice law; that the applicant has reformed since engaging in earlier misconduct, if any; and that the resumption of the practice of law in Oregon by the applicant will not be detrimental to the administration of justice or the public interest. Reformation may be established by evidence, such as:

(i) character evidence from people who know and have had the opportunity to observe the applicant;

(ii) evidence of the applicant’s participation in activities for the public good; (iii) evidence of the applicant’s forthrightness in acknowledging earlier wrongdoing; (iv) evidence of the applicant’s adequate resolution of any previous substance abuse problem; and (v) evidence of the applicant’s willingness to pay restitution to those people harmed by the applicant’s earlier conduct. In determining whether the evidence is sufficient to establish reformation, the Supreme Court must be satisfied that the applicant has reformed in light of the earlier misconduct.

(2) Each applicant has a duty to cooperate and comply with requests from the Bar in its efforts to assess the applicant’s good moral character and general fitness to practice law, including responding to a lawful demand for information; the execution of releases necessary to obtain information and records from third parties whose records reasonably bear upon character and fitness; and reporting promptly any changes, additions or corrections to information provided in the application.

(3) The Chief Executive Officer may refer to the Board any applicant who, during the pendency of a reinstatement application, engages in conduct that would violate RPC 8.1(a) if done by an attorney or LP, with a recommendation that the Board determine that the applicant has not made the showing required by BR 8.1(b) and recommend to the Supreme Court that the application be denied. No applicant shall resume the practice of law in Oregon or active membership status unless all the requirements of this rule are met.

(c) Learning and Ability. In addition to the showing required in BR 8.1(b), each applicant under this rule who has remained in a suspended or resigned status for more than 3 years or has been enrolled voluntarily or involuntarily as an inactive or retired member for more than 5 years must show that the applicant has the requisite learning and ability to practice law in Oregon. The Bar may recommend and the Supreme Court may require as a condition precedent to reinstatement that the applicant take and pass the bar examination administered by the BBX, or successfully complete a prescribed course of continuing legal education. Factors to be considered in determining an applicant’s learning and ability include, but are not limited to: the length of time since the applicant was an active member of the Bar; whether and when the applicant has practiced law in Oregon; whether the applicant practiced law in any jurisdiction during the period of the applicant’s suspension, resignation, inactive, or retired status in Oregon; and whether the applicant has participated in continuing legal education activities during the period of suspension, inactive, or retired status in Oregon.

(d) Fees. In addition to the payments required in BR 8.6, an applicant under this rule shall pay an application fee of $500 at the time the application for reinstatement is filed.

(e) Review by Chief Executive Officer; Referral of Application to Board. Notice of and requests for comment on applications filed under BR 8.1 shall be published on the Bar’s website for a period of 30 days. If, after review of an application filed under BR 8.1 and any information gathered in the investigation of the application, the Chief Executive Officer determines that the applicant has made the showing required by BR 8.1(b), the Chief Executive Officer shall recommend to the Supreme Court, as provided in BR 8.7, that the application be granted, conditionally or unconditionally. If the Chief Executive Officer is unable to determine from a review of an application and any information gathered in the investigation of the application that the applicant has made the showing required by BR 8.1(b), the Chief Executive Officer shall refer the application to the Board for consideration, with notice to the applicant.

(f) Board Consideration of Application. If, after a referral from the Chief Executive Officer, the Board determines from its review of the application and any information gathered in the investigation of the application that the applicant has made the showing required by BR 8.1(b), the Board shall recommend to the Supreme Court, as provided in BR 8.7, that the application be granted, conditionally or unconditionally. If the Board determines that the applicant has not made the showing required by BR 8.1(b), the Board shall recommend to the court that the application be denied.

(g) If either the Chief Executive Officer or the Board recommend to the Supreme Court, under paragraph (e) or (f) of this rule, that the application be granted conditionally or unconditionally, then the court must determine whether the applicant has satisfied the burden of proof set out in BR 8.12. If the court determines that the applicant has not satisfied the burden of proof, the court may deny the application or it may remand to the Chief Executive Officer or the Board, or take any other action that it deems appropriate.

(f) Board Consideration of Application. If, after a referral from the Chief Executive Officer, the Board determines from its review of the informal application and any information gathered in the investigation of the application that the applicant for reinstatement has made the showing required by BR 8.2(b), the Board shall reinstate the applicant. If the Board determines that the applicant has not made the showing required by BR 8.2(b), the Board shall deny the application for reinstatement. The Board also may determine that an application filed under BR 8.2 be granted conditionally. The Board shall file an adverse recommendation or a recommendation of conditional reinstatement with the Supreme Court under BR 8.7.

Answering briefs are not limited to issues addressed in petitions or opening briefs, and may urge the adoption, modification, or rejection in whole or in part of any decision of the trial panel.

(b) Oral Argument. The Oregon Rules of Appellate Procedure relating to oral argument apply in disciplinary and contested reinstatement proceedings.

(Rule 10.5(b) and (c) amended by Order dated July 22, 1991.)
(Rule 10.5(b), 10.5(c), and 10.5(d) amended by Order dated October 19, 2009.)

Rule 10.6 Nature Of Review.

The Supreme Court shall consider each matter de novo upon the record and may adopt, modify, or reject the decision of the trial panel in whole or in part and thereupon enter an appropriate order. If the court’s order adopts the decision of the trial panel without opinion, the opinion of the trial panel shall stand as a statement of the decision of the court in the matter but not as the opinion of the court.

(Rule 10.6 amended by Order dated October 19, 2009.)

Rule 10.7 Costs And Disbursements.

(a) Costs and Disbursements. “Costs and disbursements” are actual and necessary (1) service, filing and witness fees; (2) expenses of reproducing any document used as evidence at a hearing, including perpetuation depositions or other depositions admitted into evidence; (3) expenses of the hearing transcript, including the cost of a copy of the transcript if a copy has been provided by the Bar to a respondent or an applicant without charge; and (4) the expense of preparation of an appellate brief in accordance with ORAP 13.05. Lawyer fees are not recoverable costs and disbursements, either at the hearing or on review. Prevailing party fees are not recoverable by any party.

(b) Allowance of Costs and Disbursements. In any discipline or contested reinstatement proceeding, costs and disbursements as permitted in BR 10.7(a) may be allowed to the prevailing party by the Disciplinary Board or the Supreme Court. A respondent or applicant prevails when the charges against the respondent are dismissed in their entirety or the applicant is unconditionally reinstated to the practice of law in Oregon. The Bar shall be considered to have prevailed in all other cases.
(c) Recovery After Offer of Settlement. A respondent may, at any time up to 14 days prior to hearing, serve upon Disciplinary Counsel an offer to enter into a stipulation for discipline or no contest plea under BR 3.6. In the event the SPRB rejects such an offer, and the matter proceeds to hearing and results in a final decision of the Disciplinary Board or the court imposing a sanction no greater than that to which the respondent was willing to plead no contest or stipulate based on the charges the respondent was willing to concede or admit, the Bar shall not recover, and the respondent shall recover, actual and necessary costs and disbursements as permitted in BR 10.7(a) incurred after the date the SPRB rejected the respondent’s offer.

(d) Procedure for Recovery and Collection. The procedure set forth in the Oregon Rules of Appellate Procedure regarding the filing of cost bills and objections thereto shall apply, except that, in matters involving final decisions of the Disciplinary Board, cost bills and objections thereto shall be resolved by the Adjudicator. The cost bill and objections thereto shall be filed with the Disciplinary Board Clerk, with proof of service on the other party, and shall not be due until 21 days after the date a trial panel’s decision is deemed final under BR 10.1. The procedure for entry of judgments for costs and disbursements as judgment liens shall be as provided in ORS 9.536.

Title 11 — Time Requirements

Rule 11.1 Failure To Meet Time Requirements.

The failure of any person or body to meet any time limitation or requirement in these rules shall not be grounds for the dismissal of any charge or objection, unless a showing is made that the delay substantially prejudiced the ability of the respondent or applicant to receive a fair hearing.

(Rule 11.1 amended by Order dated May 3, 2017, effective January 1, 2018.)

Title 12 — Unlawful Practice of Law Committee

Rule 12.1 Appointment.

The Supreme Court may appoint as many members as it deems necessary to carry out the Unlawful Practice of Law Committee’s functions. At least two members of the Unlawful Practice of Law Committee must be members of the general public, and no more than one-quarter of the Unlawful Practice of Law Committee members may be lawyers engaged in the private practice of law.

Rule 12.2 Investigative Authority.

Pursuant to ORS 9.164, the Unlawful Practice of Law Committee shall investigate on behalf of the Bar complaints of the unlawful practice of law. For purposes of this rule, “unlawful practice of law” means (1) the practice of law in Oregon, as defined by the Supreme Court, by a person who is not an active member of the Bar and is not otherwise authorized by law to practice law in Oregon; or (2) holding oneself out, in any manner, as authorized to practice law in Oregon when not authorized to practice law in Oregon.
Rule 12.3 Public Outreach and Education.

(a) The Unlawful Practice of Law Committee may engage in public outreach to educate the public about the potential harm caused by the unlawful practice of law. The Unlawful Practice of Law Committee may cooperate in its education efforts with federal, state, and local agencies tasked with preventing consumer fraud.

(b) The Unlawful Practice of Law Committee may write informal opinions on questions relating to what activities may constitute the practice of law. Opinions must be approved by the Board before publication. The published opinions are not binding, but are intended only to provide general guidance to lawyers and members of the public about activities that Supreme Court precedent and Oregon law indicate may constitute the unlawful practice of law.

Rule 12.4 Enforcement.

The Bar may petition the Supreme Court to hold a disbarred attorney or LP or an attorney or LP whose resignation pursuant to BR 9.1 has been accepted by the court in contempt for engaging in the unlawful practice of law. The court may order the disbarred or resigned attorney or LP to appear and show cause, if any, why the disbarred or resigned attorney or LP should not be held in contempt of court and sanctioned accordingly.
